DOWNTOWN CHARLEVOIX, CADILLAC AND TWO LOCATIONS IN TRAVERSE CITY

The Old and New

EDITOR'S NOTE: One of Michigan Avenue's famous houses is now listed for sale by SkinndShore Properties, Inc., of Charlevoix. The house, once owned by Julia Scott, Sen. Adlai Stevenson III's great-great aunt, still retains spirit of another era. Edith Gilbert, a Charlevoix freelance writer, captures some of that feeling in a magazine piece she wrote several years ago for the Detroit Free Press. Below are some excerpts from that story.

BY EDITH GILBERT

A Kentucky-born democrat, Julia Scott gained national prestige when she was elected first President General of the D.A.R. (Daughters of the American Revolution) – and what a revolutionary she was!

She served in this office for four years and personally directed the development and construction of the beautiful D.A.R. Memorial Building in Washington D.C.

During World War 1, Mrs. Scott was decorated by the French Ambabassador in Washington at a special ceremony in her honor for her magnificient leadership in war work.

But Washington, D.C. and Bloomington, Ill. were unbearably hot without air-conditioning during the humid summer months and people like Mrs. Scott fled the heat to breathe the pure fresh air of northern Michigan.

Sugar tycoons from as far as New Orleans, industrialists and assorted millionaires from Chicago, St. Louis and Baltimore arrived by boat and train in Charlevoix with their families, servants, pets, briefcases, trunks and - yes, sometimes even mistresses - the latter discreetly stashed away in nearby resort hotels.

During the summer of 1918, when the sidewalk confrontation between Mrs. Scott and the local establishment will take place, World War 1 is drawing to a spectacular close.

The local weekly Charlevoix Courier is urging women to register for national defense and sometimes cautioning them to beware of making dandelion wine because Michigan (under a new set of laws) is now a completely dry state. Truman H. Newberry is running for U.S. Senator from or for Michigan and in a column intitled, "The Weekly Tip," written by the Caddie Master of the Golf Club, he suggests it may be necessary this summer to hire girl caddies!

Long before World War 1, around the turn of the century, nature lover, Julia Scott purchased her secluded summer cottage and named it "The Wilds" in 1905, the street was not paved.

There were no sidewalks and the simple wooden cottage, set back behind a tempting knoll, was hidden from the road by numerous trees and a clutch of raspberry bushes.

As the years rolled by, she enhanced the rustic flavor of "The Wilds" by planting fern shipped from England and it was one of the provisions when the house was sold by her heirs that the English ferns would be retained.

Marshall was a friend of

Decision Monday

Beaver Island Boat Dispute May Be Settled by Next Week

It appears Beaver Island Boat Company will get a three-year-lease to use Charlevoix commercial docks despite earlier protests from a competitive firm.

At Monday night's informal council session, Charlevoix City Councilmen instructed its city attorney to draw up a new lease between the city and the boat company.

The move followed nearly an hour's debate between the Beaver Island Boat Company and Art Reibel's Beaver Island Transit Company, Inc. over possession of Berths A and B of the city docks in Round Lake.

The two companies had been squabbling over whether or not the Beaver Island Boat Company had actually entered into an agreement with the city for a new lease.

"Our position is the same," Attorney John Michael said about his client's bid for the dock.

Michael told the council that the Beaver Island Boat Company had been the only and lowest bidder on the two occasions the city had asked for bids and therefore should be awarded the lease.

Michael also emphasized that one of the requirements for a successful bid was to be able to provide passenger and freight service.

Under the proposed lease, the Beaver Island Boat Company would have use of both berths for $8,100 during the next three years.

The city council is also expected to include a clause that would allow the city to terminate the contract if the boat company refuses to allow other boats to load or unload at the docks when not in use.

Later in his presentation, Michael said he was confused about the present lease agreement for Berth A to the Beaver Island Transit Company because council minutes indicated the lease expired June 1, while copies of the lease said it was until June 30.

The city has been unable to find the original lease that was signed last year.

Reibel, part owner of the Beaver Island Boat Company Transit, Inc., said his company had submitted a bid and it was the highest.

However, Michael said it was given to council 1½ months after the bids were closed.

He said this violates every Michigan law for municipal bidding.

Reibel rebuttaled that the city has an obligation to get the highest hid and that it had not entered into a contractual agreement with the Beaver Island Boat Company.

"How can there be a problem?" asked Councilman Ray Wood after learning that bids were closed on May 6.

He said the Beaver Island Boat Company had submitted the only bid and the council couldn't accept Reibel's bid since it was handed in after the deadline.

Following further argument, Reibel suggested the council forget about bids and consider charging a flat usage fee to any boat on the basis of cargo weight and passengers.

He said he thought the city would get more money that way.

"I think it's about time the city stop subsidizing the Beaver Island Boat Company," he said.

He insisted the tonnage rate system would be far more advantageous to the city.

The council then indicated they might study his proposal, but had the attorney work up a formalized lease agreement with the Beaver Island Boat Company for consideration next Monday.

A New School?

Board Sets Vote

By FRAN MARTIN

The Charlevoix board of education, at a special meeting Monday night, set Sept. 12 as the date to vote on the proposed construction of a new high school.

In other action, the board decided to borrow $325,000 in tax anticipation bonds, turned down a recommendation that administrative rates of pay be established at this time, approved the hiring of three probationary teachers, approved coaching assignments and approved an offer to sell the Building Trades house.

The board voted to set the Sept. 12 date for a special election regarding a bond issue for a new high school after it was explained that the final date that this could be done in order to have the taxes placed on the December tax bill was Sept. 15.

If the first tax monies could be collected this year, before the bonds were actually sold, the school district would stand to save nearly $200,000 in capitalized interest between the sale date and the payment of the bond, Supt. James A. McKimmy said.

In deciding to bring the issue to a vote, the board was following the recommendations of the Citizens Study Committee and the consulting firm of Manson Jackson and Kane of Lansing, both of which have shown that the growth area in the school population is in the upper grades.

George Richards, representing the consulting firm, then outlined the mechanics of preparing for such an election and explained why it was necessary to start at this time for a September election.

Inflation is also pushing the cost of construction to a new high each year, it was explained, so it was decided to vote on the issue now rather than wait.

No figures relating to the proposed construction of a new high school and the remodeling of the existing structure as a Middle School were discussed.

Supt. McKimmy was authorized to complete an application for preliminary qualification of bonds and file the application with the Michigan School bond division.

Approval was given a request to borrow $325,000 in tax anticipation bonds to be dated Aug. 9 when bids will be received. An application will be filed with the Municipal Finance Commission for permission to make the loan.

A recommendation that administrative rates of pay be established on a basis of teacher MA plus 15 hours maximum per diem and the number of days each administrator will work was vetoed by a 5-2 vote.

Max Novak, trustee, said he didn't think the scale suggested told the whole story, that he was not in favor of paying someone more to do less and that since the school district did not have a firm budget at this time, he would vote to table the issue.

His remarks brought applause from the approximately 50 persons in attendance after his recommendation to table the issue was approved by a vote of 5-2.

Probationary contracts were given to three new teachers, Roger Gowell who will teach math and science at the high school and, Thomas Sothard and Mrs. Yvonne Wendt who will teach in the sixth grade of the Middle School.

In other action, the board approved the transfer of monies in the amount of $3,900 plus interest from a Building and Site Land fund to be used toward the May-St. sewer assessment.

–Voted to accept an offer for the purchase of the Building Trades house in Hampton Village in the amount of $37,000 from William Roloff.

--Approved non-certified personnel pay raises for the coming school year. This applies to aides, secretaries, bus drivers and cafeteria personnel.

Sheriff Contract Settled

By FRAN MARTIN

The Charlevoix county Sheriff's Deputies, have entered into their first union contract with the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners, it was revealed Monday.

The contract was signed June 13 and is retro-active to Jan. 1, 1974.

In the package are wage increases, regular work periods and numerous fringe benefits including paid vacations after one year with the department, Blue Cross Blue Shield hospitalization for the employees and dependents and other benefits.

Paul Gulley of Detroit, representing Teamsters Local 214, said he felt the men would benefit greatly as a result of the bargaining, adding that everyone associated with the department, from the sheriff on down, stands to benefit from the new contract, the first for Charlevoix County Sheriff's deputies.

Deputies will receive wage hikes depending on their years with the department. This will start with a $1,000 a year increase or $7,500 to $8,500 for a deputy with one year in the department; dispatchers and non-certified personnel will receive $7,500 and there will be a regular eight-hour work days including a meal period.

A regular work week will be five consecutive eight-hour days on with two consecutive days off. A deputy will receive time and a half in excess of the eight-hour day and 40 hour work week.

Vacations will range from five working days for the first year to 10 for two years, 15 days for five years, 20 days for 10 years and one day per year to a maximum of 30 days for 11 or more years.

The county will pick up the full tab for hospital insurance for the employee and his or her dependents. Until Jan. 1 of this year only the employee's insurance was paid.

Six deputies including one marine deputy, two special deputies and five non-certified personnel including the dispatcher and dog warden are included in the contract.

Help Wanted

Charlevoix Chairman Mrs. Albert Seger says she hopes the community will still take advantage of making a contribution or memorial before they officially have to close the books in September.

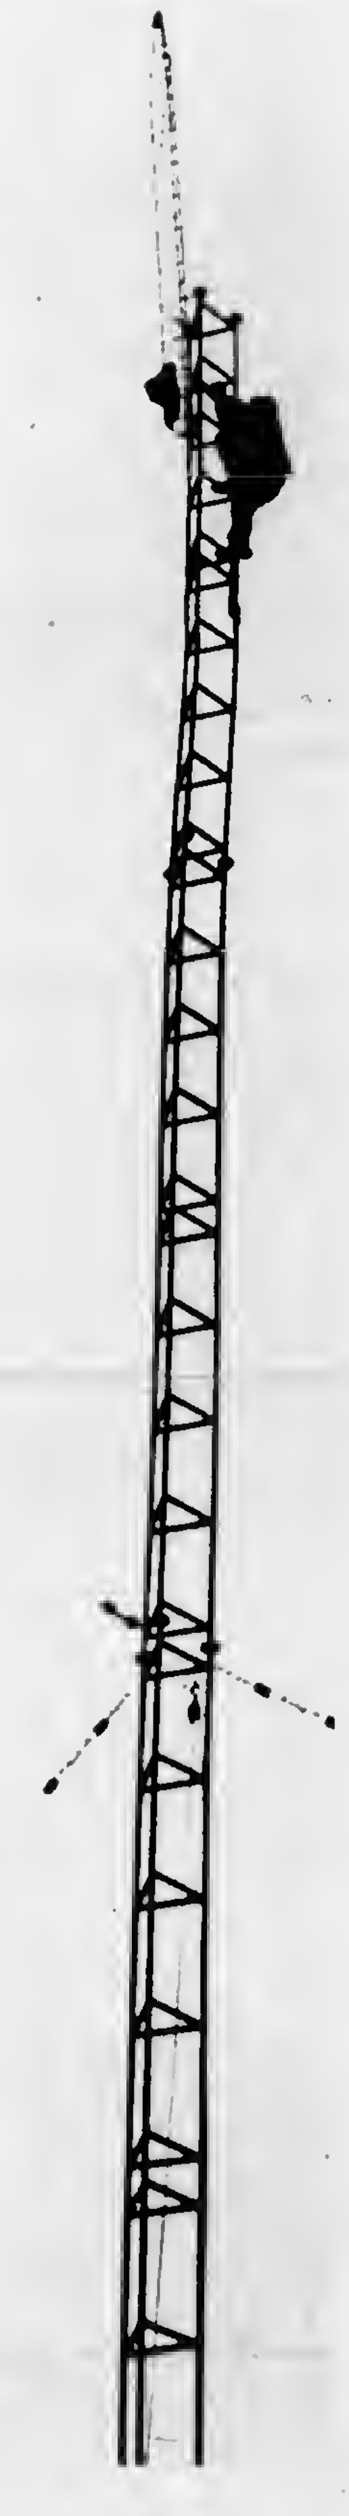
The money collected by over 130 residents knocking on doors goes towards the disease that is characterized by abnormal growth and spread of cells that if not controlled will take a person's life.

There are some 1,500,000 living Americans cured of cancer today from work done by the American Cancer Society.

This year about 355,000 will die of the disease, which is about 975 persons a day.

About 109,000 cancer patients will probably die in 1974 who might have been saved by earlier and better treatment.

Contributions may be given to either Mrs. Seger or Mrs. Dorothy Dixon at First State Bank of Charlevoix.



High Up?

Bergmann Takes Fishing Contest

Eugene Bergmann of Charlevoix was the winner in last week's Chamber of Commerce-sponsored fishing contest which offers weekly prizes for lake trout and steel head.

Bergmann's prize winning watch, taken off Bell's Bay in Lake Michigan, was a 16 pound seven ounce lake trout. His weekly prize was a Shakespeare free spool casting reel Model 1975 whose retail value is $44.00.

There were no entries in the steelhead category last week, according to Vincent Olach, secretary-manager of the Chamber of Commerce.

Five season tickets were sold this week, bringing the overall total to 47 for the season, Olach said.

The contest, which will offer a seasonal cash prize of $500 for the largest lake trout and $450 for the biggest steelhead started June 2 and will continue through Nov. 15 with prizes of merchandise being awarded weekly for the best catch in each category.

Over 400 Sites

Enjoy Camping

By Peg Ohle

If you enjoy sleeping under the stars and are willing to take bad weather with good, then camping is for you.

In Charlevoix County, there are over 400 public campsites, ranging from the rustic state forest campgrounds operated by the Forestry Division of the Department of Natural Resources, to the more elaborate facilities of Young State Park, which is under the Parks Division of the D.N.R.., and Whiting Park, operated by Charlevoix County.

Bell's Bay Campground, south of Charlevoix on Lake Michigan, is a state forest campground. It has 40 campsites and provides trash pickup, water from pumps, and pit toilets. There is 40-hour a week night-time surveillance Thursday through Monday.

Camping is free at Bell's Bay, but campers must register upon arrival. There are no reservations.

The Beaver Island Campground, south of St. James, is also a state forest campground. It has 20 campsites and provides the same facilities as Bell's Bell but there is no nighttime surveillance.

Young State Park, between Boyne City and Charlevoix on Lake Charlevoix, has room for 300 camping units, but 20 of them are not now being used because of high lake water.

Facilities at Young State Park include electricity, flush toilets, trash disposal, and nighttime patrol. It costs $3.00 a night to camp at the park plus the price of a vehicle sticker.

Half of the campsites of Young State Park, and other state parks, are available for reservations, which must be received by the park at least three weeks prior to the beginning of the desired camping period.

At Whiting Park, Charlevoix County provides 45 campsites. It is located on the south shore of Lake Charlevoix near Boyne City. Camping fees are $2.00 a night and there is a new $52,000 recreational building.

In addition to the above places designated as campsites, the Department of Natural Resources permits camping on any state owned land that is not posted against camping. Permits for this use may be obtained from any D.N.R. office, or from State Police Headquarters.

How many campers use the facilities in Charlevoix County? Last year, 4,495 campers used Bell's Bay for 18,505 camping days; 578 used Beaver Island for 2,569 camping days; 21,908 used Young State Park for 93,088 camping days; and 1,283 used Whiting Park for 4,420 camping days.

That all adds up to 28,264 campers sleeping under the stars and enjoying the rain or shine for 118,582 nights and days, including a few possible duplications. It does not include the thousands of persons who used campsites for a day or part of a day to picnic, swim, fish, sun, look for rocks, or hunt mushrooms.

The increased used of campgrounds, coupled with the lack of consideration many persons show toward others, is causing trouble in some areas. Four of the state's 146 state forest campgrounds now charge a daily fee of $1.50 to help pay the cost of a patrolman to enforce camp rules. There are regulations governing excessive noise, disorderly conduct, use of off-the-road vehicles, and other nuisances.

According to Bill Mittig, local state forester, Bell's Bay will soon be added to the list of campgrounds charging a fee because it has already become necessary to patrol the camp at least part of the time.

At the last meeting of the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners, Ed Redman, secretary of the county Parks and Recreation Commission, told of the vandalism at Whiting Park which necessitated closing one access road and increasing surveillance.

Of interest to Charlevoixans is the fact that land for Young State Park was given to the state many years ago by the Young family of Charlevoix.

CHARLEVOIX'S EAST Park got some new four-year-old Rainbow Trout from the Department of Natural Resources' Oden Fish Hatchery last week for the park pond.

Farming By Computer

There is a "brain" in Ann Arbor which can now solve many problems faced by farmers in Charlevoix County.

It is a computer telephone setup between the county Cooperative Extension Service and the University of Michigan. Operated by touch keys, specific figures involving the problem are relayed to the computer center by Extension Agent Ed Rebman and within minutes an answer is returned.

To date, only 25 or 30 problems can be programmed into the computer, but they cover six different categories, and more will be added from time to time.

Problem categories include Crops and Soils, Livestock, Dairy, Horticulture, Crops and Soils, and General.

For instance, a farmer wants to know what feeds to give his cows for best production at least cost. Figures covering types of feeds available, market price of those feeds, cow size, production record of the cow, and other pertinent facts are fed into the computer. Quick "figuring" may show that by a slight change in amount or kind of feed, the cost of each pound of milk could be reduced enough to show considerable savings during the course of a year.

There are programs to determine the income possibilities for crops and livestock, the impact of nitrogen on corn yields and profits, silo capacity-cost analysis, spray compatability, loan refinance and evaluation, income tax management, and many others.

The only cost to the farmer is for the telephone call to Ann Arbor, which averages between $5.00 and $10.00.

In Gaylord

Hearing For Aging Funds

Northwest Michigan senior citizens and others will be given an opportunity this month to voice their views on Michigan's first state plan for services to the aging.

Ronald Crummel, in charge of aging plans and projects for Northwest Michigan Planning and Development Services, Inc., said a public hearing will be conducted Friday, June 28, in Gaylord to receive comments from the northern Lower Peninsula before the state plan is submitted to federal authorities.

After June 14 summaries of the proposed state plan for fiscal year 1974-75 will be available to be read at the public offices of counties and other communities served by commissions on aging.

A copy of the entire document will be available to read at the office of the Northwest Michigan Regional Planning and Development Commission, 120 W. State St., Traverse City.

Northwest Michigan Services, Inc., the service-delivery arm of the regional planning and development agency, recently completed a preliminary draft plan for services to the aging in the counties of Antrim, Benzie, Charlevoix, Emmet, Grand Traverse, Kalkaska, Leelanau, Missaukee, Manistee and Wexford.

Crummel encouraged persons to inform themselves about the state and regional plans in advance of the hearing.

The Gaylord hearing will be conducted at the Chalet Inn, 1070 W. Main St., located at exit 32 of the I-75 freeway. Registration will be at 8:30 a.m. and the hearing will be from 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Persons may come and go at any time, however, and need not register to speak.

Similar hearings will be held between June 26 and 29 in Detroit, Kalamazoo and Iron Mountain.

County PEP Programs Die

From October, 1971 to the closing date, Charlevoix County received $329,853 in federal funds through the P.E.P. program to provide transitional employment and training in the public sector for those who were unemployed, veterans, disadvantaged, and or underemployed.

In all, 36 persons were employed under the program, and in addition a summer youth program was operated under P.E.P. last year.

Agencies which employed the 36 persons contributed $69,946.19 to the program in wages, benefits and training, bringing the total amount spent to $399,742.27.

WHITING PARK is the only county park in Charlevoix County. However there are also a lot of state campgrounds and forest areas to take advantage of for summer fun.

Democrats Rally

Sunday was a day for young politicians in Boyne City.

A majority of the candidates who appeared at the Charlevoix-Emmet County Democratic party picnic were under forty. They challenged their senior opponents, both Democratic and Republican, with their own enthusiasm and energy.

As far as could be determined, only three candidates for local office were there.

County commissioner candidates Karl Waldner, John Vrondran, and Marty Paul, chairman of the Democratic party in Charlevoix County, attended.

In all, about 200 persons came and went during the afternoon.

Forty-five year old Jerome Cavanagh, former mayor of Detroit who is seeking nomination for governor, looked fit after his recent operation.

He decried the fact that Michigan has the highest crime rate in the country.

He also noted that although Michigan is the fifth wealthiest state in the amount of money paid into Washington, it is the 50th in the amount of per capita contribution returned.

Cavanagh said that Governor Milliken's administration was a "silent" one, that a "governor has to act, lead, even when politically harmful".

Two Democrats seeking nomination for the United States Congress in the 11th District, the post now held by Phillip Ruppe, asked for support.

Frank Broniilleter, 42, of Iron Mountain said, "The only way to send a message to Washington is to send a new messenger".

Paul Knudson of Negaunee, who is in his 30's, specifically mentioned proper land use and high fuel prices as priorities. He said he would "return home and get the thinking of the people before voting on any important issue in Washington.

Prentiss Brown, 3rd, of St. Ignace, in his late 20's, who seeks the seat in the 37th state senatorial district now held by Robert Davis, stressed the importance of working at the job.

Brown is a third generation member of a family long prominent in Michigan politics.

Three candidates for the Democratic nomination as state representative from the 106th congressional district told how they could best represent the district. The eastern part of Charlevoix County is part of the 106th district.

Fay Lee of Onaway; Michael Barnett, 30, of Alpena; and James Conroy, a young lawyer from Cheboygan asked for support in the 106th district.

Four candidates for the State Board of Education presented their qualifications, noting that "out state" was not represented on the board.

Youthful Roger Tilles of Flint, who has worked for the Board of Education as a lawyer, said it was a "rubber stamp for Milliken's budget requests".

John Watanen, Jr., 37, of Marquette, who teaches at Northern Michigan University, asked that as a "well qualified teacher and hard-working longtime Democrat" he be nominated for the state post.

Dr. Gladys Beckwith, an associate professor at Michigan State University, said that the State Board of Education could be an important policy making board. She also objected to sexism in education.

Murel Burdick of Fruitport stressed his long career as a teacher, principal and superintendent in asking for the school board nomination.

Tom Roach and David Olmstead, both of Detroit, who are candidates for membership on the University of Michigan Board of Regents, asked for party support. Olmstead, who is 36, told of working his way through the university in the 1960's on a scholarship. He said he owes the university much and wants to repay it.

Charles "Tony" Duerr, former Charlevoix Resident who now practices law in Ypsilanti, was master of ceremonies at the picnic. Other Charlevoix County residents who helped were Janis Dietrich, Ironton, in charge of membership and ticket sales; Fran Martin, Charlevoix, and Jean Rosewig, Walloon Lake, food purchasing; Clem Wagner, Charlevoix, serving refreshments; Margaret Duerr, Charlevoix, welcoming committee; and Don and Joan Gim, Boyne Falls, children's entertainment.

Added Gun Sentences Could Help

A Senate bill which proposes to slap an additional and mandatory five year sentence on persons convicted of felonies in which a gun is used is not a cure-all for violent crimes.

But in some respects it may be more realistic than the many and usually ill-fated handgun control proposals which keep popping up and going nowhere. Many handgun proposals have been made in the Legislature through the years and all have failed. Congress steadfastly refuses to budge on the issue.

Some time ago a group of Detroit citizens started a petition campaign to put on the ballot a constitutional amendment to ban the private ownership of handguns in Michigan. Interestingly, the proposal is being opposed by Mayor Coleman Young of Detroit and it has been sharply criticized by the State Police Director John Plants.

Plants called the gun ban amendment unrealistic because it won't affect criminal gun toters and it might make more good citizens criminals because many will not give up their guns if they can help it.

Col. Plants noted awhile back that police have a tough time as it is, under existing gun laws, because of tight search and seizure rulings by the courts. These make convictions difficult on illegal handgun possession charges. He called for an amendment to the U.S. Constitution which would make it possible for police to seize illegal handguns and make convictions stick.

It is also probable that a constitutional handgun ban in Michigan by itself would be ineffective, unless there is uniform law in all states on the subject. Only Congress can bring that about and congressmen show little inclination to do so.

A tougher penalty for gun connected felonies is at least a reasonable interim step insofar as it applies to habitual criminals. We hope the Senate bill will receive approval in the House and become law. Since it carries a mandatory sentence, it will also help some overly lenient judges get tough.

Unneeded Help

In calling attention to federal foot-dragging in providing more aid to institutions of higher education last week, Michigan State University President Clifton Wharton also had some strong words for the U.S. Veterans Administration.

Noting many complaints about VA mishandling of benefits going to student veterans, he said the federal agency wants to place three full-time officers on campus to help get the problems straightened out. This, he said, would cost the university about $10,500 to provide the necessary office space.

Wharton said MSU has its own veterans program which needs only one staffer. What it does not need is to incur the costs of three additional bureaucrats trying to correct errors which should have been taken care of in Washington.

Jerry Skippergosh

Jerry Skippergosh is a special individual who set his goals high. He has achieved thses goals despite many personal problems. His athletic talents are only overshadowed by his warm smile and modest personality.

We congratulate Skippergosh for his high school accomplishments. But more important, we hope Skippergosh will continue to set high standards for himself throughout his adult life.

Letters to the editor

A Youth's Viewpoint

Dear News Staff:

As a teacher at St. Mary's School, I have greatly enjoyed reading many pieces of children's writing this past year. Perhaps the most delightful selection is the one I've enclosed here. I found it so enjoyable that I thought maybe by sharing it with you I could make the whole city of Charlevoix smile. (I know I did.)

I'm sure that your teachers asked you (at least one fall in your life) to write about all the things you did during the summer. This year, I thought it would be fun for my class to write about all their plans for the upcoming summer. In this way each child could express not only his true plans but his fantasies as well.

In this selection, if we can see past the grammatical and structural errors and into the real thoughts in Don's head, we can actually visualize his very move.

Hope you enjoy this as much as I did!

Thank you,

Karen Buckel

This Summer

This Summer I am going to swim in our swimming pool. Going to go down south and up north. Read and play ball, and watch t.v. Take trips on my bike and mow lawns. I will go to the dentist and make cookies. Go to movies and go boating. Go exersizing and fight with my brothers. I will go on a retreat for a couple of days. I will go horse back riding and drive the tractor. Have birthdays and sleep. Go to band practice on a train and plane. Go on dates and campout. Work and play swear and cry. I will sleep, eat, drink and stay home. Play army, go fishing and run around. I am going to do crossword puzzles and search words. Walk and jog around my yard and rest. Buy things and whistle while looking for a job. Sing glad and sad songs. Pray and go to confession all summer long with my family.

Clockwise

By BOB CLOCK

Trying to redecorate a 15-room house with four kids and two dogs underfoot is something like attempting to make a bed with someone still in it. It can't be done.

The problem is getting a job done before it is completely destroyed and has to be done again.

Judy and I have been working on the house for six weeks–day and night–and I have painted the same walls three times.

"What we need," I told Judy the other day, "is a full-time decorator, in residence. He could work eight hours a day, year-'round, and always find something to keep him busy."

Judy, who has been matching me hour for hour and then some, heartily concurred.

Paint is the big problem. Pick up a paint brush and I guarantee you a packed gallery. The girls are intrigued by colors and they stand around like kids at a candy counter wondering what new shade is going to emerge next from the can. After I take a few swipes, they all want to try their hand at it.

Danny also is interested in paint, only for cosmetic purposes. He wants to see how it will look on his nose, ears, checks and eyebrow. In fact he has become so fascinated by paint that he has learned to open paint cans by himself when nobody is looking. I have used my entire summer's supply of lawnmower fuel cleaning him up..

Ladders are another attractive nuisance that go hand-in-glove with redecorating. Everytime I set up a ladder there's a kid on the top in two seconds ready to fall off and break his collarbone.

I have learned that whenever I am about to back down a step ladder I must give ample warning with all kinds of hoots and hollers because invariably there's a kid right behind me waiting to get his fingers tromped on.

When we painted the staircase, I had to share the high scaffolding with four kids who scurried around on all sides of me like squirrels on a telephone wire. My knees were like rubber working at such great heights, but the children were absolutely fearless. That was the one time that I felt like handing each of them a paint brush while I went downtown for a beer.

Now you'd think a dog would have enough sense to know when a floor is freshly varnished, wouldn't you? I mean they see me working very carefully across the floor with a paint brush and they know the room doesn't smell like it used to. They've got eyes in their heads to tell them that something pretty drastic has happened to the floor and they should keep off.

But they don't. Barricades are useless. You can't close doors because kids believe doors are meant to be opened. And before you know it there are paw prints all through the fresh varnish.

The dining room floor really gave me the willies, because I wanted it flawless. The kids and the dogs all had orders to stay outside for eight hours, although it was raining and snowing a little that day, as I recall. I locked the french doors between the dining room and living room and put a ladder sideways across the door to the kitchen. The front door was locked and bolted.

I was feeling pretty smug about all my precautions when I glanced into the dining room and saw our big furry Keeshond, Holly, slipping and sliding across the wet varnish. The kids had let her in through the side porch.

I'll have to admit I got pretty emotional and let out a deleted expletive that drew Holly's undivided attention. But she wasn't about to come trotting into my arms because there was fire in my eye. And she knew I wasn't going to come running after her.

With a sinking feeling I watched her amble over to the front door–securely bolted from the inside–and stretch out on the wet varnish.

I found Judy in the sewing room.

Judy made a non-commital sound as she hemmed a curtain.

"Well, we're going to have one

Editor
Charlevoix Courier
Charlevoix, Mich.

Dear Editor:

I wish to clarify a statement made in last week's Courier regarding my candidacy for County Commissioner for the 10th District. By implication, at least that is the way the article was written, the reporter said, that I, along with Karl Waldner and several others, was running as a Democrat for the sake of expediency.

In my case nothing could be further from the truth. I am chairperson of the Charlevoix County Democrats, and believe the Democratic party is the party of, by, and for the people.

It has a message and a viewpoint much needed in this day of special interests and big business politics of the opposing party, which has long dominated not only our national politics but our local politics as well.

Democratically yours

Stumping the Woods

...With Ollie O. Stump jr.

A visionary with the shopping cart in mind coined the phrase 'wheels of progress.

No one but a dreamer, patronizing that grocery of fifty years ago, could eye the stock of bananas, hanging above a bushel of peaches, and visualize the produce section of a modern supermarket claiming an area the size of that entire horse and buggy operation.

Competition was fiercer in those days with grocers competing with their customers as well as with one another.

A shopping cart in that village market would have been ridiculous but so would four aisles, the length of East Park, offering canned vegetables and fruits to a gardening housewife budgeting her meager funds for canning jars, covers, seal rings and paraffin.

Equally preposterous would be a long avenue of imitation flavored jams and jellies to a mother who could herd her brood into the woods to pick the real thing free when berries were in season; or a double lane of soaps and detergents to one who buys P&G or Phels-Naptha by the case at four cents a bar.

A barrel of mixed pickles, with a glass dipper hooked over the rim, added an exotic touch to the family diet. A bag of flour which became a dish towel, a bag of salt and sugar which became a handkerchief or a dolls wardrobe, and a bottle of vanilla extract represented a half block of cake mixes, the bakery department and 75 percent of the frozen food display of todays chain store.

Consulting her shopping list, written on a envelope postmarked Seattle and bearing a three cent stamp, the housewife would complain to the butcher about ground round being ten cents a pound.

In those days when suet was donated as boot grease, the display case pre-empted less space than the managers office does today.

The butcher smoothed ruffled feathers by offering the customer a generous sample of tangy cheese or a slice of spicy liverwurst between two giantsoda crackers while making selections.

Choice was limited by the unschooled meat carvers to hamburger, roasts, steaks, chops and stew meat; an entirely adequate selection for women who could 'draw' a chicken as well as the wood and water to prepare it with.

Strangely enough the checkout stand was larger than those mechanized belts which now expedite our spending. This was due to the prevailing Master-Charge credit system.

Every neccessity, in many cases, was charged to the master of the house and duly recorded alphabetically beneath a spring clip in a large black file of layered trays.

Each child in tow received some candy or licorice from the cashier who knew them by their first names. Making us kids feel of importance generated business from one generation to the next. Cheerfully, they gave a priceless item; one which can neither be stocked on the sheives nor bought or sold— a friendly smile.

Be Prepared? Not Me

By JIM FITZGERALD

The Boy Scout scandal prompts me to proverbing:

The higher you fly, the bigger grease spot you make when your parachute doesn't open.

Or: The purer you aspire, the more heads you turn when you suffer an attack of gas.

I could open a lot more Confucius cookies but that's enough wisdom for now. You get the idea: When a truck driver murders his unfaithful wife, it is back-page stuff. But when a U.S. Senator clangs on a love triangle, Walter Conkite is there before the body stops twanging.

The point of all this is really more of a hope. Perhaps now my mother will finally forgive me for quitting the Boy Scouts 35 years ago, before I even made Tenderfoot. I knew what I was doing. I was seeking the security of obscurity rather than risking the possible shame of fame.

Everybody read about the Boy Scouts last week. Their top leaders were caught cheating and the nation gasped. It was as though quintuplets were born to the President of the Planned Parenthood League.

Some Boy Scout leaders borrowed a trick from politicians who dig votes out of cemeteries. Paper scouts were created to meet membership quotas, impress the brass at national headquarters, and qualify for a bigger allotment of sticks to rub together.

Only if you're a Boy Scout.

Get the idea, Mother? Your son, like a lot of sons, has always been leery of lofty goals.

Boy Scouts must pledge to keep themselves "physically strong, mentally awake and morally straight." For me, it is a weary thing to even think of keeping such a ramrod pledge. I was always a skinny kid who fell asleep reading dirty books.

But what if I had stuck it out and slept in the woods and sung by the fire and earned all those badges? What if I'd become a leader? What would I be doing today? I'd be sharing the shame of all Scouts who now must prove they don't say "HERE" 6 times when the membership roll is called.

I've done a lot worse things than multiply when I should have subtracted. But who cares? Nobody ever expected much of me anyway. That's the way I planned it. I lived my formative years so as to make my adult years look good by comparison. My family and childhood companions have to be proudly surprised at anything I accomplish outside the occupational therapy room at the state penitentiary.

There will be none of those screaming "Ex-Eagle-Scout-Robs-Bank" headlines about me. If my misdeeds are recorded at all, it will be in my school alumni newsletter under "Class prophecies fulfilled."

Which is not to say I have grown-up to be an all-bad person. The truth is, I sometimes do good deeds today to make up for all those yesterdays.

My mission this week is to rescue all those little old ladies stranded on curbs by mythical Boy Scouts.

Meet Charlevoix

Meet Curt Kipke

Now that we're about to swing into things for summer, the Courier decided it would be a good time to ask the city recreation director what's in store for the warm days ahead.

Curt Kipke graduated from Central Michigan University in 1968. He has a bachelor's degree in Fine Arts with a major in industrial education and a minor in recreation.

After graduation in 1968 and spending two years in the service, Kipke worked in Colorado for a year before returning to Michigan to work as a recreation supervisor in Grand Rapids.

He is married and has one child.

COURIER: Could you tell us about the City's Summer Camp Program that is about to start?

KIPKE: We are signing up on the 20th and the 21st which will be over with by the time it gets in the paper. We are offering a day camp for kids 7 through 14. The camp will be run by Hal Evans. At the camp, the kids will come at 9:30 in the morning and stay until 4 in the afternoon. They will come everyday for a week; and at the camp, they will learn different things about the out-of-doors, nature, craft, flowers, animals, plants, hiking, cooking, how to setup a camp, several things - be able to do a little swimming and have some organized games.

COURIER: Is it a very expensive program?

KIPKE: It will cost the camper $15.00 per week which includes their lunch and it includes all their activities. We have had some things donated, some camping equipment donated so it averages out about $3.00 a day which is quite reasonable I think.

COURIER: We have heard rumors that the Ferry Avenue Beach will be closed this summer, it this true?

KIPKE: No, the Ferry Avenue Beach will be open. The dock at Ferry Avenue Beach will be closed because it is an unsafe situation, and we feel that anybody that uses the dock is using it at their own risk with the possibility of getting injured.

COURIER: What will be the beaches that will be open this summer and their hours?

KIPKE: The beaches that will be open are Ferry Beach from 12-6 daily seven days a week. Michigan Beach which will be open from 10-6 Monday through Saturday and from 12-6 on Sunday. Depot Beach will be open from 10-6 Monday through Saturday and 12-6 on Sunday.

COURIER: What is in store for the summer softball program which is already underway?

KIPKE: Well, let me take care of the adults first. The men will be playing a 20-game schedule and we are having a tournament over the 5th, 6th, and 7th of July which is an invitational tournament with teams coming from Big Rapids, Rogers City, Traverse City, Petoskey, and I think we've got one coming from the east side of the state Alpena or around there some place. One from Manton. The women play a 20-game schedule, and we hope to have an invitational tournament for them later on in the year. For the younger people, we have 7-10 year old t-ball softball for both boys and girls, that's new this year for girls.

COURIER: We understand you've had a problem with getting coaches for the youngsters?

KIPKE: Right. Getting coaches for the kids is a problem every year. Mainly because people who are interested in softball are playing, and they feel that they haven't got the time.

COURIER: What will happen to the program if you don't get enough coaches?

KIPKE: Well, if we can't get coaches, we will have to figure out some way to run without coaches or else we will just have to forget the program. It's a good program, the kids like it and hopefully we will get coaches.

COURIER: Do you have any other special programs in mind for the summer?

KIPKE: We have art classes this summer which will be art in the parks for the adults, and the younger people right now are going 14 and over and hopefully later on in the year we will be able to get a little younger group. They will do sketching and painting and drawing in the parks, a different park each night. They will meet once a week for six weeks. We have, of course, the day camp and the softball. We have swimming which will be starting July 8th. These are lessons for anybody 5 years of age and over. These will be held at Depot Beach daily during the week. We have a tennis tournament coming up the 29th and 30th for the adults and the 24th and 25th for the kids. We plan on having tennis lessons starting in July. We have golf lessons starting the 24th for kids 8 years and over and that also goes for the tennis. This also includes adults in both golf and tennis. We will be having a track and field event later on in July for the kids with a lot of ribbons and awards going out. We will have another tennis tournament in August - an open tournament for anybody. This tournament coming up is just for Charlevoix people. What else? We have got so much going on, I forget.

COURIER: We also understand that there has been a problem with a lot of trash and litter at some of the city parks.

KIPKE: Right. It's not unique to Charlevoix, every city has that problem. What we try to ask is that the people using the parks use the litter barrels. It is not that difficult to take

Summer Camp Program

The Charlevoix Recreation Department will offer a Summer Day Camp Experience designed to reintroduce students with the outdoors, to give students a working knowledge as well as an appreciation for the world around them, and by this awareness also learn something about themselves.

Students will sign up for a week at a time and during that week meet daily at the Mt. McSauba area beginning at 9:30 a.m. in the morning and staying there through lunch until 4:00 p.m. in the afternoon. Each day the students will be experiencing something different. The following is an outline of the weekly activities.

MONDAY

COMMON COUNCIL

June 17, 1974
8:00 P.M.

The Common Council of the City of Charlevoix met on the above date and time with Mayor Hansen presiding. Aldermen present: Timms, Alderwoman Wallace, Ald. Wood, McRae, Plumm and Selph. Absent: None.

The minutes of the June 3, 1974 regular meeting were approved as presented in writing and as recorded in the Council Minute Book.

Attorney Stedman was present on behalf of Mr. Arthur Reibel stating the Beaver Island Transit, Inc., would like to submit their bid for berth "A" and "B", and asked Council to vote on whether the bid will still be accepted. The matter was referred to the Docks and Harbor Committee meeting to be held Monday evening, June 27, 1974.

Alvin Ranger explained that the new Airport Ordinance had been reviewed by Joe McPhillips and Attorney Berlage. The city had been cited by the FAA for having an ordinance with certain deficiencies. He further explained the necessity to place the city in a state of compliance and adopt this ordinance to receive federal funds for improvements. The ordinance was referred to the Airport Committee for further study and evaluation; meeting to be held June 24, 1974.

Bill Supernaw expressed the gratitude of the Chamber of Commerce to the city for its participation in behalf of the Golf Tournament.

Mr. H.J. Kaufman inquired where the city stands in regard to its study of the Stover Road sewer extension and was informed that an estimate has been given the city by G & T Construction of $31,738.45, plus an estimated $5000 added by the city for general engineering and contingencies. He complained of the condition of May Street, and was told that the contractor expects to start laying base gravel this week.

A letter from Leonard Dubey was referred to the Utility Committee; meeting to be held Wednesday, June 19, 1974 at 7:30 p.m. Mr. Dubey was requested to be at the meeting.

Alderwoman Wallace offered the following resolution and moved its adoption, supported by Alderman Plumm. BE IT HEREBY RESOLVED THAT the Council accept the Uniformed Employees Working Agreement, for the period 1974-77 between the City of Charlevoix and the Communications Workers of America, AFL-CIO; and that the Mayor and Clerk be authorized to sign on behalf of the City. Resolution adopted by the following yea and nay vote. Yeas: Alderman Timms, Alderwoman Wallace, Ald. Wood, McRae, Plumm and Selph. Nays: None. Absent: None.

Alderman McRae offered the following resolution and moved its adoption, supported by Alderman Timms. BE IT HEREBY RESOLVED THAT the City renew the fire and ambulance contracts with Hayes Township and Norwood Township, which have been signed by them and that the Mayor and Clerk be authorized to sign said contracts on behalf of the City of Charlevoix. The resolution was adopted by the following yea and nay vote. Yeas: Alderman Timms, Alderwoman Wallace, Ald. Wood, McRae, Plumm and Selph. Nays: None. Absent: None.

Alderman Timms offered the following resolution and moved its adoption, supported by Ald. Plumm. RESOLUTION authorizing the establishment of an account fund to be known as the "General Long Term Debt Group of Accounts" as set forth in the Uniform Accounting Procedures Manual pursuant to Act 2 of the Public Acts of 1968. Such fund to be used for a self-balancing group of accounts which is to record and fairly present a governmental unit's ability for long-term debt (at any time from date of issuance until the debt is finally retired). The resolution was adopted by the following yea and nay vote. Yeas: Alderman Timms, Alderwoman Wallace, Ald. Wood, McRae, Plumm and Selph. Nays: None. Absent: None.

Motion was made by Alderwoman Wallace and supported by Ald. McRae that a Special meeting be held Monday, June 24, at 7:30 p.m. for the purpose of adopting a resolution designating a Maintenance Superintendent on sections of State Trunkline Highway. Motion adopted by the following yea and nay vote. Yeas: Ald. Timms, Alderwoman Wallace, Ald. Wood, McRae, Plumm and Selph. Nays: None. Absent: None.

Mr. Wexstaff, reported that Cities Service has taken ladders down from their storage tanks and fences are being repaired.

Ald. McRae requested that a special committee be formed of one council member from each ward to set up a job description and guide lines for hiring a qualified and experienced city administrator. He recommended Alderwoman Wallace, Ald. Plumm and McRae. The Mayor directed Ald. McRae to call a meeting of his committee.

Alderman McRae requested that a citizens committee be formed to study the city charter and determine if there might be any advantages in a change in city government. He suggested interested retired citizens might be used to form a committee for such a study. No action was taken.

Council discussed a request by the owner of Tres Bon restaurant for a proposed awning over the sidewalk. Mr. Wexstaff was instructed to return the request to the owner, asking him to submit another design. Mr. Adams, the owner, appeared at this time and after hearing Council's reasons for not accepting his proposal, withdrew the request and decided to put up a sign.

Alderman McRae offered the following resolution and moved its adoption, supported by Alderwoman Wallace. RESOLUTION: That the request from Tres Bon, Inc., for new 10 months Resort Class C. License to be located at 217 Bridge Street, Charlevoix, Charlevoix County, considered for approval. The resolution was adopted by the following yea and nay vote. Yeas: Alderman Timms, Alderwoman Wallace, Ald. Wood, McRae, Plumm and Selph. Nays: None. Absent: None.

Alderwoman Wallace offered the following resolution and moved its adoption, supported by Alderman McRae. BE IT HEREBY RESOLVED THAT the Common Council of the City of Charlevoix accept the offer of Settlement Agreement of Consumers Power Company, according to Docket No. E-7803 at approximately eleven (11) percent with settlement rates to be placed in effect as of June 7, 1973. The resolution was adopted by the following yea and nay vote. Yeas: Alderman Timms, Alderwoman Wallace, Ald. Wood, McRae, Plumm and Selph. Nays: None. Absent: None.

The sewer extension on Stover Road was discussed. Ald. McRae stated that the township was willing to pay 75 percent of the cost. Attorney Berlage advised Council that a written release of the $16,000 which G & T Construction claimed was due them, due to the rise in prices on the May Street sewer project, should be obtained before the city enters into any agreement on the Stover Road Project.

Motion was made by Alderman Timms and supported by Alderman Selph that Council authorize the Acting City Administrator to apply for a permit from the Health Department for a sewer extension on Stover Road, 900 feet east of May Street, in conjunction with Charlevoix Township. The motion was adopted by the following yea and nay vote. Yeas: Alderman Timms, Alderwoman Wallace, Ald. Wood, McRae, Plumm, and Selph. Nays: None. Absent: None.

Alvin Ranger explained the necessity of forming a Sewer Authority between the City of Charlevoix and Charlevoix Township and recommended forming a committee to study the advantages for Charlevoix. He distributed copies of Public Acts to the Council.

Alderman Wood reported the bad condition of the steps at the west end of River Street leading to the beach. The Acting Administrator informed him the street department has been given a work order to replace the stairs.

Alderwoman Wallace expressed her objection to Mr. Supernaw holding a press conference during the Council meeting. Visitors should, if they desire to speak, be limited to from three to five minutes for their comments and if they have not finished in that time the Mayor should shut them off. She expressed her interest in the outcome of Mr. Hufford's troubles regarding an error in his electric bill and felt he should have been informed before it was published by the press. She requested that the Beaver Island Boat Company be notified of the Docks and Harbor Committee meeting June 24, 1974. She related a complaint being registered by a resident near the Antrim and Park Avenue intersection, claiming that due to parties and camping in the park the noise is very disturbing to residents in the area, and asked Mr. Wexstaff to report it to Chief Mul.

The Finance Committee having examined bills totaling $118,616.44 find them correct and recommend that the bills be allowed. Moved by Alderman Plumm and supported by Alderman McRae that the bills be allowed and orders drawn for their amounts. The motion was adopted by the following yea and nay vote. Yeas: Alderman Timms, Alderwoman Wallace, Ald. Wood, McRae, Plumm and Selph.

Carl Vrooman, who was Assistant Secretary of Agriculture and married to Julia Scott's daughter and namesake. Julia Vrooman, a lovely lady now in her 90's and who, according to Adlai II, is one of the wittiest women in the whole world, completed a popular novel, "The High Road to Honor" at the Charlevoix Cottage in 1918. She recalls the time her mother invited all the D.A.R. delegates from Ohio and Illinois to Charlevoix, but somehow word spread and before she knew it, people from all over the United States appeared.

The family thought the walls would burst apart, but the staunch little cottage survived this reception and many other functions including a small family outdoor wedding in August, 1922.

Here on the lawn, overlooking a brilliant Lake Michigan sunset, Mrs. Scott's grand-daughter, Mildred Bromwell, was married to Captain Bailey of London. (And in August, 1970, the present owners of "The Wilds" again held a family weddings for their grandson in exactly the same natural setting. Although the setting today is still beautiful, the view, some people feel, is not as grandoise since the completion of the Medusa Portland Cement Plant on the south point of the bay and it certainly hasn't improved the quality of the air Mrs. Scott valued so highly, even though Charlevoix Township has recently passed the most restrictive regulations for air pollution in the United States.)

When looking back at Mrs. Scott's lifestyle between the two World Wars, one can't help but marvel at the contrasts when elegance and simplicity held hands. What simplicity? For one thing - no closets. Clothes were hung on hooks in the bedrooms. The kitchen had no running water, only a hand pump. Instead of gas or electricity, there was a wood burning stove. On cool days in September, (there was no rush getting the girls back to school), the house was heated by a wood furnace and the grate fires were laid with 4 ft. logs. The small room off the front hall which is now a powder room was the tool room where gardening equipment was stored.

So much for simplicity. What elegance? One can almost hear Mrs. Scott saying to her butler, "George, hand me a rake!" Mark Smith, author of a novel called "The Middleman" lived on Michigan Avenue in his youth and describes the street colorfully. "The summer way of life as I knew it was to go out with the limousines and chauffeurs, the maids and cooks and nurses who on a sunny day would paint the streets of the town with the colors of their uniforms."

Much of the fine wicker furniture is still in the house along with some delicate china plates hanging on the dining room wall and an attic full of books that the present owner, the William Ockrants of Cincinnati, have never gotten around to sorting.

Mrs. Scott's mail was delivered by Dan McSauba, a man without a drop of Scotch blood in him. Dan's real name sounds like Ah-mick-ga-za-bee, which in the Ottowa language means "Submerging Beaver." When early homes among the birches and maples, Dan, a well-educated Indian, noted, "Many Indians lie here - some big chiefs."

This may be so. We know the Indians like to bury their dead high on a bluff, overlooking the fresh waters they dearly love. And, because they want their loved ones to sleep in peace, undisturbed, these graves are never groomed.

The Indians, under a Government Grant in August, 1875, were deeded many acres of land along the shore, and the Scott property specificially was deeded to the last of the great Ottowa Chiefs, Shaw-waw-ne-pay-se, meaning Southern Partridge.

Actually, the entire shoreline along Lake Michigan including the Medusa Cement Plant had been promised to the Indians in this area by an earlier treaty. However, somebody didn't read the fine print and since the Indians believed the land, sky and waters belong to everyone - the notion of private property was inconceivable to them - the land given them by the United States was sometimes sold for a bag of flour or $1.00 plus other valuable considerations. During 1875-1885 numerous quit claim deeds are recorded including one to Moses Mic-Saw-bay, a relative of Dan McSaube.

Let us now picture Mrs. Scott, swinging in her hand-knotted hammock, reading the Charlevoix Courier which Dan has just delivered to her door. It doesn't take much imagination to sense the shock when she comes across the notice that the city council passed a resolution to provide a sidewalk extending clear to the end of Michigan Avenue - right past "The Wilds!"

A sidewalk! this means the graceful knoll will be bitten into soon. Ancient trees uprooted. People striding past the secluded cottage. Children bicycling back and fourth. The end of peace and quiet and most of all, the end of privacy!

True, there are others who also oppose sidewalk construction here and there around town for they don't relish the property assessments. Most of the residents go all out, nevertheless, in favor of paving streets and sidewalks, because they're anxious to get rid of the dusty dirt roads that are impassable during heavy rains.

Little Traverse Adds Staff

PETOSKEY--Three new physicians will join the staff of Burns Clinic in the next two months, bringing the total to 50, Dr. Peter J. Connaughton, President Burns Clinic Board of Directors, announces.

First to arrive will be Harry Birt Etienne, of Ann Arbor, a general surgeon with three degrees from Michigan State University and a graduate of joining the surgical staff July 8.

Dr. Frederick N. Klippert joins the ear-nose-throat staff July 11. A graduate of the University of Michigan Medical School, Dr. Klippert has just completed five years of residency at University Hospital specializing in Otolaryngology (the treatment of the ear, nose and throat). He and his wife, Julianne have purchased a home here.

Finally, Dr. John R. Rasmussen, an anesthesiologist, begins work here August 1, following his discharge from the Navy, with which he has been serving for the past two years, at the Naval Hospital in the Marine Corps Camp Pendleton, north of San Diego, California.

Dr. Rasmussen received his B.S. degree from M.S.U. and graduated from Marquette Medical School in 1969.

The Burns Clinic physicians are members of the Little Traverse Hospital staff with which the Clinic is closely associated and to which it sends its patients.

Still a member emeritus of the staff is Dr. Dean C. Burns, who founded the Clinic in 1931 with the purpose of assembling a group of physicians especially trained in various skills to provide more complete care for the people of northern Michigan.

Friske Announces Candidacy

Former Representative Richard Friske, from the 103rd Michigan District, filed his nomination fee with the Elections Division of the Secretary of State Tuesday, and will oppose incumbant Ralh Ostling for the Republican nomination.

Friske was defeated in a three-cornered race last time when Ostling's large majority in Roscommon county gave him the nomination. Friske believes that he can win a "head-to-head" confrontation for the votes of the 103rd district Republicans.

Ostling, who had the financial and personnel support of the Michigan Education Association, and without any Democratic activity in the primary election in this area in 1972, was able to pile up a large vote in his local area.

Richard Friske believes that with the evident trend toward conservatism, especially in the 103rd District, and with the support being promised, he can regain the seat he held for one term. "We need a return to the idea that the people of this district need representation in the legislature, not just the special interests," Friske said.

In his first term Friske incurred the wrath and opposition of the MEA, and some Republicans, because he refused to support things which he knew were not in the best interest of his District, and which the people there were opposed to.

Friske plans a "hard-hitting" campaign, discussing the issues, and seeking votes on the basis that if elected he will represent the people of the 103rd District, and again keep them informed about what is going on in their government at Lansing. "The special interests and the MEA already have," said Friske, "ample representation in Lansing. I believe that the Representative from this District should spend his time representing the interests and people of the District. If they return me to Lansing I will do just that."

In announcing his candidacy, Richard Friske stated that he will continue to be the unbossed representative of the people of the district. He will continue to represent his district instead of the special interest groups in Lansing, which control his opponent. Richard Friske pledges:

(1) He will continue to fight to cut down state bureaucracy and wasteful spending of taxpayers' money. He is convinced that the taxpayers must have a voice in Lansing.

(2) Friske is opposed to the present proposal of an increase in the legislator's salary. Such an increase would only aid greater inflation.

(3) He will use his position as representative to assist in restoring law and order and to give his moral support to the policemen of the State.

(4) Friske will continue to work to get the welfare chiselers and loafers off the welfare roles.

Day Camp

A Week Outside

Charlevoix's Ethel Grunch is now a seasoned camper.

But, it didn't come until last week when she joined some 120 East Jordan and Charlevoix Girl Scouts for Day Camp.

And if it wasn't to be on her first campout, this is Mrs. Grunch's first year as a Brownie Leader.

"I think it is going very well," she said after just helping a few of her Brownies with some campsite chores last week.

Mrs. Grunch said she got hooked into helping at the week-long camp held outsite of in sort of a funny way.

There apparently wasn't anyone around that could take the week off and since she had been a former 4-H leader several people suggested her name.

"I have enjoyed part of it," she said.

However, she did say that perhaps some of the youngsters were a little too young to be going.

But for those involved with the program, it has been an exciting week.

The theme of the program was "I'm OK, You're OK" and Girl Scouts were given an opportunity to become better acquainted with the environment they live.

Older Scouts were given an opportunity also sharpen up on their outdoors skills with some even spending the night out camping.

"I liked it, it was fun," said 12-year-old Jill Wilson about the program.

"I liked meeting new friends and cooking over an open fire."

Another major event the East Jordan girls enjoyed was the special flag ceremony that required to whole camp's participation to carry out.

"It was fun cooking and doing different things and stuff," added Pam Oleniacy.

She thought being able to cook over an open fire built her confidence in being able to prepare food.

Pam also liked the opportunity to meet and mix with other kids her own age from a different community.

The week-long program is a part of the Crooked Tree Girl Scout Council and was under the directorship of Mrs. Donna Tisron, who was assisted by Mrs. Pat Pepin, both from East Jordan.

MRS. GRUNCH took her novice experience with her to Day Camp last week and showed some of the youngsters how to enjoy the outdoors.

Local Residents Get Experience

Three medical students from Charlevoix County will be getting a first hand look at hospital-based medial care this summer.

Ellen and Erin Arvilla, Michigan State University students from Charlevoix, are spending the summer at Lockwood-MacDonald Hospital in Petoskey.

James Reus, a University of Michigan student from Boyne City, is spending the summer at Little Traverse Hospital in Petoskey under the direction of H. M. Hilal, MD.

Coordinated by the Student American Medical Association Project for Medical Education and Community Orientation (SAMA-MECO), the program provides students with the opportunity to observe community health care services under direction of practicing physicians.

Students are based in hospitals which have continued financial support of the program despite rising economic pressures. In some areas, county medical societies and individual physicians also contribute financially.

Forty-four hospitals are participating in the MECO program this year. Some of these hospitals have provided placement each summer since the inception of the program four years ago.

The MECO program was started in Wisconsin as a pilot effort aimed at encouraging young physicians' interest in medical practice in rural communities. This year some 35 states have such a program.

In Michgian, the program is coordinated by the Michigan Stae Medical Society which offers assistance to the SAMA chapters as a project of its Education Liaison Committee. The Michigan Hospital Association and the Michgan Academy of Family Physicians cooperate in the program.

Of the 84 students participating, 41 are from the University of Michigan Medical School; 29 are from Wayne State University School of Medicine, and 11 are from Michigan State University College of Human Medicine.

Three attend medical school outside Michigan. Sixty-five have completed one year of medical school and 18 have completed two or more years.

Each student receives room and board and a modest weekly stipend during his eight or ten weeks of the program.

Ferris Announces Grads

Big Rapids, Mich.–Ferris State College has honored 1406 students for scholastic excellence during the spring quarter by naming them to the Academic Honors list, Dr. James V. Farrell, vice president for academic affairs, has announced.

To be named to the Academic Honors List a student must earn at least a 3.25 average on a 4.0 basis and carry a full academic load. A full load is defined as 14 quarter hours of credit.

Charlevoix County residents receiving honors included Timothy S. Seelye, Boyne City; Charlene M. Deyoung, Charlevoix; Owen J. Faust, Charlevoix; Ned H. Henley; Charlevoix; Daniel T. McDonald, East Jordan; and Earnest A. Finch, East Jordan.

Diplomas From Superior State

Gail Potter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Potter; and Robert Crain, son of Mr. and Mrs. Glen Crain; were among the more than 400 receiving diplomas and certificates from Dr. Kenneth J. Shouldice, Lake Superior State College president, at commencement exercises this past weekend. (June 15)

The graduates heard former Gov. George Romney urge them to "become involved in the government of this nation" and Outstanding Alumnus Award recipient Don E. Hamachek of the MSU psychology faculty advise parents that "if this college had done a good job, the first thing you should now notice about your sons and daughters is that they are different."

"A good college does not make its students like each other, or like us, but leads them to become more and more like themselves."

Romney received the 1974 Distinguished Citizens Award, the highest the College has to offer.

Tennis Talk

The first of two tennis tournaments in the Charlevoix area is now in progress. This first tournament, open only to Charlevoix residents, has a category for everyone.

There are women and men's divisions as well as divisions for boys and girls 16, 14 and 12 and under. It might be a good time to discuss how to keep score in tennis.

The tennis system of scoring is somewhat complicated. In most tournaments, each match consists of two out of three sets.

In world championships, like Wimbledon or Forest Hills, the semi-finals and finals are three out of five sets.

A set is simply a way of measuring a certain portion of a match. Assuming you are playing singles, the first player to win six games wins the set. That is not all there is to it, however, since you also have to win by two games.

Therefore, a 6-4 score is a complete set, but a 6-5 score is not. At this point there are two systems used to determine who wins the set. With one system, you just keep playing until one player gains a two game advantage. A 7-5 or a 12-10 score are both complete sets.

The other system is a little more complicated. When the score reaches 6-6, the players then employ a tie breaker system. In a nutshell, the tie breaker is the best of nine points. The first player to win five points, wins the set. There are other tie breaker methods, but this one is the most common.

Scoring a particular game in a set is also somewhat confusing. The basic units of a game are love (a nice way to say 0), 15, 30, 40, and game. You always say the servers score first.

Now, you are the server, and you win the first point. The score is 15-love. You win the second point. 30-love. If you win the third point, it is 40-love. And if you win the next point, it is game.

If your opponent wins the first four points, simply reverse the score (love-15, love-30, love-40, and game). If you both win a point, it is 15-15; if you both win two points it is 30-30. If you both win three points, however, it is not 40-40. The score is then called deuce, which is just another way to say that the game is a tie.

As in the scoring for a set, you must win each game by two points. Therefore, when the score reaches deuce, one player has to gain a two point advantage.

If you are still the server, and you win the next point, the score is advantage server or add in (it does not matter how you say it). If you then win the next point, it is game.

If the score is add in, and your opponent wins the next point, the score goes back to deuce.

If your opponent wins the following point, the score then becomes advantage receiver or add out.

All the add in and add out score actually means, is that one player has a point advantage after the score has been tied.

If the player with the advantage wins the next point, he then has a two point advantage and wins the game. The other player then serves the next game.

In doubles the scoring is the same. Simply make sure that all four players serve in the same order throughout the set. After each game, a different player serves.

CHARLEVOIX YOUNGSTERS set the city tennis tournaments in action this week as they began competing against each other Monday for the city title. Adult competition begins this weekend.

Sumpter Wins State Amateur

Affable, power-driving publinxer Rod Sumpter, who lost a Michigan Amateur Golf Championship in 1970 on a rimmed putt, won the 1974 title Saturday with a 3 and 2 triumph over close friend Keith Mohan.

When the pair teed off it was already assured that the Flint area would produce its first champion since 1952, and it was assured a public course player would win for the first time since 1962.

Both golfers, former teammates at the University of Michigan, play out of Grand Blanc golf club. They have known each other 14 years, and last Monday qualified together for next month's U.S. Public Linx Championship in Pasadena, Calf.

"I played my best in this match, and still barely won it," the 27-year-old Sumpter said.

"I could go up against him tomorrow and he'd probably beat me by five."

"I'm not really disappointed in the way I played," Mohan offered. "But I'm disappointed not to have my name on the same trophy with golfers like Chuck Kocsis and Glenn Johnson."

Kocsis, six-time winner of the 63-year tourney and recently elected to the state Sports Hall of Fame, was among the Golf Association of Michigan officials at the post-match presentation of the Stag Horn trophy. Johnson is a five-time winner.

Sumpter reached the title round by beating 19-year-old Dan Pohl of Mount Pleasant 3 and 2 in a morning semifinal, while Mohan took a 3 and 2 decision over Chris Moore of East Lansing.

In match play, strokes are not counted. Rather golfers play head-to-head, hole by hole. A 3 and 2 victory means the winner was three holes ahead with two to play.

Four years ago, Sumpter was runner up to Danny Vass losing the final match on an 18th hole bogey.

In the last five years, two Flint-area golfers reached the semi-finals, but no area golfer had won the crown since the late Fred Turner 22 years ago.

Last year, Grand Blanc's Dr. Wayne Kramer lost in the title round to Bob Chapman of Farmington. Chapman lost in the third round this year, while Kramer did not enter because he failed to submit enough rounds to certify a handicap. The last publinxer to win the State Am was Pontiac's Mike Andonian.

Mohan, a 26-year-old junior high school teacher battled Sumpter even on the front-side of the lush, 6,611-yard, par-72 course - site of the State Am for 12 straight years.

Sumpter took the fourth and 7th holes with pars, while Mohand won No. 6 with a par and No. 9 with a three-foot birdie putt.

On the backside, Sumpter won the 11th, 14th and 15th the first two wity birds and the last with a par, as Mohan put his third shot in a trap, blasted over the green, chipped poorly and then missed a five foot put.

He needed a 12-foot-birdie put on the par 4 16th hole to survive, but was about five inches short. Sumpter answered with a three-footer for par to win it.

Mohan's parent took he and Sumpter to dinner Friday night, and they joked about possibly facing each other for the title.

"But when the match started, we played golf, and tried to beat each other," Mohan said.

"But we figured whoever loses at least we lose to a friend."

It was only Mohan's third State Am. He had been a quarterfinalist and semifinalist in the previous two. Sumpter, a Vietnam veteran, was competing in his fourth Am. Saturday, Sumpter's driving, chipping and putting were all superb, particularly his long shots off tee. One drive was paced off at 334 yards.

Moore, a student at Michigan State, said his problem was "I didn't play very well, and he Mohan did. I didn't feel right. My timing was off."

He had indicated that he might want to discuss his complaint over being only the No. 6 man on the MUS golf team this past spring. But after his elimination, he was tightlipped.

"I feel like I should have played more, that's all I can say," Moore said.

Pohl is a sophomore at the University of Arizona, where he signed a letter of intent to play golf before his selection last spring as an all-state high school baseball player.

He was visibly disappointed at his loss to Sumpter, saying: "If I played half the game I did yesterday, I probably would have cleaned him up, 5 and 4."

A & W Still Undefeated

A & W remained undefeated last Wednesday with a solid 10-5 victory over Charlevoix County State Bank. Two five run innings were all A & W needed to win.

Connie Shores led off with a single and Susie Boss followed with another sharp single. Shores scored on Kathy Sladek's double for the game's first run.

Bobby Sladek flied to left for the first out. Marilyn Cummings was safe on a fielder's choice when the throw trying to get Kathy Sladek going to third was late.

Boss scored on the play. Holly Garten then followed with a single scoring Sladek and went to second on a throwing error.

With Garten and Cummings on second and third, Susie Peters singled scoring both base runners.

The 5-0 A & W lead held until the third inning. Charlevoix County State Bank managed to get a small rally started but could only squeeze one run across. In the top of the fourth, A & W exploded again.

Garten then singled. After Peters flied out Regina Borths singled to score Cummings. Linda Smith reached first on an error to load the bases.

Shores then came up and blasted one to the outfield fence.

When the action stopped, Shores was on third and three more runs had scored. Boss then singled in the fifth run of the inning.

Pee Wee Sign-Up

Charlevoix youngsters ages 6-8, will once again be able to participate in organized baseball this summer with the announcement by L. J. Ford of the Sign-Up all this week for Pee Wee Baseball.

Sign-Up will be held at 602 Park, but you are requested to call 547-4227 before coming up.

This will be the fifth year of the Pee Wee Program in Charlevoix, and the first year that girls will be allowed into the program. The Little League Association has announced they will be accepting girls into their program also.

Pee Wee Baseball is designed to prepare youngsters for Little League Baseball, with emphasis on learning the fundamentals. Games will be held every Tuesday and Thursday from 1 to 3, weather permitting.

Anita Potter Offered Piano Recital

ANITA POTTER

CHARLEVOIX--Mrs. Robert Wexstaff will present Anita Potter in her graduation recital at the First Congregational church last Friday.

The concert featured Miss Potter at the piano playing Invention XII in A Minor, Bach; Pastorale from Sonata, Scarlatti; Sonata Pathetique, Beethoven; Chopin's Waltz in C Sharp minor; Nocturno Op. 54 No. 4, Greig; and Liebestraume by Liszt climaxed by the Third Movement from Rachmaninoff's Concerto No. 2. She will be accompanied in her final number by Mrs. Wexstaff at a second piano playing the orchestra arrangement.

In announcing the recital, Mrs. Wexstaff said she had had few music students who have reached this degree of proficiency and is extending an invitation to music lovers to hear Miss Potter play.

A recent graduate of the Charlevoix high school, Miss Potter has received a scholarship to Albion College. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Potter.

JOSEPH SEIDEL, 16, son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Seidel of Charlevoix received his Eagle Scout Award, the nation's scouting award, in special ceremonies held recently at the First Congregational Church. He is a member of Troop 43, sponsored by Charlevoix Lion's Club, and the sixth Charlevoix youth to receive the Eagle Scout Award. Dr. Jeffrey Porter is the scoutmaster.

Board

Oscar Ward, a candidate for Commissioner in Charlevoix's second ward, blamed the school district for not allowing for a reserve in the budget in the event of a shortage such as the loss of $107,000 in State Aid and one-half mill loss as the result of this year's allocation.

Supt. James A. McKimmy of the Charlevoix school district, said that the 1973-74 budget was figured within one percent of the school's needs and he didn't think one could get much closer than that.

Ira L. Davis, chairman of the board of commissioners, was present and insisted that he had a letter from McKimmy, dated last October, in which McKimmy advised him that the school district would not need all its allocated millage.

McKimmy again advised him that this related to voted millage for debt retirement purposes and was in no way related to allocated millage.

However, he continued to insist that this was true though Howard explained the difference and why it could be cut.

From the beginning of the discussion, Hamilton said he felt the issue should be taken to the people for a vote, that this was too much of a responsibility for seven people.

It was agreed that if the Tax Allocation board did decide to take the issue to the people, an extensive educational campaign would be necessary.

Howard agreed and added that "I doubt if 10 percent of the people in the county understand the duties of the Tax Allocation Board."

Sherman, at this point, said he did not feel that anyone wanted to discuss the levying of more than 15 mills which the board could recommend.

Stroud then presented a motion that the Charlevoix county Tax Allocation Board continue to operate as in the past.

Though it was not a part of the motion, he said that the possible new means of financing schools and the unstable times that have resulted in inflation and other problems entered into his feeling on the matter.

Sherman seconded the motion which was adopted by a 6-1 vote with Hamilton delivering the one nay vote.

your piece of paper and put it in the trash can. We have several beautiful areas in the city and it's a shame to have them littered with broken bottles and cans and paper. If people would just take that extra 30 seconds and put it in the trash barrel, it sure would save us a lot of work and money, time, and make the place look a lot better.

COURIER: If anybody has any questions about the recreation program, or would like to volunteer their services for the summer, who do they contact and how?

KIPKE: They contact me at the City Hall. I am in the basement of City Hall, my phone number is 547-4272. I am in and out of the office quite a bit so sometimes it is hard to get hold of me. If they get hold of one of the fellows in the booth at the softball diamond, they will relay the message; or if they leave a message at the clerk's office in City Hall, I will get the message that way.

Lion's Project

Diamond Almost Done

The new Lions Club hard ball field, home of the new Senior League division of the Little League program, is being whipped into shape in preparation for the July 8 opener.

The Lions Club headed by Gordon Wellman, arranged with Charlevoix county for use of the property located on Grant st. at Carpenter ave. The club, as a community project, is financing the cost of preparing the area and erecting a backstop.

Here workmen from an area fence company erect the backstop. The flag pole at centerfield will also be erected and snow fence will be placed along the base lines before the opener.

According to Douglas Wilks, Little League president, 52 boys in the 13 through 15 year-old category have signed up for four teams which will play a 12 game schedule. Games will be played Monday through Thursday each week.

Team managers are Tom Dorck, Pete Spelies, Dave Novotny and Ed McNamara. Curt Thompson is player agent and Albert 'Tubby' Clark will be equipment manager.

At the present time the new league is in need of umpires. Anyone wishing to serve in this capacity may call Wilks.

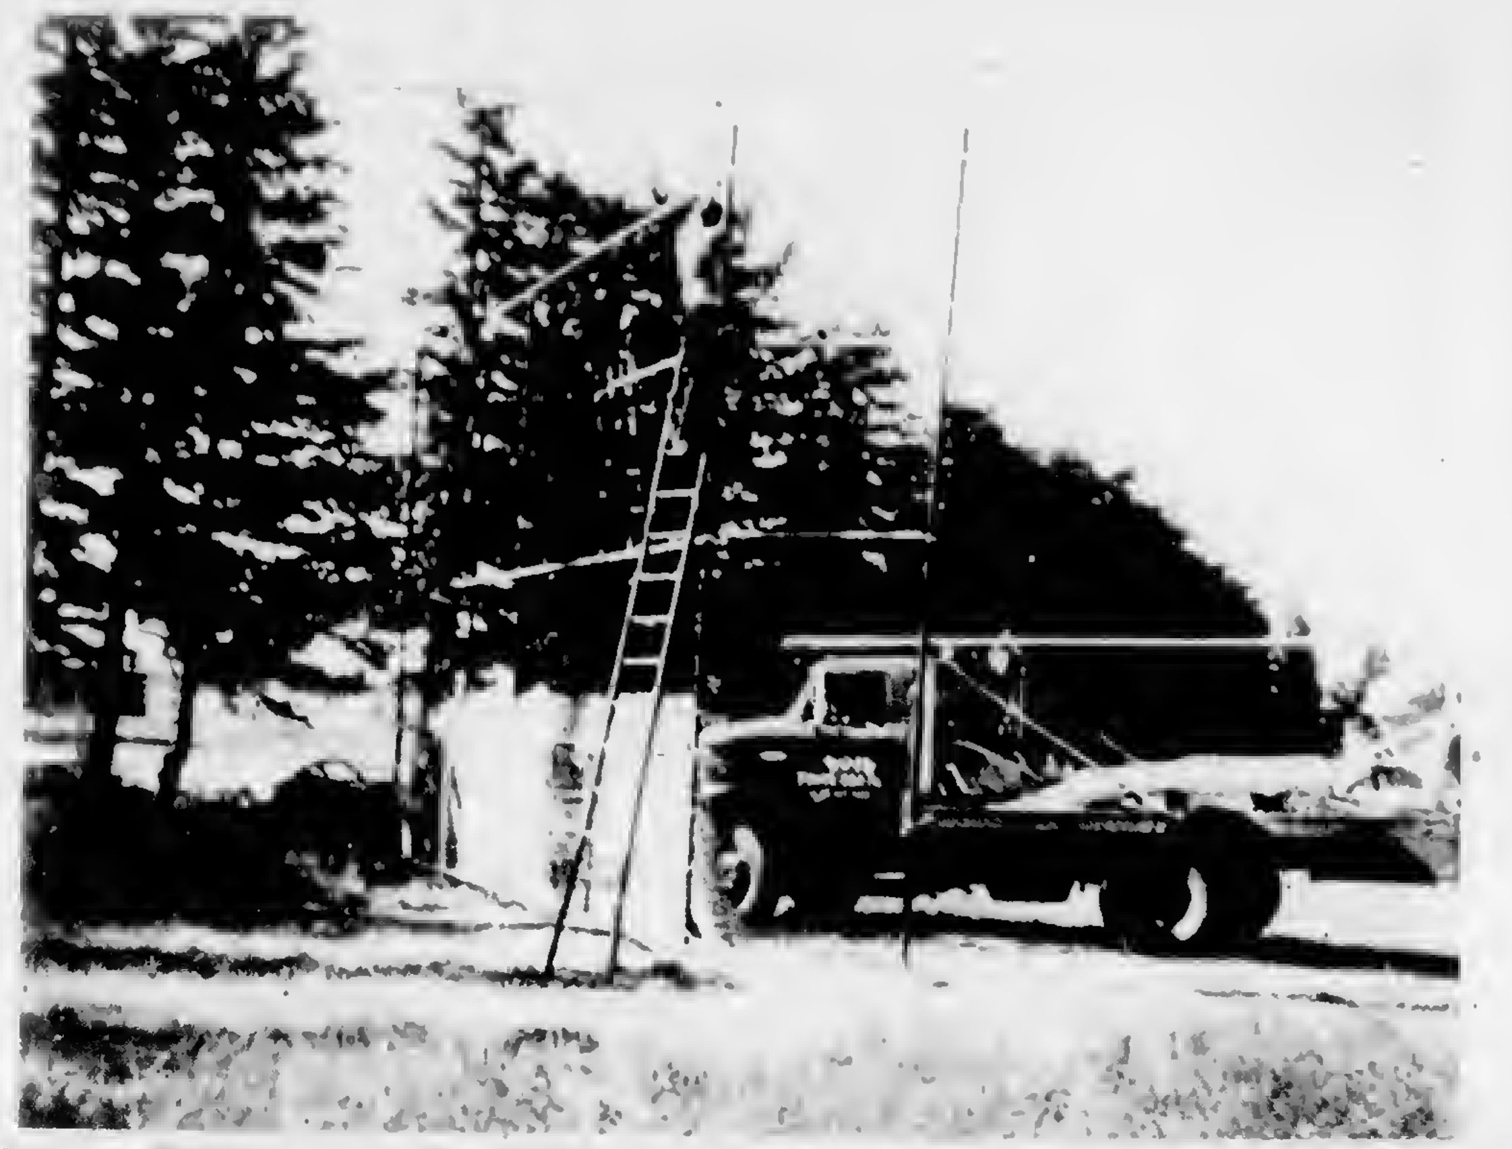
The teams, as yet unnamed, have been selected and will be practicing for the July 8 opening.



Allocation Board Will Continue

Charlevoix county will continue to operate with the services of the Tax Allocation Board it was decided following a meeting of the present board to consider the possibility of presenting a proposal for a permanent or 'fixed' allocation of millage.

Purpose of the meeting was to decide if the matter of allocating the 15 mill limitation set by statute should continue to be done by the Tax Allocation board as it has been through the years or take the issue to the voters of the county to see if they want a permanent or 'fixed' millage.

In order to do this, the present Tax Allocation board would recommend to the Board of Commissioners that the county, school districts, townships and the Intermediate District receive a given millage over a period of two years or more.

The board of commissioners would then place the referendum on the ballot in a forthcoming election. Under such a procedure, the allocation board also could recommend that the millage be extended to 18 mills.

The discussion opened with the procedure by which this could be done. Clarence Rabach, clerk of the board, reviewed the procedure that had been reviewed with Harvey C. Varnum, county prosecutor, who, according to Rabach, advised that the group take a better look at the situation before coming to a decision.

The discussion turned to the schools which Moerland termed a "gray" area because of all the uncertainties faced by them in putting together a budget when so many questions were unanswered.

Shepard was again asked, as he had been at an earlier meeting, what might be expected in the way of school finance during the next couple years.

He answered by saying that the Bursiey bill will be in effect this year and probably in 1975. However, the following year a Democratic-controlled legislature will likely propose some other method that would take the load off the taxpayer where it is now. Under this bill a school district must levy a minimum of 20 mills, a combination of allocated and voted operational millage, in order to qualify for State Aid.

Charlevoix School District, because of its increased valuation, will receive no State Aid under the Act and must support its school entirely by voted millage except for the 9.0 mills allocated, one half mill less than in 1973.

Boyne Falls district, for the same reason, will be limited to 88 cents per student in State Aid.

However, any new method of school finance is probably two years away, he said in conclusion.

Willis Peters, a Marion township candidate for the board of commissioners, said that a fixed valuation would be more prudent, that an influx of new families combined with inflation would be disastrous under a fixed allocation.

It was explained that valuations do change because of development and that a fixed valuation would be out of the question.

Howard, chairman of the board, at this point said "What we are looking for is a formula that would allow the schools to set a budget without being in the dark." He outlined the present method and said schools are in a bad position because of all the 'unknowns' when putting together a budget for the Tax Allocation Board.

Peters insisted that the press, in reporting on information relating to tax allocation, use sums of monies involved rather than millage because this would be better understood by the average person. Howard explained that this would accomplish nothing because there was no common denominator whereby one mill levied in any one given area...that is, the county, township or school district, would result in a

State Agriculture Dept. Threatens To Shut Down County Dog Facility

By PEG OHLE

Charlevoix County may be without a dog shelter this fall if the present facility in Boyne City is not brought up to state standards.

This possibility was reported to the Courier last week by Dr. George Lombard, veterinarian with the state Department of Agriculture, who is in charge of inspecting such facilities in this part of the state.

He cited several violations of the state law covering standards for buildings in which dogs are detained. Most violations are related to the lack of running water in the building, which makes proper cleaning and sanitizing of food pans, walls and floors impossible.

Another violation is a wooden door which permits rats to enter the building and is not secure enough to prevent break-ins and stealing of dogs.

Ventilation and lighting were also mentioned as not meeting state standards. There is no electricity in the building.

Dr. Leonard said that last winter he met with County Prosecutor Harvey Varnum and submitted to him a list of the violations, asking that they be forwarded to the County Board of Commissioners.

Kenneth Staley, county commissioner under whose jurisdiction the dog shelter comes, said that as far as he knows, the Charlevoix County dog shelter meets minimum state standards. He said that he does not recall receiving a list of violations from Dr. Leonard.

Staley pointed out that the county has $10,000 in its capital improvement fund for a new dog shelter, and another $10,000 in its tentative 1975 budget. Whether or not that amount will be included in the final budget depends upon how much must be cut from the budget. "Capital improvement funds are the first to go", he said.

Staley also noted the tax burden dog shelters put on the public. A recent estimate for a simple cement block building was $17,000. This did not include any interior finished work, plumbing, heating, electricity or necessary furnishings.

"The cost to the public would be prohibitive," he said. "These rules and regulations are set up by veterinarians", he added, "who have no thought of cost. They might work in a place like Wayne County, but not in a sparsely populated area like Charlevoix County."

Noting what he called "the high prices of veterinarian service," Staley said that last year the county set up a clinic to give rabies vaccine to dogs in the county. The cost was $1.50 per dog, as compared to $6.00 in a veterinary facility, he said. There are 2,000 licensed dogs in Charlevoix County.

The actual operation of the dog shelter is under the jurisdiction of the Sheriff's Department. Roger Moses has been on duty since June 1 as Animal Control Officer. Besides taking lost or unwanted dogs to the shelter, he is responsible for "investigating all matters pertaining to animals - bites, killing of deer, etc.

There are ten pens in the Charlevoix County dog shelter. The number of dogs taken in each week may range from 15 to under five. They are kept for a minimum of seven days, during which time attempts are made to find the owners or place the dogs in other homes.

Moses feeds and waters the dogs once a day, carrying in the water in a five gallon container. Drinking water is placed in coffee cans which are easily knocked over. State law specifies that water must be available "one hour twice a day."

The remaining amount of cold water is used to "clean and sanitize" the eating dishes and pens.

State law states that ill or injured dogs may be destroyed upon capture, and that unidentifiable dogs may be destroyed after being held a minimum of four days. These provisions of the law became effective May 29 of this year.

Moses uses carbon monoxide gas to kill the dogs that are unclaimed. The bodies are then taken to the landfill near Boyne City and buried.

The county budget for operating the dog shelter and paying related expenses is approximately $10,000 a year. This includes the salary of the Animal Control Officer, $15.00 a month for rental of the building, the cost of upkeep of the officer's vehicle, dog food, extermination, and burying.

Reibel Selling Out

Naval Battle Over

BY TOM DAMMANN

Warned of a potential conflict of interest, one of the combatants in a naval battle between two boat companies serving Beaver Island, has withdrawn, leaving Charlevoix City Council in calm waters for the first time in two weeks.

Ninetieth District Court Judge Arthur Reibel, principle owner of Beaver Island Transit Inc., told this reporter that "I am divesting myself of the tugboat, Northshore, the barge Tanker Two, the property and dock on Beaver Island and any other properties concerned."

Reibel explained that he had made the decision following a "serious telephone conversation with the Supreme Court Administrator in Lansing" who told him he had received complaints about the Judge's out of court activities.

The administrator advised him that he might be exposing himself to charges of conflict of interest, Reibel said.

"I have decided to concentrate on the business of the District Court," he told me.

"I am notifying all attorneys in the area that the court will schedule full days, five days a week from July 15 through December 31st.

"I intend to clean out the criminal docket," he emphasized. "There will be no half days as there usually is in summer."

Reibel's action meant the City Council could smoothly ratify a three year lease with the Beaver Island Boat Company for the use of Berths A and B of the City's Commercial Dock in Round Lake Harbor, at an annual rent of $2700.

Reibel took some comfort from the insertion of a new clause in the lease stipulating that the boat Company must allow other vessels to load and unload at the two berths when not in use or face cancellation of the agreement.

The dispute began two weeks ago when Reibel challenged the City Council's right to lease the two berths to his competitor The Beaver Island Boat Company for $2,000 a year.

He charged the members with failure to discharge their responsibilities, pointing out that in effect the City Council is renting the dock space for less than it charges yachtsmen.

He suggested that commercial vessels should be charged for the weight of cargo and on a per passenger basis.

He threatened to sue each member of the City Council if the council failed to consider his own bid of $2,000 per year.

The Beaver Island Boat Co. countered Reibel's charge by pointing out that he had failed to answer advertisements and certified letters seeking bids, thereby leaving it the sole bidder.

The Beaver Island Boat Company has done business with the City of Charlevoix for more than 50 years, presently transporting freight and passengers between Charlevoix and St. James on the Island aboard two steel motor vessels, the Beaver Islander and the South Shore.

Reibels' tug and barge have been hauling petroleum products and freight to the Island.

He said Monday, that he is already negotiating a sale of his company.

Lion's Club Baseball Diamond Project Angers Neighboring Property Owners

A Charlevoix service club's attempt to help area youngsters apparently has drawn the wrath of some local residents.

Armed with a signed letter, Westport Property Owners asked the city council to rescind its earlier approval for the Lion's Club to build a Little League baseball diamond south of the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department.

The residents specifically objected to a game played two weeks ago on Sunday, which they said affected their privacy.

"As voters and taxpayers being directly affected by the existence of this ball diamond, we kindly asked that the council pass a resolution to retract its approval to the Lions Club for the use of this property as a baseball field," they indicate in their letter to Council.

After acknowledging the letter, Councilman Ray Wood told the group that some off-street parking is being set up along with the installation of no parking signs.

Representing Charlevoix Lion Club members, Oscar Erickson said it was an unfortunate situation.

"It's regrettable that it happened," he told the council.

He said that the specific Sunday game in question was an early game and that the remaining games would be supervised.

He added that they do not plan to install lights and asked council to put up no parking signs in the area not designated for parking.

One subdivision resident then said their major concern was over foul balls hitting children.

He asked that perhaps another site be chosen since the property will eventually be used for the development of more county buildings.

The matter was referred to the recreation committee, which will work with the groups in deciding if it is necessary to play at the park on Sunday.

In other business, the council:

--Approved the lease agreement between the city and the Beaver Island Boat Company for Berths A and B at the city docks.

--Approved the Chez Charlevoix sewer agreement.

--Adopted a new municipal airport ordinance to bring it up to Federal Aviation standards.

Ferry Opens For Business

The Ironton ferry will officially open its 1974 season Wednesday, July 10, following a formal ceremony at the ramp site scheduled for 11 a.m. on that date Ralph Richardson, chairman of the Ironton Ferry committee of the Charlevoix county board of commissioners, has announced.

In making the announcement, Richardson said that work was not completed on the re-construction of the ramps but that it had reached a point where they could be utilized. Other work including installation of fences, and work on other phases of the project will continue throughout the summer. The black-topping of the approaches will not be completed until late this year or next spring, he added.

At this point, it is expected that the Charlevoix county board of commissioners, who will be meeting in regular session on July 10, will travel to the site of the ferry for a ribbon-cutting ceremony and officially opening of the new facility.

The consistently high water level in the Great Lakes combined with out-moded facilities that had been in use for half a century made it imperative to re-construct the ramps if the ferry was to be utilized for transportation of traffic across the South Arm of Lake Charlevoix.

The contract was let in January to the W.A. Porter Co. of East Jordan which salvaged ramps at the DNR docks at Mackinaw City for use at Ironton. After re-assembling them they have been moved on to new approaches which have been constructed to allow for fluctuation of water levels.

Also taking part in the ceremonies will be representatives of the Charlevoix County Road Commission which operates the ferry for the Board of Commissioners and other county officials as well as representatives of the contracting firm

This Weekend

Local Center Gets A Name

The little concrete block building at 201 Garfield officially gets a name next Sunday.

While it has gone unnamed for several years, the effect it has had on people's lives has not gone unnoticed.

It's going to be called the Lillian F. Bergmann Center following dedication ceremonies being held by the Charlevoix Emmet County Association for Retarded Children and Adults.

Mrs. Bergmann is known to Charlevoix for both her contributions to the center and area youth.

From the outside, the house looks like many of the other ones along the road.

But inside, it's a completely different story.

It's the story of how 15 mentally retarded adults try to lead a somewhat normal life by doing an honest day's work.

The clients, as they are referred to by the professional staff, work for the Charlevoix-Emmet Association for Retarded Children Sheltered Workshop.

Every week the group of men and women work Monday through Thursday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. fulfilling contracts that have been made with local businesses.

With some assistance from four staff members, the group spends most of their time silk screening hot seats for Paul-Reed of Charlevoix.

For other companies they've cleaned plastic spools and wire coils for electric dryers.

With completion of a new addition to the existing building, the workshop is about to add another 15 people to its program.

In addition to the outside work, the workshop produces two of its own products that are sold on the local market–a coffee table love light or candle holder and Lake Trout spinners.

The workshop began in 1965, after the intermediate school district began its first type "B" program and it was discovered that three retardees were not acceptable because they were over age 21.

A two way garage, owned by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bergmann was converted in 1965 to a workshop that opened Jan. 10, 1966, with three workers working from 5:30 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. with a 15-minute refreshment period.

At that time, Robert Bergmann, Lillian Bergmann, Robert Cook and Jack Sutherland assumed the responsibility of training the clients and getting the program.

Now eight years later, the workshop has just completed a building expansion program that doubles the size of the building and provides a drying and painting room.

While the professional staff is financed through Act 54 Board monies, the building and the rest of the expenses are paid for by the 42-member association for retarded children.

Expected to attend the ceremonies at 1:30 p.m. is Senator Robert Davis, who will also give the address.

City Band Begins Weekly Concerts Wednesday

The Charlevoix City Band will initiate its annual summer weekly concert season in East Park this week under the direction of Gary Stutzman.

The first concert will be held from the band stage in East Park overlooking the yacht harbor at 8 p.m. Wednesday.

Weekly concerts will follow throughout the next 10 weeks.

In announcing the weekly series, presented through the cooperation of the Charlevoix schools and the city for the entertainment of area residents and visitors, Stutzman said that this year's musical organization should be one of the best bands to perform in East Park. Certainly it will be one of the largest with 50 members at the present time.

The band, composed of adults in the area including college students and advanced high school music students, rehearses at 7:30 p.m. every Monday at the high school band room.

Membership in this band is open to anyone who wishes to play and has reached a level of proficiency that allows him to perform the music.

The literature the band plays consists of standard overtures, old favorite songs, current concert works, popular tunes and always the famous Sousa marches.

The concerts are complimentary and can be heard from the rolling terraces in East Park at 8 p.m. every Wednesday.

Aging Agency

Commission Fighting Politics

Michigan's new Commission of Services to the Aging may be running into some political barbs with other state agencies, according to the state director.

C. Patrick Babcock, aging director, indicated Friday in Gaylord that his commission is having some problems with other agencies who presently are working with elderly programs.

Although he would not specifically name agencies, Babcock indicated that other agencies object to his commission's power to review and approved their in elderly-related service programs.

"It's a feeling out process," Babcock said, when asked by the Courier what type of relationship his new commission has with other agencies.

Admittedly another sumbling block has been his coalition with Michigan Governor William Milliken to form a super human service agency that would combine the Department of Mental Health, Department of Social Services and Michigan Department of Public Health into one agency.

Babcock said he supports the concept and said his agency is a forerunner to that concept.

The state aging director was one of 400 attending a public hearing in Gaylord to discuss a proposed state plan for programs on aging funded on the Older Americans Act.

The act involves $2.2 million in federal funds for operation of aging programs throughout the state, in addition to a nutrition program for seniors in congregate setting and home delivery of meals to shut-ins.

The nutrition program involves $3.6 million.

Babcock said the commission has until August to submit a comprehensive development plan to state legislature on what they propose to do.

"The basic objective is to get one same objective," he said about his agency's course of action.

In addition to establishing area planning councils, Babcock said his agency hopes to provide increased transportation services were being proposed for Northern Michigan.

During the hearing, Charlevoix County Social Services Chairman Vern Whiteford asked why Northern Michigan was not a part of a designated area.

Babcock said they tried to only designate areas that they could provide enough funding for.

"We are faced with the problems of limited funds," he replied in front of 400 senior citizens.

He said there were only 11 out of 13 regions in the state that were designated.

"We just ran out of money," he said, indicating that 955 percent of the elderly population was in downstate areas.

Whiteford then asked what will happen without a designation and Babcock said they would only be eligible for 75 percent instead of 90 percent of the funding available from the federal government.

"Why should we organize if no money is available?" Whiteford retorted.

Babcock said it was good to get an organization going for identity purposes, as well as making themselves available for other public services.

After further discussion, Whiteford asked if they were spending too much money on administration and not enough on projects.

Babcock said only 7.8 percent was being spent on administration.

"And we're also trying to get that down," he said.

Charlevoix Has 114 Accidents According to State Reports

There were 114 motor vehicle accidents in the city of Charlevoix last year in which 25 persons were injured and 98 cases of property damage reported. There were no fatalities.

These figures and many others covering traffic accidents in Michigan in 1973 are covered in "Michigan Traffic Accident Facts" just released by the Department of State Police.

In Charlevoix County, there were 683 motor vehicle accidents, causing five deaths, 270 personal injuries, and 503 cases of property damage.

Of the 683 accidents, 360 of them occurred on local city streets, including the 114 in Charlevoix.

There were 13,143 motor vehicles, including motorcycles, registered in Charlevoix County in 1973.

Statewide, there were 350,864 reported accidents, of which 110,285 were personal injury and 238,630 were property damage accidents.

There were 2,213 motor vehicle deaths in Michigan in 1973, of which 364 were pedestrians.

The state death rate is down 45 from 1972 and personal injury accidents down 3,388.

Seventy-two bicycle riders were killed in Michigan in traffic accidents and 4,013 injured. Children under 15 accounted for 43 of the deaths.

Motorcycles and scooters accounted for 209 of the vehicle deaths last year, snowmobiles were responsible for 25, farm equipment on roadways was involved in 10 deaths, and collisions with deer caused five deaths.

LIEUTENANT COMMANDER Roger R. Roznoski officially took over the U.S. Coast Guard Cutter Sundew in Change of Command Ceremonies held last Thursday aboard ship. He relieved Lieutenant Commander Jeffrey Bull who has received a new assignment.

Charlevoix Hospital

New Emergency Services

Three new physicians have come to the Charlevoix Area Hospital for 14-hour a day emergency and outpatient duty beginning today.

They will be available from 10:00 a.m. until midnight. After midnight, emergencies will be handled by regular staff physicians.

Two of the new physicians will remain through Labor Day, but the third will set up a regular practice in the Charlevoix Medical Center about August 1 and join the hospital staff.

Dr. Dennis Joy will be the new permanent staff member. The other physicians, contracted for through the Northern Emergency Physicians group in Grayling, will stay through the summer to help the hospital with its added patient load. They are Dr. Daniel Sexton and Dr. Douglas Furman.

According to Richard Krueger, hospital administrator, vacationers and tourists double the emergency room load.

About half of the persons entering the emergency room need real emergency care, Krueger stated. The remainder have such summer complaints as skin rashes, upset stomachs and ear aches.

In adding the extra physicians, the hospital is seeking to provide better and quicker health care to people in the area and at the same time relieve the pressure on the regular physicians.

County Commissioner Honored

I. Lee Moerland, Charlevoix County commissioner from the 15th District, was the subject of "Meet a 'Mich-Commish' " in the June issue of "Michigan Counties Today."

There are approximately 600 county commissioners in the state of Michigan so the selection of Moerland to appear in the column is an honor for Charlevoix County.

The sketch of Moerland reads:

"Born (46 years ago) and raised in the north end of Grand Rapids.

"Married and father of two children, Tiffhothy 17 and Karrilee 12.

"He is a dyed in the wool Republican, active in local, county and state politics.

"In 1956 to 1960 he served as alderman on council of City of Charlevoix.

"He was appointed to the county Board of Supervisors in 1965 to fill a vacancy. He was elected to subsequent terms as a supervisor and then as a commissioner.

"He is chairman of the county Ways and Means Committee and the Airports Committee. He also serves on the Personnel and Audit Committees.

"He is president of the Charlevoix Volunteer Fire Department.

"He is employed as assistant secretary-treasurer and manager of the Belvedere Club and Belvedere Golf Club, Inc.

"He also serves on the Legislative Committee of the Michigan Association of Counties, and in previous years on the Resolutions Committee".

It's Time To Clean-up Election Campaigns

Whether the nation gets a clean election process, free of the corrosive influence of special interest money, will be decided this month.

After months of delay, a House committee is about to send a campaign finance bill to the full House for debate.

In this debate, Representatives will have the opportunity to vote for meaningful reform.

We along with other groups feel acceptable legislation must provide a mixed system of small contributions to federal candidates from many private citizens which would be matched by similar amounts of funds from the federal government.

In this mixed system, there is no place for influence-buying through large donations from well-heeled special interests.

The legislation also must place reasonable limits on candidate expenditures and assure strict enforcement of the whole law.

Enforcement is of great importance. Even the best law is no good if ignored. A crucial part of reform legislation is a well-financed, completely independent enforcement agency.

We feel it is a particularly good time to make such a move with California voters recently passing a sweeping reform law that limits campaign spending, controls lobbyists and provides for strict enforcement.

Even the nation's governors, meeting in Seattle in June, called on "all levels of government" to limit campaign expenditures and contributions and to develop public campaign expenditures and contributions and to develop public campaign financing projects.

The U.S. Senate has also three times since 1972 passed strong bills to reform campaign financing, twice including the provision of public funding.

But the U.S. House of Representatives remains unmoved.

We urge U.S. Congressman Philip Ruppe to take a steadfast reform stand and to get the House moving.

Our Waters Are Headed For Alot of Troubles

There is a big word, "eutrophication," for the death of lakes. It is a process frequently speeded up by man. Man also can arrest the process if he tries hard enough-as the recent history of Lake Tahoe illustrates, and as we hope our own lakes will be allowed to demonstrate.

Eutrophication is accelerated when silting and the level of nutrients increase. Marine plant life grows more rapidly, using up oxygen and thus tending to choke out other forms of life. The lake begins to fill in and die faster than it otherwise would.

As noted above, man is often responsible for this effect. Farming and other activities increase the amount of silt carried into lakes. The runoff is also likely to include fertilizer from nearby farming operations. But above all, the flow of sewage dramatically increases the amount of nutrients in the water, which is the case at Long Lake.

Lake Tahoe offers an example of what can happen--and, more important, what can be done about it. Researchers from the University of California at Davis find that after 16 years of rapid growth the rate of annual fertility increase in the lake has dropped sharply. They attribute this improvement to two factors.

One, says the Tahoe Research Group, is diversion of sewage from septic tanks to treatment facilities. Control of siltation and of nutrients carried into the lake by runoff is considered even more significant. The main point to be made is that there have been efforts over a period of years to halt the decline of Lake Tahoe, and that these efforts have worked.

This experience lights the way to curbing the eutrophication of other endangered lakes throughout the country.

The price of postage is outrageous. I remember when you could mail a letter first class for only 3 cents. If things don't get better, we might as well go back to the Pony Express.

—D. L., Southfield

You'd be disappointed if we did. In Pony Express days, U.S. postage was just what it is today — 10 cents per letter — and that was only the beginning of the cost! Additional Pony Express charges on every letter ranged from $1 per half-ounce to $5 per ounce, and it took 12 days to get a letter across the country. The Pony Express advertised for "Young, skinny, wiry fellows not over 18. Must be expert riders, willing to risk death daily. Orphans preferred." These model employees were paid the grand sum of $25 a week.

Today the average worker in the United States works 1 minute 16 seconds to pay for the 10-cent stamp that goes on a first-class letter. You might be interested to know that in Great Britain and France he would work 2 minutes 34 seconds, and he would work 2 minutes 22 seconds in Germany and Japan to pay for comparable postal service.

Residents Point Out Deceptions In Land Sales Act

TO PROPERTY OWNERS AS TO LAND USE BILLS NO. HB 5055 (Original Land Use Bill) HB 6097 (New Land Use Bill) and the LAND SALES ACT (Public Act 286 of 1972, as amended, being sections 565.801 to 565.835 of the Michigan Compiled Laws).

A bill to control the sales of private lands in Michigan has been approved and in effect in the State of Michigan since October 1, 1973. An even more comprehensive bill is before the legislature with almost daily calls from the Governor, editorial writers, and others strongly advocating its rapid passing. In our opinion, each bill is so deceptive in its very nature as to endanger the property rights—all property rights—of every Michigan resident. One of the most deceptive features is that the Land Sales Bill was passed and made into law while a committee appointed by the Governor still had the task of deciding what the bill really covered. This at least was reported in the public press.

Up to now, all aspects of land ownership have been confined to the actual owner of record without the State or Nation being involved except in emergencies. For the State of Michigan to usurp any of these rights and privileges of ownership--use of property, adapting it to use, beautifying it or finally selling it whole or in part—is to subject us to pure Marxian Communism which fortunately up to now has been illegal in the U.S.A. Claims have been made for each of these bills that seem to us pure bunkum. The Land Sales Act, for example, was said to be designated to guarantee honesty in real estate promotion and sales.

The need for consumer protection was another claim. Actually we already have such legal safeguards set up in Michigan law for real estate sales. These are required reading in the Michigan Real Estate Red Book for every real estate broker and salesperson. The argument for the Use Act seems to be just as far off the beam. Who in Lansing is qualified to go to any piece of land in any area of Michigan and tell the owner how to use it? Certainly not the inexperienced office type personnel which make up typical State and National bureaus.

The Land Use Act is being sold to us, its particulars not yet spelled out...a pig in a poke...because all Michigan land is alleged to be in danger of being sold as the owner would like to sell it!

What's wrong with that? Isn't everything we own in Michigan handled just this way? Homes? Factories? Shopping Centers? Gasoline? Is the State planning to control all lands (and properties) in the future? This is Marxian stuff, a threat to each of us.

The proper remedy, as most of us know, if the State needs land is to buy it, or if necessary, go through the familiar processes of land acquisition followed in building new highways. Tested, familiar legal channels would then be used.

There is only one defense against these bills—a defense we strongly advocate for all land owners and all persons who hope to own land, to vote out of office any and all persons in Michigan who have been parties to the development and passing of these bills.

Complicating the problem of proper land use is the almost frenzied attempt to put sanitary sewers almost everywhere they can possibly be put. This has many of the features of a powerful lobby group and has been rising in intensity for some ten years.

A careful study of the problem just might disclose that sanitary sewers are

Resident Tired

June 27, 1974

To the Charlevoix Courier:

Is there any rhyme, reason or valid excuse for the fact that year after year, the most heavily traveled road in Charlevoix County (the one that leads ultimately to "Beer Can Alley") remains unpaved?

When wet, it is a guagmire of wet clay; when dry its dust is the most colossal pollutant of clean air in the state.

L. A. Wheeler

Stumping the Woods

...With Ollie O. Stump jr.

In a fit of nostalgia, I visited the old alma-mater Newberry High School where my graduation in 1936 astounded every teacher whose efforts toward that achievement were above and beyond the call of duty.

Senior class pictures, hanging along the main corridor, displayed many family likenesses linking the present to the past; the faces of parents a bit more faded after more than two decades of public exhibition.

As my footsteps led me slowly into the past, I arrested time momentarily beneath the class of '32. Puzzled, I shifted my gaze to '34. What happened to the class of '33 I wondered, since its picture was omitted. Out of curiousity I interrupted two senior faculty members of opposing sex who were chatting heatedly about some private matter.

"Pardon me" I apologized. "Could either of you tell me why the class of '33 does not grace the framed archives?"

"That was before our time as educators," snapped the woman frostily as she indignantly drew in her double chin.

I learned later that this man and wife had a combined tenure of fifty-eight years, a fact which rendered her statement a bit suspect. Seeking more reliable and accurate information from a more cooperative source I decided to visit the local Historical Society Chapter.

To say that my entrance did not lift an eyebrow would be a falsehood, a trait which I abhor. My intrusion did not open either eye of the lone patron dozing peacfully at a table in the far corner.

"Can I help you?" inquired the beefy receptionist, polishing the bar as he approached.

Extracting a fin, I ordered around of refreshments with an all inclusive gesture before mentioning my quest for information.

"What kind of information are you after" he asked me suspiciously.

"I want to find out why there is no school picture for the class of '33," I informed my flabbergasted listener.

Only after he studied me at some length, like an insect under a microscope, did he page a more authoritative source by shouting,

"Wake up Gus! Man here wants to talk to you."

Gus, a most alert sleeper, shuffled up and said,

"Want to know about the class of '33 do ye sonny? Class president was a lad named Meyers."

He stopped abruptly to eye the money in front of me, shrewdly assessing the value of expert testimony. After I corrected the oversight with the help of the bartender, Gus continued.

"1933 was the heart of the depression and that class couldn't afford a picture without losing their pride. They had an even $70.00 in their treasury and they used it to rent caps and gowns."

"Under them gowns was patched overalls and faded gingham dresses," he went on. "Kindergarten kids often ate the paste that came in gallon jars. Teachers, out of a $65.00 monthly pay, bought rulers, pencils and crayons for the kids who brought wrapping paper from home to draw on."

In the silence which followed I thought of our present educational crisis. Disapproval of a millage vote means curtailment of canoeing and golfing instruction.

"Hard to believe ain't it?" asked Gus, massaging an arthritic knee.

"Indeed it is" agreed the man behind the bar.

Terrible Jean Strikes Back

By JIM FITZGERALD

The question most-often asked me is: "Is there really a Terrible Jean?" My sterling prose has made my big sister famous and, typically, she doesn't even appreciate it. Instead, she is threatening my life, as you soon shall read.

Yes, dear readers, certainly is a Terrible Jean. Her official name is Mrs. William Fitzgerald of Southfield, Mich. Besides being the mother of 5, she is also a talented artist. She paints pictures for all of her friends and sometimes stops strangers on the street and insists they allow her to sketch them. But she has never painted anything for me, not even my kitchen.

A natural question is how come she is a Mrs. but her last name is still the same as mine. Her explanation is that by astounding coincidence she fell in love with a guy named Fitzgerald, no relation. But the truth is his name was really Schwartz. Terrible Jean forced him to change it under threat of death by being pounded into the ground. She didn't want to change the initials welded on her sweat sox.

Anyway, in a recent column I described my childhood as a continuous game of Follow the Leader with me always following 18 blocks behind Terrible Jean - but still lost in her shadow. She has DEMANDED equal space to retort. All of a sudden I am 5 years old again and whimpering. All editors are beseeched not to change a word of the following letter which was carved into a boulder and thrown through my front window from 70 miles away.

"Dear Follower:

"What an apt description of yourself, James. A 'Follower' you were. You followed me to the drug store, the tennis court, my girl friends' houses - even to the bathroom where you remained screaming and kicking at the door till I made my exit. You even followed me on my first date - my runny-nosed weasel of a little brother.

"You devoted your entire little life to making me miserable. You should have grown-up to be G. Gordon Liddy. Your literary career began when with your fat little hands, you recorded in your ever-present notebook all of my transgressions for future blackmail use. Witness your lifetime of complete sloth around the house.

"If your wife Pat - God bless her - hadn't come to the rescue you would probably be living in our basement now and following me around the house - a typical no-good Irish bachelor.

"I ask you readers - if there are any of you out there besides Mother and Aunt Madeline - wouldn't you have pounded him into the ground too?

"While my lawyers prepare my libel suit against you, I decided I must defend myself against further growth of my Monster image. I didn't mind so much when I heard you were getting mail addressed to 'The Brother of Terrible Jean.' But when brother-in-law Tony, who recently began working for Mueller Brass in Port Huron, told me of his experience, it was too much. It seems there are several old-timers around Mueller's who remember when Dad worked there. When Tony told them he was married to Eddie Fitz's daughter, they recoiled in horror: 'NOT TERRIBLE JEAN!'

"So now Bill and I are having fun planning our retaliation. Incidentally, readers, my husband Bill is a strong male head-of-the family type, even if he is a good cook. One of his greatest assets is his willingness for these many years to attend our family gatherings and endure the jealous insults of helpless Jim. I suspect it is because Jim is a worse singer than he is.

"Till we see you at the alumni dance, obnoxious brother, I'm putting you down for 25 books of raffle tickets. You can pay me before I strangle you with your raincoat.

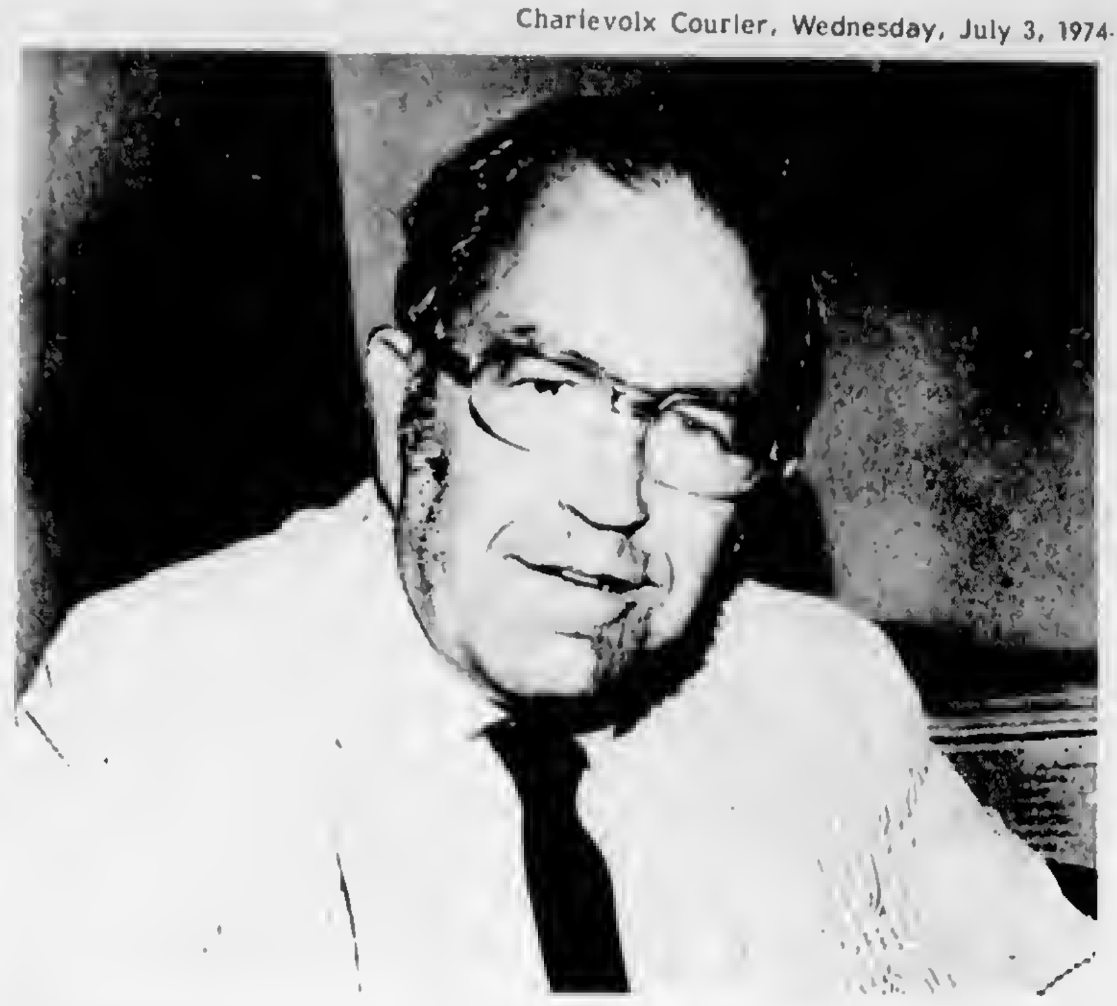
Hate and snarls,
Terrible Jean"

WELL. SEEING this is my column, there is no way Terrible Jean is going to get the last word. I will simply add I'm glad she wrote that violent letter. It proves I haven't been kidding you about my black and blue childhood. Now she has publicly promised to strangle me. The Godfather's Godmother has a contract out on me.

Onward and Upward, with 56 bodyguards.

Meet Charlevoix

Meet Robert Wexstaff



Acting City Administrator Robert Wexstaff has been in his position since last September when the city administrator decided to return to private industry.

It's a tough position and the Charlevoix Courier probes some of the problems connected with the job.

Before entering city government several years ago as city assessor, Wexstaff had worked for the Will Flow Corporation for a number of years.

He received his formal education in engineering from Marquette University and the University of Michigan.

COURIER: What are the responsibilities as you see them of the City Administrator's position for Charlevoix.

WEXSTAFF: The first responsibility I think is to respond and govern activities as the mayor and council is. The administrator's job is not specifically provided for in the Charter that the city operates under. As far as the day to day, in addition to following directions of the council and mayor, the responsibilities are really anything that doesn't conflict with statutory responsibilities of the clerk or the treasurer.

COURIER: You almost are filling in then for the undescribed jobs.

COURIER: Do you find that interesting?

WEXSTAFF: Very, very interesting. It is challenging. The volume of paper work that the Federal and State Governments require to be generated by a municipality are a little crushing at times. It does require a lot of extra hours of activity which are unavoidable, but by and large, it is a very interesting business.

COURIER: Now that you have worked with the city, how do you think the economic picture looks for Charlevoix during the ensuing months?

WEXSTAFF: Charlevoix, there is no question, is quite involved in a boom. People are desiring to pull their roots from city areas and move north in unprecedented numbers and hence our property values are responding to supply and demand. This is giving us a somewhat distorted value picture, if you will.

COURIER: What type of burden is this new influx of people putting on the city as far as services go? Is there any at this point?

WEXSTAFF: Our total utility is, of course, having to serve more and more people and, fortunately, there has been some rather good planning in the past by and large, that is encompassing this growth rather painlessly. This isn't to say that things don't have to be accomplished in the near future, keep up, but it's not an impossible situation. We just want to be careful not to respond to panic requests at times and go off in directions that aren't ultimately going to be productive nor economic. We have heard that we're extremely short of water for instance, but in reviewing a 1972 study it appears that this is not entirely true. In fact, with fairly minor modifications we can increase our pumping capabilities to 3.8 million gallons per day and our designated year on the 1972 study was year 2000, wherein it was estimated that we would only need 3.9 million gallons per day. So things should be done that have to be done to the water system, no question, but I don't think we have to spend the kind of money that we were thinking of recently.

COURIER: Talking about people coming up here in a different light, what is the future of the Charlevoix Marina. There seem to be a lot of improvements and talk in the air?

WEXSTAFF: The Charlevoix Marina is unique in that we have one of the finest land-locked harbors in the Great Lakes, maybe in the country. Deep water protected beyond belief, really. Everyone that is a boater apparently likes to come to Charlevoix and most of them would be coming year after year except they've been turned back so many times. Many of them now are not coming in. To expand this harbor to accomplish anything productive, seems to say that we are going to have to develop floating buoys and anchor them out in the deeper portions of the harbor and pick up maybe 40 to 60 additional docks. This would be a tremendous help. We are unique in another sense in that this city has in perpetuality made an agreement with the State wherein we haven't provided for any dockage except transients. Most of the other harbors are providing 10, 15 percent of their dockage for their home boaters.

COURIER: Do you feel we are in a better situation by doing that then?

WEXSTAFF: It eliminates a lot of decisions on our part, namely if we had 15 percent set aside for townspeople, then how are you going to decide who will have the docks. So to this extent it has been an easy way out for the city, but it really hasn't solved any problems. The home boater is disconcerted, and we don't have enough docks for the transients, either, so we really haven't filled the bill. Now, by retaining a 300 foot section that we are going to retain with steel wall and not involving ourselves with state funds on this expansion, we can now see that we can serve the home boater without involving this agreement with the state. This first stage and then ultimately going to a floating buoy in the state area as well, I think we can cover two bases here without too much difficulty.

COURIER: In a recent interview, the Charlevoix Recreation Director mentioned there has been a lot of problems with trash in the parks and one mentioned in particular was Park Avenue. What do you think could be done by the public to improve that situation there?

WEXSTAFF: Well, in addition to the city crews working in the park which they are instructed to do, and there are active work orders on this, because of the size of the park and the scope of the potential usage, I feel the service clubs in Charlevoix could be most helpful if they would cooperate with the Girl Scouts and the Boy Scouts—whoever might help the police, that is to say, pick up trash and just generally help keep the thing clean. The broken glass, etc., makes it almost dangerous in areas to even use the park. This should be eliminated and can be. Ultimately, I envision the underbrush, the scrub weeds, etc., can be removed, and we can put in security lights and more and more people having leisure time can then enjoy the park. It's unique, I don't think there's another town in northern Michigan that has such a lovely spot.

COURIER: Now that the city has put this large clock up at the tennis courts, how is the tennis situation looking?

WEXSTAFF: Well you can't be entirely sure unless you are up there all the time, but by the number of calls that we were getting compared with the number of calls we are now getting, which is almost nothing, it seems to be going quite smoothly now. We still don't have extension of netting installed. The nets should be here shortly and we will get them erected. This should eliminate 99 percent of the balls leaving the area, and it looks promising. People seem to be enjoying it, and I think that it just took a little more communication to set it up.

Probate Court--Charlevoix's "Quiet Court"

By PEG OHLE

JOHN T. MURPHY

The Probate Court is a court of many duties, but mostly it is concerned with persons who need help the most-children and the mentally incompetent.

Judge John T. Murphy heads the 7th Probate District Court, which includes Charlevoix and Emmet Counties.

Judge Murphy calls his court the "quiet court". All hearings are conducted in closed session, without publicity.

In Charlevoix, he is assisted by Betty Litzner, Juvenile Officer, Sally Taber, Register of Probate, and Betty Johnston, the Court Stenographer, who also serves the court in Emmet County.

They handle all cases of child abuse and neglect, juvenile delinquency, juvenile probation, adoptions and many other matters pertaining to minors in the county.

The Probate Court is also responsible for the welfare of incompetent persons of all ages. It appoints guardians, and determines whether or not there should be involuntary commitments to institutions.

Perhaps the best known work of the Probate Court is in probating the estates of deceased persons. All property of a deceased person not held jointly with someone else must go through the Court.

Judge Murphy talks much about the Juvenile Court aspect of his duties. He says that the incidence of child abuse, neglect, molestation, even incest, is high and that the court is involved in perhaps only ten percent of actual cases because so few are reported.

Judge Murphy blames the high divorce rate and lowering public morality for the mistreatment of children.

Juvenile delinquency, which often starts as young as ten years of age, is another aspect of Juvenile Court work.

All instances of law breaking by a juvenile that are brought the the attention of law enforcement agencies go to the Juvenile Court. It considers each case individually, but instead of fining or sending to jail as a court for adults would, the Juvenile Court must decide whether to let the delinquent remain under the guardianship of his parents or another person, be made a ward of the court, or sent to a corrective institution.

Betty Litzner is in charge of investigating all cases of child neglect and delinquency, and shares responsibility for checking cases of child abuse with the Department of Social Services. She is on call 24 hours a day and often accompanies a police officer to answer a call in which juveniles are involved.

Sometimes one or more children are immediately taken from a home where they are being mistreated, or where the parents cannot handle a recalcitrant juvenile.

On occasion, such juveniles are put in a juvenile detention home–the nearest one is in Saginaw – until further disposition can be made of their cases. They may later be placed in foster homes, which it is also Mrs. Kitzner's job to investigate and license.

The Juvenile Court has the authority to terminate parental custody as much as a Circuit Court may grant divorces.

The Juvenile Court of Charlevoix County has contact with only five to seven percent of all juveniles, about half of the contacts concerning serious matters.

Mrs. Litzner says that in some families she may have contact with all of the children, perhaps five or more.

Mrs. Litzner was appointed to her post by Governor Milliken on the recommendation of Judge Murphy and has been on the job since January of 1972.

She has a degree in social work from Wayne State University and is paid from the State Department of Social Services.

Juvenile delinquency is on the rise, according to Judge Murphy, not only in underprivileged families, but in families of affluent means. He says alcoholism is more of a problem than drugs.

In the field of adoption, Judge Murphy says that more adoptions are now being processed for step-parents than for strangers. When a parent remarries, he or she often adopts the child or children of the new spouse.

Of his work with the mentally diseased, Judge Murphy cites the fact that one of every 20 persons spends some time in a mental institution. He also says that more persons are committed to mental institutions than are sent to prisons by other courts.

Three-fourths of Judge Murphy's basic salary is paid by the State and the remainder by Charlevoix and Emmet Counties. This is his fourth year on the bench in Charlevoix County and his twenty-second year in Emmet County

It is difficult for the public to understand the financial burden the Probate Court places on the County, according to Judge Murphy.

The law requires that the County pay for the care of a child in a foster home, and for the first year for a person in a mental institution.

The law also requires that the County pay for the care of persons in jails and the upkeep of jails, but that burden is often overlooked, the judge says.

Judge Murphy is proud of the record of his court. He reports that there have been no more than six appeals from decisions he has rendered, none of which were successful.

Electrolysis

Fix Your Hairy Problems

NOW YOU can remove those unsightly hairs through a new process that is available to Charlevoix area residents.

Nothing is more annoying or more embarrassing to some women than an unsightly growth of hair, particularly on their faces.

According to Electrogist Beth Ann Boss of Charlevoix if you have a problem, you're not alone.

She says it happens to the daintiest, most feminine of women.

A life-long resident of Charlevoix, Miss Boss first became interested with hair after attending North Central Michigan College and working as a Petoskey Doctor's assistant.

While working there, she said the office received a lot of telephone calls inquiring about electolysis work.

Since there wasn't one in the area and realizing the need, Miss Boss decided to head back to school to become trained.

She attended one of two Michigan schools offering the 300-hour program–Alexandria Beauty College in Ann Arbor.

During the program, that she recenty completed, Miss Boss learned about hair, the structure of skin, skin diseases and cleanliness, as well as practical training.

"We first worked on ourselves, so we could get the feel of how it felt," she said.

To kill hair, she said a small, fine needle is inserted in the hair root canal, where electricity is applied in each and every hair.

"It can be quite a job if there is a lot of hair," she said.

Miss Boss said electrolysis is done quite a bit in larger department stores located in the metro areas, but is new to this area.

"Your movie stars you'll find have it done to their arms and legs," she said.

Other people have it done to the chin areas and upper lips.

"People have the idea it will involve blood, but it never does," she continued.

"You get this from people who have never had a problem, but you never get it from those who do."

It's Time For The Arts

Take Dancing Lessons Here This Summer

East Jordan's Portside Arts Center gets into swing this week with summer dance classes at the Elm Point Property located between East Jordan and Charlevoix on M-66.

Dance instructor Joan Karff, wife of Rabi Sam Karff and summer residents of Charlevoix, returns for another dance program that begins Wednesday, July 3.

Classes will be held on Wednesdays between 1:30 and 2:30 p.m. for children, 5 to 7, interested in pre-ballet and at 2:45 to 3:45 p.m. for adult dance exercise and body dynamics.

Modern Ballet for children, ages 10 to 14, will be from 7 to 8 p.m. on Thursday, as well as another adult dance exercise and body dynamics class from 8 to 9 p.m.

Mrs. Karff has been teaching modern dance each summer in Charlevoix for about six summers, in addition to spending a great deal of time in Chicago studying and teaching dance.

"I hated the thought of not dancing during the summers and decided it would be fun to offer classes there," she told the Charlevoix Courier recently.

"Modern dance might be described as "barefoot ballet' but it is actually much freer and I think–more interesting than classical ballet.

She said that although modern dance demands a certain measure of physical discipline, it also allows for creativity and improvization, which makes it especially fitting for children.

Mrs. Karff said her classes are usually divided into two sections–the exercise section, which is aimed at making the body strong and flexible, and the composition section, which allows children to create very individual and imaginative pieces of their own.

Last year, she said she offered adult classes which also stress the physical fitness aspects of the dance technique.

Classes in Charlevoix will be taught in the library basement from 4 to 5 p.m. on Tuesdays, with the adult class from 7 to 8 p.m. on Mondays.

Later is the summer, instructor-in-residence Carol Wald will teach art classes in watercolor, portriature, children, painting, design and composition.

Miss Wald, who was at Elm Point last summer, had a very successful season in her New York Studio with many shows, featured at least twice in the New York Times and several covers of World Magazine.

Then in August, there will be drama classes and theatre arts from July 30 to August 2 from the "The Covenant Players." A performance will be held at the end of the lessons.

"Dunes" Now Opening

The development nestled on the shores of Lake Michigan only has a few finishing touches to be completed, but now has a model open for inspection.

The building, which is finished in brick and cedar, represents a European flavor and according to developer Ron Steffes is one of the best in the world having been designed by Architect Jack Begrow of Charlevoix.

He said they attempted to create a building that blended in with the charm of Charlevoix and would fit into the town.

The general contractor from Southfield has been in the landscape profession for many years having been a major contributor to the Garden Exhibit in Detroit's Cobo Hall for the last 10 years and walking away with top honors one year.

In an attempt to maintain as much of the existing beach as possible, Steffes says he is placing many of boulders earlier made famous by Earl Young along the beach as a retaining wall.

As a pioneer of indoor swimming pools and owner of American Pools, Inc., Steffes says residents will have a $200,000 indoor pool for their use at any time.

The 20 by 40 ft. pool will also have a hydo - therapy unit that will provide a whirlpool effect for those wanting to relax.

Then of course, there are the units themselves, Each have a spacious balcony that overlooks the magnificent Lake Michigan.

There are 24 large 2 and 3-bedroom apartments each with a fireplace to compliment the living and dining room areas.

Each two-bedroom unit offers two full baths, while the three-bedroom units have third bath and dressing room.

The Dunes apartments also offer a whole host of other features ranging from electric heat and air-conditioning to fully-equipped Westinghouse appliances for both the kitchen and laundry areas.

There are also car ports, a sauna and large game room.

One other unique feature about The Dunes is the 10 guest apartment units that will be available for friends and relatives to stay in during their visits.

Charlevoix Debate Needs Your Support

BY GAYLE BOSS
CHARLEVOIX DEBATER

Enthusiastic about results of the 1973-74 debate season, returning debaters are anxious to begin preparing for the 1974-75 school year.

In the past most students have found that those who attend summer workshops have had a far better chance of succeeding than those who must wait for the opening of the school year to begin work.

Why is this so? A number of reasons.

First of all there are the additional materials available on college campuses that can not be supplied by local libraries or through prepared manuals.

These materials make a great deal of difference when preparing the debaters' case.

Secondly, additional professional personnel who have time to concentrate on small groups with intensive work geared to skills of a single level.

This is unlike the classroom in which all levels of ability must be served by one instructor.

Third, time to work entirely on one subject without the daily interruptions of the usual class load.

Fourth, the experience of practice and a broader outlook on what other areas of the state are emphasizing. Even though all schools must abide by the same rules, style, confidence and interpretation of the topic for the year can vary widely.

Last, the opportunity to gain self-confidence in the ability to handle all styles of debating through camp practice rounds.

Also, the self-confidence to know that the student has the ability to handle any size school, whatever their opportunities, from small C schools in upper Michigan to metropolitan schools which dominate state awards.

It is the feeling of this C.H.S. state finals team that the opportunity to go to summer institute and the early metropolitan tournaments which they attended this year were the key to the success of team.

Without institute there is no way that the team can be ready for competition much before November.

Early October tournaments downstate have always been out of reach of the C.H.S. team if they did not attend summer sessions because research has never been completed.

Those students, Gayle Boss and Anita Potter, who attended camp last summer, are so convinced of the merit of the institute that they are strenuously promoting participation in summer programs for as many debaters as possible.

Their effort has increased interest in camp to seven members of the team who would truly like to go.

However, with limited funds this may not be possible. Most students involved in the program are college bound and find it difficult to pay out money for camp, plus lose two weeks pay for summer jobs they must miss.

We also find ourselves with the difficulty of funding students whose parents have more than one child on the debate team.

For this reason the team is looking for support from the community in an effort to afford as many team members an opportunity to attend camp as possible.

Any organization, individual, or business that would be interested in sponsoring or helping to sponsor a student would be appreciated. Members of the team are available to present programs to groups who may feel they do not understand the program well enough to immediately commit themselves.

If interested in helping or wishing a program, please contact Mrs. Connie Ford, high school debate coach at 547-4227, or Miss Gayle Boss and Kim Blanchard, senior debate members, at 547-6739 and 547-2909 respectively.

A welcome change from the bad news, the following is one that will help restore your faith in men that will do good deeds. On Monday 4 sons and a grandson came from the Grand Rapids area to paint the home of their parents Mr. and Mrs. Tony Kuiper.

Getting the house painted early in the afternoon were sons, Albert, Glen, Vernon and Bob and his son. Congratulations Kuiper sons!

Mrs. Keith (Joan) Blake and 2 children from Detroit came and spent the week with her mother. Did she sit down and visit, by no means, she cleaned house last week for her mother. We are proud of you too, Joan.

THE HORSE CAME BACK HOME

Do animals think? Do they remember? We often talk of dumb animals, but they often show us humans many things.

Take the brown and white shetland pony named Princess, owned and loved by the Martin Rubingh family. She and her son were pastured about a mile south of the Rubinghs farm. (She never liked it there.) As the horse population was multiplying, Mr. Rubingh decided to sell Princess, in spite of the children's wails, Clarence Boss decided he would buy her, so Joan, the second daughter went to get her and ride her home. And the closer Princess got to "home" the faster she ran, she remembered, neighing as she came into the drive way.

To bring her to Mrs. Boss, it was decided, to let two others on horse back to accompany Princess & rider over there. She was tied to a post but very unhappy to see the other's leave. Soon the Rubingh's phone rang. Princess had broken the tie rope and was gone. Soon she was back home traveling the distance of 5 miles in no time! Again the family bade a sad farewell to Princess and this time she went in a pick up truck.

Will she be back? The family thinks so.

Friday, Mr. and Mrs. Garrett McDowell and daughters Gwen and Gayla honored Mrs. McDowell's mother Florence Parker of Central Lake, by taking her out to supper on her birthday.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter John Drenth spent last week in St. Louis Park, Minnesota visiting their daughter Joan and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Van Stedum and two sons of Grand Haven spent Saturday and Sunday with his mother Mrs. Herman Van Stedum and called on his father in Meadow Brook.

Miss Marcia Drenth of Grand Rapids has finished teaching school and spent the weekend with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Peter John Drenth and brother Edwin and family of East Jordan.

Dr. and Mrs. Dale McKenzie from Caledonia spent the weekend with her parents Mr. and Mrs. Willard Vander Ark and sister Mary and family. The infant son Eric Blake of Fred and Mary Taylor was baptized Sunday morning by Rev. Marvin Vander Vliet. After the ceremony, Mrs. McKenzie (Diana) sang a solo and dedicated it to her nephew Eric Blake. Guest minister Sunday was Ralph Heynen of Grand Rapids.

Glenn Rubingh with 3 others of Community School are attending a citizens seminar at Albion College this week. They are sponsored by the Michigan Farm Bureau women. Mrs. Dick Wieland drove them down Monday morning.

Mrs. Gertrude Van Houten of Grand Rapids is with us this week after an absence of three years. She is a house guest of her niece Mrs. Gerrit Geo Drenth and is visiting Hattie Kuiper today.

Tuesday evening, Mr. and Mrs. Garrett McDowell gave a birthday party for Edna Meggison of Central Lake, their daughters Gwenda and Gayla and Mrs. Garland McDowell of Oxbow Lake the latters husband Everrett McDowell was also present.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Ruis of Battle Creek were Monday visitors with her parents Mr. and Mrs. Lynn Carpenter and Tuesday visitors with his parents Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ruis.

Pamela, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Kowalk left for Germany, with several hundred students from Detroit Sunday at 9 p.m. They will be exchange students for the next 6 weeks. Pamela's home will be with Bogislav von Heyden, 46 Dortmund, Berghofen, Pfauenaugen, Weg 1, Germany. Members of the Wesleyan Church bid Pamela, "bon voyage" with a party held Thursday night at the Wooden Shoe Park in Ellsworth. Esther Kirby baked a beautiful cake with words "Bon voyage". Pam inscribed on the cake. They also presented her with a money tree. Hostesses were Esther Kirby, Mrs. Gordon McPherson and Mrs. David Willett.

Word was received last week of the passing of Mrs. Catherine Bean of Detroit. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Vroom, who spent many years here in the summer. The Vroom's address is 4980 Opal St., Apt. 125, Detroit, Mi. 48236.

Mrs James Rubingh and son Glenn went to Michigan State, Friday where they attended a 4-H award recognition dinner and Glen received his award in Agriculture. On returning they visited Mr. and Mrs. Gary Rubingh in Pontiac.

Mr. and Mrs. Marinus De Young of Allendale called on Mettie Vander Ark, Friday en route to Rudyard.

Though it is summer vacation time the Ellsworth Community School continues to be a busy place. The swim program got off to a good start with an advance and an intermediate class. Miss Nancy De Hollander is in attendance as a life guard. She has been a safety instructor for three years in Grand Rapids. Lessons are taught in the morning and open swimming from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. More students are invited to join.

Mrs. Sue Douglas and Lizbeth Ash are staff members for the 40 children enrolled in the remedial class. Aides to the teachers are Elina Meconi, Mary Ann Maher and Jenelle Smalley.

Superintendent Robert Gaunt reports that the court case being brought by Cheri Holley versus the school board members has begn postponed due to the illness of Judge Fitzpatrick of Traverse City.

The Sport Club Boosters are meeting Thursday to plan for the annual play given by the Boosters.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Parmeter of Union Lake spent last week here, visiting her sister Grace Klooster and his mother, Mrs. Bertha Geller.

Rev. and Mrs. Vernon Geurkink and son Brett and Eric of Grand Rapids are spending this week in this area. Rev. Geurkink is a former pastor of the Christian Reformed Church.

Mr. and Mrs. George Drenth, Mr. and Mrs. John Kooyer and Anne Osterbaan were Sunday morning luncheon guests of Grace Klooster. Although one side of Mrs. Kloosters Wisteria bush had winter killed the other side with its dark red flowers was beautiful to see.

Tennis Talk

If you have been out to the public tennis courts in the last two weeks, you have seen giant clocks posted on the fence in front of each court. They are not there just for looks. They serve an important function.

Anytime you go on the courts, you should set the clocks at the exact time you start playing. This will allow anyone who comes to the courts later to know when the next court will be available. If the courts are full, the person waiting should simply hang his or her racquet on the corner of the clock.

Exactly one hour after the time shown on the clock, the people playing should relinquish the court if they see a racquet hanging on the clock.

This system is an excellent guarantee against any one person hogging the courts for hours. Under this system, everyone has a equal chance to play on a first come, first serve basis.

There is no preferential treatment and nobody can play more than an hour if people are waiting to play.

The city council made this public court innovation when it was brought to their attention that the courts were over-crowded. After investigating several possibilities, the council decided the clock system to be the most efficient (and most economical). I feel the decision is an excellent one.

The clock system is used in many public courts in Florida where there is no attendant. Since Florida courts are used year round, an effectual system had to be developed. The clock system proved to be the best.

At first, I noticed that not many people were using the clocks at the Charlevoix courts. As more people become familiar with them, however, the clocks will be used constantly.

If you see someone who is playing, and who has neglected to set the clock, simply ask him what time he started and set the clock for him. Eventually, everyone will understand the system and it will work smoothly.

I am the first one on the court at 9 o'clock and set my clock at that time. As I am playing, the other three courts fill up. The other people have set their clocks.

At 10 o'clock, I notice a racquet hanging on my clock and I get off the court. I, however, nobody is waiting at 10 o'clock, I continue playing until someone wants the court.

Remember, if you are waiting for a court, you should be outside the fenced-in area, it is terribly distracting to those playing to have people waiting inside the court area.

Also, there should never be anymore than four people on a court at one time. If people want to watch they should do it outside the fenced-in area.

A final note: the neighbors around the tennis courts have reported a tremendous improvement in the public behavior when tennis balls are hit over the fence. The signs in the area have been most effective in stopping the harassment of the neighbors.

Chuck Wright Takes Tennis Tournament

In other events that closed late Sunday, Edith Gilbert and Gretchen Olsen teamed up to take the women's doubles from Cricket Uhrick and Jackie Carey 6-1, 6-0.

Gretchen Olsen then won over Lisa Wiemer 6-2, 6-3 for the women's single's title.

Chuck Wright and Dave Strawbridge combined their efforts to take Hans Wiemer and Bill Streng 6-1, 6-5 to capture the men's doubles.

Wiemer and Wright will return to the courts at 6 p.m. Monday to decide the men's singles winner.

The tournament, the first city-wide event, attracted a total of 53 entries.

Singles boys 16 and under: Eric Lundteigen defeated Brian Osterberg 6-0, 5-7, 6-0 for the title.

Doubles boys 16 and under: Lundteigen and John Greene defeated Osterberg and Larry Smith 6-1, 7-5, 6-0.

Singles boys 14 and under: Steve Berlage defeated Mark Cockfield 6-3, 6-2 for this title.

Cockfield defeated Lew Kline 6-1, 6-0 to win the singles for boys 12 and under.

Twenty-two boys were entered in the tournament. However, interest on the part of the girls was lacking so no meet was run.

The second annual open tennis tournament is scheduled for August, Curt Kipke, city recreation director, said.

Lifeguards Man Beaches

Lifeguards will be manning Charlevoix's three main beaches daily, beginning this week, Curt Kipke, City Recreation director, has announced.

For the first time, the guards will operate on a 'swing' arrangement whereby they will alternate at one of the three rather than being assigned to just one beach.

Engaged for the summer in a dual role of swimming instructor and lifeguard are Chuck Novak who will head up the swimming program, Kit Lieberman, Liz Collier, Erin Arvilla and Dick Bombski. Carl Novak will also assist with the swimming program which, thus far, has attracted many registrants in the beginners through the more advanced group.

These youngsters will report at 10 a.m. Monday, July 8, for assignment to a regular swimming classes which will meet daily Monday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Depot beach.

For the first time a guard will be at the Depot beach during swimming lessons. In the past, instructors kept an eye on the beach.

Guards will be at Depot and Lake Michigan beach at the pierheads from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. daily Monday through Saturday and from 12 to 6 p.m. on Sunday.

Andy's Tire World Comes From Behind

Andy's Tire World came from behind twice on the strength of Joe Beaudoin's two home runs to nip Portside Sports 9-5 in men's softball action. The win was Andy's fourth in a row after a slow start.

Portside held a 5-2 lead in the sixth inning when Andy's made its move. Beaudoin led off with his first home run, a towering blast down the right field line. Stan Martin followed with a single but was forced out at second.

Portside's defense then had a momentary lapse.

Don Smith reached first on an error. With two outs and two on, Dave Novotny ripped a hard single to right. But a bad throw by the right fielder allowed two runs to score and Novotny ended up on third base.

Andy Carey then hit a hard grounder which got through for another error, and Novotny scored the fourth run of the inning.

Andy's had scored four runs on only three hits to take a 6-5 lead.

In the top of the seventh, Andy's put the game out of reach. After Hilliard Shackford walked, Harvey Cole then blasted a triple off the fence. Beaudoin wrapped up the scoring with his second homer of the night. It was his second home run in two innings and his third in two games.

Portside had taken a 2-0 lead in the first. Kevin Swanson singled with two out to drive home Brian VanLoo and Randy DeYoung.

The score stayed that way until the third when Andy's managed to tie up the game.

In the fifth, however, Portside looked like it was going to take command of the game. VanLoo led off with a single. After the next two men popped out, both Fritz Allord and Kevin Swanson reached base on errors. With the bases loaded Bruce Meggison doubled scoring all three baserunners.

The game was also highlighted by two double plays. Portside got the first one when third baseman Vince Left fielded a hard grounder, threw to Tom Meggison at second, who in turn made the pivot and threw to Swanson at first. Andy's made the other one.

Leroy Buchanon fielded a ground ball, tagged the runner going to second, and three to Harvey Cole at first.

Former Resident Overcomes Handicap

EDITOR'S NOTE: Mrs. George Anderson, the former Lucille Warner of Norwood, recently had her daughter featured in The State Journal in Lansing. It's the story of how a handicap fails to deter her daughter in a struggle for life.

She's intelligent, maintaining an "A" and "B" average during all her school years. And, she has just graduated with honors from the Michigan State University College of Communication Arts, department of advertising.

She sounds like a "winner."

SO FAR she's a typical "Betty Coed" with everything going for her. But Nancy, unlike most of her classmates has had to do everything the hard way—all the way.

She is a victim of cerebral palsy, not a disease, but a life-long condition, characterized by nerve and muscle dysfunction.

It has been labeled by the Michigan Cerebral Palsy Association as "everybody's problem."

"Persons who have it have to learn to live with it. Others have the problem of improving understanding of the condition, so they can help those who have it. Persons with C.P. need normal relationships with others if they are to develop normally," it is stated in the bulletin of the association, a United Way service.

AND NANCY'S first friends were understanding parents—Mr. and Mrs. George Anderson, 1116 Gordon. (Her father teaches industrial arts at the Michigan School for the Blind, where he met her mother, an office aide. Mrs. Anderson teaches Sunday School at Grace Lutheran Church). Mrs. Anderson has not worked professionally since their daughter was born, but has devoted much time to consultation with special education teachers, physicians and other experts, who believe that education of the handicapped is important.

"Independence is a necessary goal for handicapped children. Yet, parents and other persons sometimes make the mistake of not helping at all (institutionalization, for instance) or doing many things for them the children can learn to do for themselves."

ONE IMPORTANT point to remember, she said, is "acceptance," which means "friends." One friend of Nancy's is her younger brother, Paul, 13, a baseball player in the Fraternal Order of Police Little League.

Others are special education teachers, who were her counselors at Indian Trails camp for the handicapped in Grand Rapids, and right now, Dr. Kenward Atkin, chairman of the department of advertising, College of Communication Arts, MSU.

She was honored recently as "Outstanding Senior Woman of 1974," at an advertising department luncheon, at the MSU Union. She is looking toward the future and a job.

AND SHE has been offered a free-lance copy-writing job at the John Henry Dudley Co. this summer.

Nancy's problem first came into focus when she was about nine months old and unable to sit up. Through therapy, she overcame the problem, but still has never walked.

"But I swim," she interjected, eyes glowing, "and bowl and read—and I love to create original ceramics."

SHE HAS used an electric typewriter since second grade at Walnut St. School and can write only by that method today. In college classes she took notes on a tape recorder.

Nancy enjoys traveling and, with her family, has been to New York City, Washington, D.C., Florida and Colorado. At Dwight Rich Junior High School, where she never missed a prom, she belonged to the Pep Club, Chess Club and won her first award in Journalism.

She graduated from Everett High School where she was a member of the Honor Society and the Latin Club. Her ambition always was to be a writer and "to learn what motivates people."

THE MICHIGAN Department of Vocational Rehabilitation provided funds, not only for her therapy, but also her tuition fees at Lansing Community College and round-trip transportation to classes at MSU. (Other anonymous donors have contributed funds).

"On campus," said the young senior, "It was no problem. My mother and friends helped. Perfect strangers would come up and ask if I needed a push to where I was going."

At MSU she is a member of the Advertising Club, Women in Communications and Mortar Board.

Library notes

By ELEANOR RATIGAN

Some good summer reading is reviewed in this week's column. There is, first of all, Out of Control by Dan Gerber, author of the crisp and funny book American Atlas which was his first novel. This new book is about sports car racing, a subject about which he has more firsthand experience. For five years, he raced professionally and was considered one of America's most promising young drivers before a near fatal accident turned him toward the safer hazards of poetry and fiction. He is that rare combination—a man of action and a man of feeling. Out of Control is fast-paced with good dialogue. Highly entertaining.

The Greek by Pierre Rey, has already become a best selling novel in thirteen countries. It is a giant inside novel of the jet set, from yachts to international places, from Rolls-Royces to diamonds as big as the Ritz. It is the story of the richest, most powerful man in the world, a Greek shipowning potentate, capable of making or breaking trusts, empires and societies with a pointed finger. It is a biting, satirical takeoff on familiar people the reader will instantly recognize in spite of the fact that the names have been changed. The author has given us a non-stop roller coaster of a novel, filled with dramatic incidents and fascinating characters.

The Motherland is the eight novel by Gwen Davis. It deals with the world of money, position and power in which the smart, beautiful, ambitious heroine, Evelyn, believes that the only way to escape from a too-loving family is marriage to a man—or series – of men who can do what she cannot: succeed.

It is hard to classify the new book All the President's Men, by Carl Bernstein and Bob Woodward, the two young Washington Post reporters who smashed the Watergate scandal wide open. The book, could be called a political expose or a journalism case history or, perhaps, it could be called the most devastating detective story of the century. It is, in any case, the amazing story of false leads, secrecy, lies and high-level pressure from the first suspicions the two reporters had until they won the Post a Pulitzer Prize as a result of their efforts.

And finally, three delightful new juveniles. John Come Down the Backstay, a Junior Literary Guild selection, by Caroline Tapley. It is a tale of hardship and adventure, and the story of men working together to do a job under the most trying circumstances —and succeeding as best they can.

Miss Nelda Merrill Married

The Rev. Carl Price, assisted by the Rev. Chester Pilarski of Blessed Sacrament Catholic Church, of Midland, officiated at the marriage of Miss Nelda J. Merrill and Christopher G. Whitley. The vows were repeated at the First Methodist Church in Midland recently.

Mr. Donald Stutesman, cousin of the bride, was organist and Miss Trudy Schymanski was soloist.

The altar was decorated with arrangements of pink and white roses and candelabra. Pews were also marked with white satin bows. The bride wore a gown of lace and satin--bodice of lace featured a queen Anne collar and long sleeves with a wide ruffle over the hand. The full skirt of satin fell into a cathedral length train.

Her fingertip veil of illusion trimmed in lace to match her gown was secured by a crown of lace trimmed with seed pearls. Her bouquet was a cascade of white orchids, pink and white roses and baby's breath.

Each carried a white basket of pink and white roses with detachable corsage in the center and was worn at the reception in the evening. The flower girl was dressed like the above attendants also with same flowers, etc. The mother of the bride (Mrs. Dwight E. Merrill) wore a water print floral sheer gown of pink and blue over white and a white orchid corsage with white accessories.

Special honored guests were the grandparents and god parents of the bridal couple. Mrs. Bruce Meggison of Charlevoix attended the guest book.

A reception at the Williams Township Hall, Auburn, Michigan was hosted by the brides Aunt and Uncle–Mr. and Mrs. Pat Larsen of Grand Rapids, Michigan which featured a buffet dinner and dancing followed.

The bride and groom graduated from Midland High School. The groom is employed with Bigelow-Sanford, Inc. in Southfield, Michigan.

After a wedding trip through northern Michigan they are at home to friends and relatives at the Dolly Madison Apartments, Madison Heights, Michigan.

MRS. DONALD MANN

Miss R.L. Hiller Married Sunday

Roberta Lynn Hiller and Donald Paul Mann were married June 29 at the First Congregational Church of Charlevoix. The Reverend Lawrence E. Tenhopen and The Reverend Raymond H. Giffen officiated at the double ring rites in the presence of 200 guests.

White gladioli and white fuigi mums graced the altar. Other flowers at the chancel included candelabra arrangements of white fuigi mums and greens. A garland of greens graced the chancel rail and pew arrangements included white fuigi mums and greens.

Traditional wedding music was played by organist Mrs. Charles E. Bellinger. It included Purcell's "Fanfare" during the processional and his "Trumpet Air" during the recessional. Included in the service were "The Lord's Prayer" and Bach's "Ave Maria" given by soloist Mrs. Wayne Woods.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. James Hiller of Charlevoix, and the groom is the son of Mrs. Earl G. Mann of Bridgewater, Michigan, and the late Mr. Mann.

The bride, escorted to the altar by her father, wore a semi-princess organza gown fashioned with a high neck line and bishop sleeves. It was delicately trimmed with chantilly and venise lace. She wore a matching lace cap with a lace-edged mantilla. She carried a bouquet of white roses, stephanotis and baby's breath.

Mrs. Donald R. Smith of Charlevoix served her sister as matron of honor. Other attendants included the bride's sister, Mrs. Charles A. Pease of Charlevoix, Mrs. Bruce E. Kroken of Peshtigo, Wisconsin, and Mrs. Steven J. Overweg of Flint, Michigan. The bride's attendants all wore matching dresses of navy blue dotted swiss with shirred halter tops and matching elbow length capes. Each carried a single red rose.

The groom's brother, Gerald R. Mann of Manchester, served as best man. Groomsmen included other brothers, Victor J. Mann and E. Glen Mann, also of Manchester; and Timothy J. Hiller of Charlevoix, brother of the bride. Ushers were Albert Shindorf of Charlevoix and Larry Helber of Manchester.

A reception followed at the home of the parents of the bride. Sisters-in-law Mrs. E. Glen Mann, Mrs. Victor J. Mann and Mrs. Gerald R. Mann, all of Manchester, presided at the punch bowl. The wedding cake was served by Mrs. Gerald Roberts of Swartz Creek and Miss Pamela Henry of Flushing. Miss Ann Schenk of Charlevoix attended the guest book.

The bride's mother wore a long floral gown with pale jade accessories. The mother of the groom wore a long gown of soft apricot with white accessories. Their corsages were of gardenias and stephanotis.

After a wedding trip through Canada and New England, the couple will reside in Flushing. The groom is a bank examiner with the Michigan Department of Commerce, Financial Institutions Bureau. The bride is a member of the faculty of Flushing Community Schools.

A rehearsal dinner, hosted by the groom's mother was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hiller Friday evening.

Guests were present from several Michigan cities, Wisconsin and Illinois.

"Funny Car Summer" Spins This Week

Editor's Note: Earl Muma of Charlevoix will have his dragster parked in front of the Cinema III on both July 3 and 4.

FUNNY CAR SUMMER, the motion picture that spins through the world of drag racing, opens this week at the Cinema III Theatre.

This full-length, color feature puts its audience at the wheel of the Dunn and Reath rear engine funny car as it rides the line between victory and disaster. Behind the scenes and on the track, the camera explores the world's fastest sport with a depth never before brought to the screen.

So unique is FUNNY CAR SUMMER that the uninitiated as well as racing enthusiasts will find in this movie an unsurpassed entertainment experience.

Action views never seen from the stands, on-the-spot tension in the pits, a glimpse of the efforts and experiments between races: these will absorb knowledgable racing fans. But it is the human side of drag racing, the life of fireman and part time racer Jim Dunn, the involvement in his sport of his wife and children, the look at the warmth, humor, and sacrifices of these real people that make FUNNY CAR SUMMER a perfect way to bring the whole family together for a delightful, exciting evening.

not the proper answers to waste disposals. Already there is a sewage disposal problem from Detroit to Pensacola, the Great Lakes to the Gulf and plans have been freely discussed for building an additional drain from Detroit to the Thumb area (and from Southern Florida to North Florida) so that partially treated sewage can be used as fertilizer. The point has been made that the Chinese have been doing this for centuries in their truck gardening. They also have had endemic cholera, so much so that they have grown immune to it. Visitors, according to report, almost never eat fresh vegetables.

An almost obvious fact, rarely mentioned, is that complete handling of the septic wastes in the area in which they originated is the ideal method. We are doing that now in the North. All the concrete evidence we can gather indicates we should continue to do this.

Each of the three signers of this letter already has suffered serious losses because of decisions made by young Lansing-based Michigan Department of Health men called in to rule on the acceptability of a tract of land for setting up a subdivision along Old State Road in Grant Township, Iosco County. The soil conditions were what we used to think were ideal, very sandy with no beds of clay down past one hundred feet. Two creeks with their small valleys lay one to the east and one to the west thus shielding it from external pollution. North was a timbered forty acres with one cottage. South was unbroken forest for three miles. The site and subdivision looked perfect to us: 14 lots each 100' by 200'. Front building line 60' back from road, open section of septic system no closer than 75' to the well.

The proposal was turned down, even after an appeal and a trip to Lansing. Instead we were told that before the property could be subdivided we would have to wait for sanitary sewers and public wells! One Civil Engineer (M.A.) told us privately the area had no need for a sanitary sewer. Another Engineer, head of a consulting firm, told us the area neither needed nor could it afford a sanitary sewer.

If this is the State's final ruling and is to be applied to everyone in Iosco County, friends or foes, then subdividing by the owner or small broker is ended in our part of Iosco County and possibly throughout the County and throughout Michigan.

The public suffers most because this could end the era of low priced lots. Now only big investment groups can bear the increased cost–and then put in multiple housing!

Remember, anyone who may read this, these land control bills are your problems. Whether you live in down state Michigan, or in Lansing as a member of the legislature, or up North, you just have to be vitally interested in, and vigorously opposed to, any sort of proposal which would deny you the normal privileges of property ownership. Better act quickly because the Land Use Bill may come up for a vote in the Michigan Legislature this week.

If we can't stop these bills now, we simply must remember to vote this fall against every legislator irrespective of his race, religion, or party who voted in favor of them.

Dog

Joe Etienne, county Dog Warden who is now on medical leave of absence, spoke of the necessity of a new dog shelter. He said that the best he could do with equipment now available was to scrape up the dirt and cover the floor of the pens with hay or straw to absorb some of the excretions.

Etienne expressed the hope that the county and the newly formed Charlevoix County Humane Society could work together in providing a new building and proper equipment.

This thought of cooperation is not shared by Staley. He fears that the present group of enthusiastic Humane Society workers might dwindle into a lethargic few after a period of time, leaving the county with the upkeep of a "fancy" building that had been put up jointly.

No count on how the rest of the members of the County Board if Commissioners would vote on the matter can be given at this time. However, it is believed they would approve a working agreement with the Humane Society.

Some of the skepticism about such a working agreement derives from the fact that the present dog shelter was put up by a Humane Society many years ago and abandoned about 20 years ago. The county was then forced to assume their debts, according to Staley.

In the meantime, the Charlevoix County Humane Society is busy raising funds to help provide proper shelter for lost and stray animals. They have participated in flea markets, held raffles and bake sales, and are now conducting an intensive membership drive.

Annual membership in the Humane Society is $5.00 but any contribution, large or small, will be gratefully accepted. Checks should be sent to the treasurer, Mrs. Irvin H. Sturm, Box 2151, Boyne City, Michigan, 49712.

Chuck Fairbanks Comes Home

By FRAN MARTIN

Chuck Fairbanks returned to Kipke field last week...probably for the first time since becoming a part of the football legend of Charlevoix High School.

This time, however, he brought with him nine young members of the New England Patriots football team which had accepted his invitation to attend an orientation camp. And on hand, each day, were football buffs and friends of the former high school athlete who stepped by to reminisce and to see in action the young players from the East who hopefully will fill television screens with their play during the forthcoming professional football season.

Purpose of the camp, according to Fairbanks, was to work closely with the backfield men who spent their time studying offensive backfield theory and learning from him and his offensive backfield coach, Robert "Red" Miller, how this theory is to be put into practice. Later, on the field, the techniques were put into action, video-taped, studies, corrected and worked on another day...all with the idea of perfection.

Last week he spoke of these bright young players, all of whom had gained some recognition on college gridirons before joining the ranks of the professionals. As he spoke one felt that he had high hopes for each...Despite the fact that the Patriots presently have 120 players under contract and that when the team opens its season against the Washington Redskins in an exhibition game on Aug. 3 that number will have been cut to 47, one felt that Fairbanks was prepared to give every one of the 120 every opportunity to prove himself...that until the last choice was made everybody was in the running. running.

Fairbanks, in speaking of his team, talked only in generalities and of the team as a group rather than as individuals. Fairbanks, only 4 himself and young fur a coach with his responsibilities, spoke repeatedly of the youthfulness of his players...probably the youngest team in the pro ranks, as he put it. He went on to say that the Patriots have 23 rookies under contract and 39 other players who have three years or less experience in pro ranks.

"We have good, young talent but we have to keep working with them to develop them to their greatest potential. Last year we had a bad year. This year we have to have improvement...and more improvement for we have one of the most difficult schedules in the pro league. It takes hard work if you are to attain a goal" Fairbanks went on.

As he continued, however, he did not elaborate on what the goal might be but it will undoubtedly be to bring to the New England Patriots the success he achieved at Oklahoma where, under his tutelage, the Sooners were at 'Charlevoix the Beautiful'

EDITOR'S NOTE: Earl A. Young, Charlevoix realtor, is known around the world for his many contributions to Charlevoix. He is about to publish a lengthy book concerning his involvement in Charlevoix during the last 70 years and has offered Charlevoix Courier readers the first chapter of his new book, "Charlevoix the Beautiful." This is first time any portion of the book has appeared in print.

(C) 1974 Charlevoix Courier Corp

By EARL A. YOUNG

Before the beginning of time, there was a vision, dreaming, and planning for the Master's drawing board to be set up for creation, with all eternity to complete the work. The advance and retreat of the last glacial age of 10,000 years ago became a tool which tore away great quantities of material, great cliffs of stone, and shoved ahead to gouge out future landscapes. And in this way, Michigan was formed with its north and south ridges and valleys, with its varied-sized lakes and streams, leaving our own immediate area uniquely different from any place else--situated not back on a deep bay but from the blue waters of Lake Michigan and not in an unprotected place, but with the indentation of the big lake shoreline broken only by a winding stream, widening to a jewel-like, land-locked, deep water right up to the shoreline harbor of Round Lake. What tool, what revolving force could have been used to create this, the only spot of its kind, and with only much shallower water less than a quarter of a mile on each side. A perfectly round hole which even today has over 50 feet of water with evidence that in ages past it was at least 80 feet deep. Round Lake really is round except when a few hundred or a thousand years ago a part of the southwest brim caved in at the east end of Antrim Street.

Continuing on into Pine Lake (Lake Charlevoix) – the two arms of the lake have many points and bays and the wooded beauty of 50 miles of additional shoreline which is occasionally broken by several streams; the most important of these are the Jordan River which is navigable for a few miles and has extensive water sheds, and the Boyne River. Many other streams empty into the shoreline. There also is the abundance of pure, clear, cold water from artesian wells.

Charlevoix is also in an area free from floods, earthquakes, cyclone, and tornado menace. Warm days and cool nights in the summer, with 60 miles of water-washed air coming across the blue waters of Lake Michigan. All of this makes for an ideal climate in the temperate zone just a few miles north of the 45th parallel, halfway between the Equator and the North Pole, a zone which is favored by an average of ten gorgeous displays each year of the phenomena of the Northern Lights. Our winter weather is cold and invigorating with ample snow for all winter sports, but the intense cold is tempered by the lake so we are usually 10 degrees warmer than Chicago, 400 miles to the southwest, and usually warmer than Detroit 300 miles to the southeast. This is a stage setting with a backdrop of ever-changing greens from the dark pines to the varied light shades of green of other foliage in the spring, deepening through the summer to the gorgeous display of autumn, equaled only in one or two other sections of the nation; the everchanging shades of blues of our lakes and magnificent sunsets over Lake Michigan with the even more glorious sunrises over Lake Charlevoix if one would just get up in time to see them.

The early pioneers had no aerial view of the beauty. Maps of Michigan 150 years ago furnished no accurate details, yet as the pioneers discovered this location they had no desire to seek any other spot in which to make a home. This same feeling was experienced in 1878 by the early founders of what is now the Belvedere Club, and in 1880 by the initial group of wealthy, influential Chicago people in their selection for the Chicago Club resort. These two restricted areas with their permanency, always have been a most valued part of Charlevoix's resort history.

The Mound Builders were here centuries before the pioneers and it is regrettable that much of the evidence around Bay Shore and other

By FRAN MARTIN

Max Novak was elected president of the Charlevoix board of education for the 1974-75 school year at the annual organizational meeting held Monday night.

At the same meeting, Mrs. Thomas (Ardeth) Wieland was named vice president; Larry Warner was re-elected secretary and Claire C. Martin was elected treasurer.

Committees which will serve during the year will be appointed by Novak at a later date. They are finance, building and site, transportation, public library, curriculum, negotiations, board policy, legislation, professional study and recreation.

The second and fourth Mondays of the month were named as meeting dates; 7:30 p.m. as the time and the First State Bank of Charlevoix and the Charlevoix county State Bank as depositories.

Boy Struggles for Life

Thirteen-year-old Boyd Honeysette is dying.

He can no longer walk, talk or move himself and has been tube fed for over 16 months now.

But despite the insurmountable odds, many churches, friends and loved ones are praying the Charlevoix youngster will live.

Boyd has what doctor's term an uncurable brain disease that they discovered in 1972, when the boy started falling down and bumping into things for no apparent reason.

After being treated in both Petoskey and Traverse City, the boy was taken to University Hospital in Ann Arbor where brain scans were done along with skull X-rays and spinal taps.

It was then that doctors learned Boyd had S.S.P. (Subacute Sclerosis Panensephalitis)

He was given only two months to live, but now almost two years later Boyd remains alive in Charlevoix Hospital.

His Father, who was striken with a serious heart attack three years ago, and unable to work since, visits Boyd twice a day to give him physical therapy.

To help relieve the father of nine children from medical expenses, that may or may not be entirely covered through state assistance, community members are organizing a fund-raising spaghetti dinner for Thursday, July 18, at the Charlevoix American Legion Hall from 4 to 8 p.m.

Profits from the dinner along with other donations will go to Boyd Honeysette Fund set up at the Charlevoix County State Bank and being handled by Rev. Alan Mettler of the Church of Nazarene.

For more information, persons may call Mrs. David Herbolsheimer, 547-4113; Mrs. C. D Geiken, 547-6719; or Mrs. Roger Pichner, 547-9363, or Rev. Mettler, 547-4181.

July Fourth

Storms Upset Charlevoix

Charlevoix appears to be back in running condition after last week's flash flood of torrential rains that hit Wednesday night.

Acting City Administrator Robert Wexstaff said city crews were out until 2:30 a.m. fixing downed power lines and fighting fires.

According to the city official, it was the first time in history all the city fire equipment was out at the same time.

Firemen had to fight four fires that evening.

In addition to power outages, Charlevoix residents were without water for a few minutes when the city water pumping station was knocked out.

A gasoline engine was used to get the station back in operating condition until more permanent repairs were made.

"They did a tremendous job," Wexstaff said about the city crews working that night.

No estimate on damage had been determined yet.

Paper Price Going Up

Because of increased costs in production, newsprint and ink, the Charlevoix Courier has been forced to increase its newstand price to 20 cents an issue effective today.

Mail subscriptions will remain unchanged at the current rate of $6.50 a year for local residents in Emmet, Charlevoix and Antrim Counties.

BAY SHORE residents turned out in their usually good spirits to watch the village's third annual Fourth of July parade held on July 7th because of earlier rains. Youngsters from the community provided most of the parade strength.

Seventh of July

Like everything else that happens in Bay Shore, July 4th was celebrated on July 7th.

And why not?

When you have the county's smallest parade, you have to make sure everyones there to be in it.

There were no big brass symbols to announce the parade's arrival last Sunday, but everyone knew it was coming.

There wasn't even a band because there isn't a high school.

And likewise, there wasn't a mayor to give a Seventh of July address.

There were just plain folks having a good time.

DARRELL SOMERVILLE gave the parade about the only music that was played in the five-minute long march through Bay Shore last Sunday.

We know, of course saving pays through interest earnings. Have you stopped to think lately of how many other ways savings pays? Money on deposit earning for you, growing for that vacation you never seem able to take. Your money growing for the purchase of a boat, a new sofa, a wardrobe... whatever way you want it to pay. Gary Conway Appears In Traverse City

The second play of the Cherry County Playhouse season promises an evening of comedy as Gary Conway, star of "Burk's Law" and "Land of the Giants" comes to Traverse City, July 9 through July 14, to star in Paisley Convertible.

Conway will come directly from shooting the movie Once Is Not Enough from the book by Jacqueline Susann, to play the part of Charlie Rogers, a newly wed intern who discovers that his bride's past has been a little too colorful.

It's a misunderstanding that ends in laughter, but not before the young couple lock horns with the bride's old boyfriend and her mother.

Conway has appeared in over 40 television shows and on approximately 137 segments of such TV shows as Sunset Strip, Hawalian Eye, and Maverick.

More recently Conway has played starring roles in Colombo and Police Story and in "The Judge and Kate Wyler" with Bette Davis.

The legitimate theatre has seen Conway co-starring with the late great Bert Lahr in Perleman's, The Beauty Part, and stock theatres have hosted his performances of Sunday In New York, The Hasty Heart, and Come Live With Me.

Because July 8 through July 12 is Cherry Festival Week in Traverse City the times of the performances have been changed to Tuesday through Friday 9:00 p.m., Saturday 5:00 p.m. and 9:30 p.m., Sunday 7:30 p.m. and a Wednesday matinee at 2:30 p.m.

Local Aging Commission Sets Wheels in Motion For Working

Members of the Charlevoix County Commission on Aging adopted a constitution and by-laws and appointed working committees at their July meeting, held in Boyne City.

Mrs. Yvonne Metzger, Boyne Falls, and Mrs. Mildred Bathke, East Jordan, were elected to the Planning Committee. The rest of the committee will be made up of Charlevoix County residents who are not members of the Commission on Aging.

The Executive Committee and Finance Committee will have the same membership. They are Mrs. Ruth Behrens, Boyne City; Vern Whiteford, East Jordan; Mrs. Margaret Sorenson, Boyne City; Mrs. Mary M. Geiken, Charlevoix; and Mrs. Metzger.

The Commission on Aging is made up of ten county residents, including two members of the Board of Commissioners, appointed by the Board of Commissioners.

Its purpose is to secure and administer, locally, programs funded to the state under Titles III and VII of the Older Americans Act.

Title II involves $2,182,121 in federal funds that make possible the operation of many senior citizen programs throughout the state. This includes friendly visitors, telephone reassurance, drop-in centers, information and referral systems, and many others.

Title VII is the Nutrition Program which provides hot meals to seniors as a group, and home delivery of meals to shut-ins. A total of $3,518,237 in federal funds is available for this program.

Charlevoix County is part of the ten county Region 10 area of the state to which a total of $165,552 has been allotted for both programs.

Only two other counties in Region 10 now have working Commissions on Aging, Kalkaska and Manistee.

Old Glory Flies Over Charlevoix

At Albion

Youth Attend Seminar

Four Charlevoix county youths were among the more than 200 high school juniors and seniors who attended the 11th annual Young People's Citizenship Seminar at Albion College under the sponsorship of the Michigan Farm Bureau.

Attending the event were (l to r) Bryan Graham, son of the Cameron Grahams of East Jordan, Tammy Wieland daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Wieland, Beth Dhaseleer, daughter of the Charles Dhaseleers, and Kathy Britton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Britton, all of Charlevoix.

Purpose of the week-long seminar was to learn the responsibilities of young citizens and future voters.

With nationally-known resource people conducting the classes, the young people studied such topics as peoples and governments around the world and this country's private enterprise and political systems.

The students were divided into three parties, the star, stripe and independents, developed their own party platforms, registered to vote, conducted their own political campaigns, conducted primary and general elections and used voting machines loaned by the city of Albion.

Instructors included lecturer-author Dr. John Furbay whose lectures included "The Four Dreams of Man" and "Let's Join the Human Race", Dr. Clifford Ganus, president of Harding College who spoke on "Understanding and Preserving Our Heritage", "The Moral Foundation of Freedom" and later explained the "Pyramid of Freedom" and Prof. John Sparks, economics expert of Hillsdale College, whose topics were "The Age of Inflation", "Ordeal by Planning" and "The Economy of 8000 million Red Chinese."

Kenn Wimmer, Michigan Farm Bureau regional representative, guided the students in their political activities and explained the workings of the political system.

A popular speaker among the youth was Art Holst, National Football League line judge, whose message was "The Challenge of a Pro".

Now that the young people have returned to their home communities, they are anxious to share their experiences with interested groups. Anyone wishing to hear them may call Fred Willis of Charlevoix.

Editorials/Opinions

Political Involvement Needed Locally, Too

One result of the exposure of Watergate and its aftermath is becoming increasingly clear: This year may well be marked as the toughest in the nation's history on political candidates and politicians.

The glare of publicity is intensified as citizens' interest in wrongdoing in politics increases. The high sales of the Presidential tape transcripts is an indicator.

Certainly an interest in politics by citizens at large is welcome and necessary if we are to survive under our present form of government. Should this interest, however, turn into indiscriminate rejection of politics and politicians, we will have thrown out the baby with the bathwater.

This danger has subtle implications. If good men begin to shun the political arena because of an indiscriminate electorate, the result may be mediocre government by unimaginative politicians.

Watergate appears to have generated more interest in politics at the local and state levels as well as national.

It is equally important to evaluate candidates on the state and local levels as well as national with interest and discrimination.

In a letter to the editor, a candidate recently wrote that he is not standing for election because of Watergate but because of consumerism and other issues.

Citizens and candidates alike should shun the battle cry of "turn the rascals out." We urge voters to select candidates on the basis of ability to govern and not to allow false issues to sway emotions.

Ball Diamond Dispute Needs Prompt Action

Charlevoix City Council should plan on directing itself to correcting an unfortunate dispute between the Charlevoix Lion's Club and Westport Property Owners as soon as possible.

The Charlevoix Service Club's attempt to help area youngsters by building a ball diamond adjacent to the Charlevoix County Sheriff's office apparently has drawn the wrath of some of the residents.

Upset with the noise and traffic generated by the new park, a small group of residents asked the council to pass a resolution to retract its approval to the Lions Club for the use of this property as a baseball field.

We tend to agree with Councilman Ray Wood's suggestion to create offstreet parking and work with the residents in resolving the other differences.

This park is badly needed and is partly good for our youngsters since it does not require them to cross or ride their bicycles along any major highways.

This would not be true if the council was to go along with a suggestion for all the games to be played at Mt. McSauba.

Until the Lion's Club completes its project, we ask the Westport Property Owners to be patient and help develop some positive alternatives towards resolving the differences between them and the club.

In addition to creating offstreet parking, close supervision by the police department may be of some help.

Close supervision by team coaches and parents watching their children might also help the ball diamond become less of a burden to neighboring property owners.

Good Move Reibel

Ninetieth District Court Judge Arthur Reibel's announcement that he is divesting himself of the tugboat, Northshore, the barge, Tanker Two and dock on Beaver Island comes as good news.

We feel the less a judge is involved in private enterprise while on the bench, the better off the community he serves is.

Judge Reibel should also be commended for his announcement that he intends to clean out the criminal docket and establish a full day schedule for five days a week.

In a time when credibility of government is being questioned, unfavorable publicity, as recently experienced by Judge Reibel, has not helped in building the image of our judicial system.

We were pleased to learn that the State Supreme Court is involved with establishing a set of judicial cannons or guidelines for district judges to follow.

Hopefully when they are finally approved, situations similar to those that have developed with our own district court judge will be averted.

However to further insure that a judge need not feel compelled to become involved with private enterprise, we suggest both the state and county become a little more realistic with their salaries.

This we feel would help in preventing so-called "conflicts of interest."

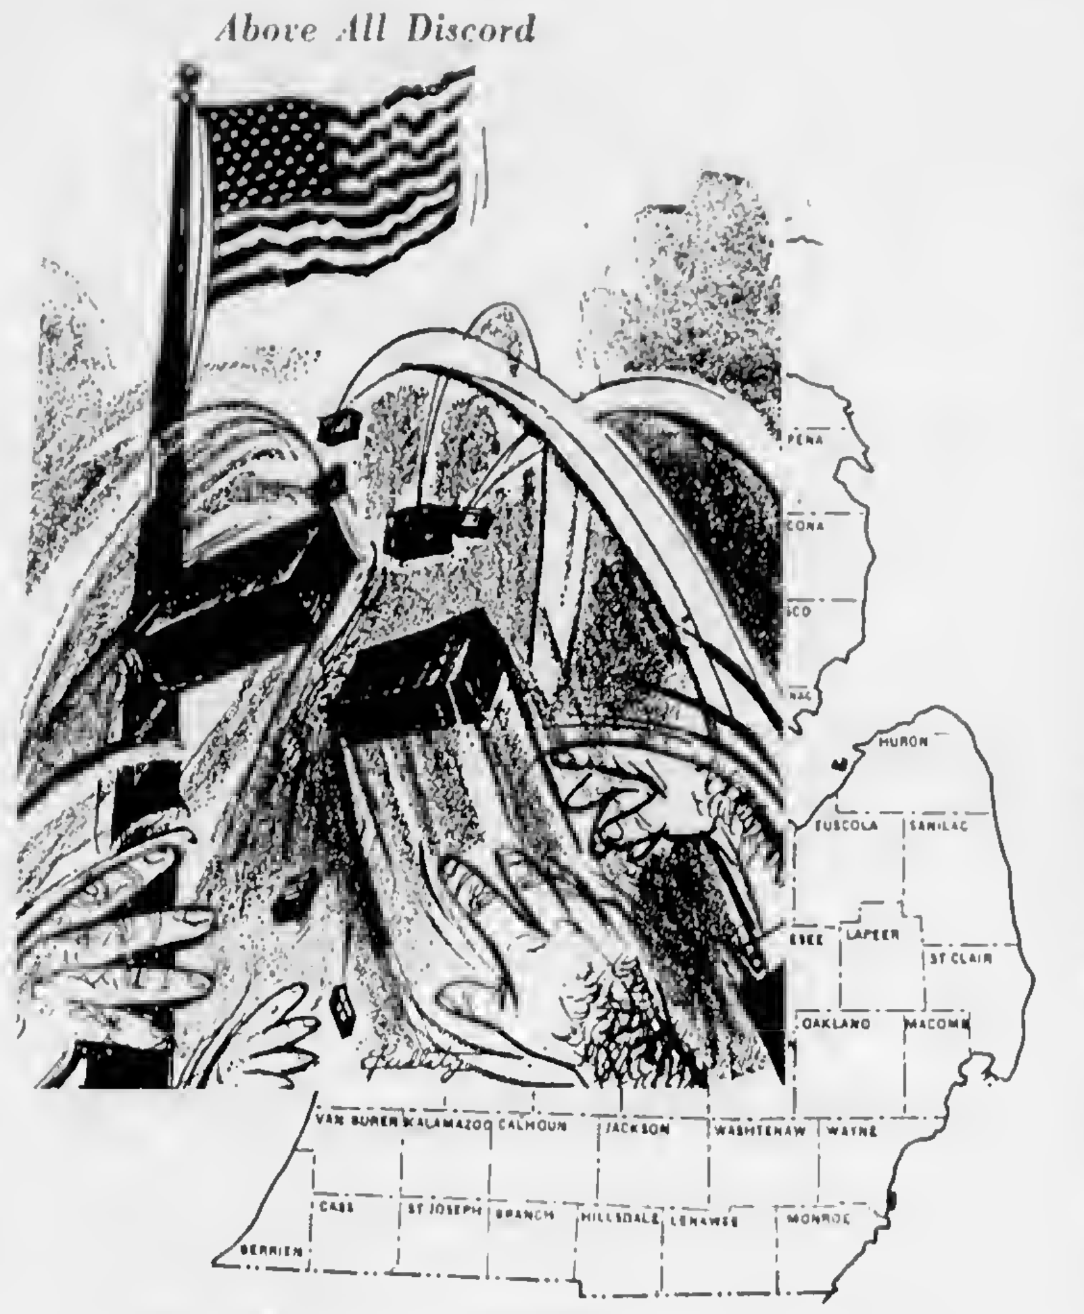
Above All Discord



Clockwise

By Bob Clock

BEAVER ISLAND–We Americans have been terribly short-sighted during the past generation insofar as our personal energy needs are concerned.

Twenty years ago there was hardly a home on Beaver Island or in Charlevoix that didn't have some kind of wood burning device in the kitchen or parlor that played a multiple role in the functioning of the household.

Wood-burning stoves and ranges not only served to ward off the chill but also could be used for cooking and as super-efficient trash-disposal units, right in the living quarters where you needed them.

Homes that lacked kitchen ranges at least had a coal-burning furnace in the basement where cardboard boxes, newspapers and meat wrappings could be disposed of, all with an assist to the central heating system.

We wasted very little in those days. Our refuse was used to keep us warm and brew us a cup of tea at the same time.

Somehow (I'll never know how), we Americans were bamboozled into getting rid of our wood-burning appliances one by one.

The parlor stove was replaced by the oil-burner in the basement. The kitchen range was relegated to the city dump when the lady-of-the-house acquired a gas or electric range.

The little kitchen incinerator which did such a marvelous job of gobbling up all kinds of paper waste was moved out to the garage because such unsightly appliances didn't fit the decor of the modern home.

As a result of all of this nonsense, we have let ourselves in for a Pandora's box of problems in attempting to deal with the energy crisis.

It is no longer possible to throw a couple of sticks in the stove to take the chill off the house on a summer morning. Oh, no! You have to kick up the thermostat and burn a couple of gallons of precious No. 2 fuel oil to do the job properly. And chances are the house will overheat and you'll be miserable the rest of the day.

Meanwhile, the amount of trash collected by the average family has grown tremendously over the years with new methods of packaging, the demise of returnable bottles and changes in shopping habits.

There was a time when the egg man delivered his wares in a wicker basket and transferred his produce directly to a bowl in your ice box. There was no egg carton involved. Likewise he delivered butter in a crock, which he picked up the following week to be filled again, and again until the crock broke. Milk bottles were used dozens upon dozens of times until they finally were retired.

We also purchased more food in quantity — potatoes by the bushel, tomatoes by the peck, and everything else in quantities which would stagger today's homemaker. The sturdy containers invariably were used over and over again and more often than not the shopper supplied his own.

But no more. Everything comes in disposable containers, at a time when we have practically eliminated means of disposing of them.

The biggest disappointment about the Clocks' summer residence on Beaver Island is the fact that the parlor stove and the kitchen range have been replaced by two sleek, oil-burning space heaters. And after a week in residence one of our biggest problems is finding a place to store our paper refuse until we learn which road leads to the dump.

Letters to the editor

Humane Society Responds To Animal Shelter Article

July 3, 1974

To the Charlevoix Courier:

I just received your paper in the mail and feel compelled to respond to your article regarding the dog pound.

This is a hastily composed letter, but there are several points which should be illuminated for the benefit of readers.

1. Animals in the pound have not been fed and attended on a daily basis. Animals have been left unattended as long as five days according to sources who prefer to remain unnamed. They are not fed or watered over week-ends. I visited the pound prior to any publicity one Monday. There was a convulsive dying dog on the floor. Neighbors informed me that the poor animal had howled and moaned all weekend. No one had been to the pound and it was apparent by the stink, tipped over cans, and general filth inside and out. I do not know how they keep rats out of the dog food. Your picture of the pound shows that the prison work force has done a good job of recently cleaning up the exterior mess since the advent of publicity. It is unfortunate that interior conditions have not basically changed.

2. Mr. Staley's comments about the cost to the public of an animal shelter seem unfair when one examines Emmet County's facility. Emmet County has a very modest, successful animal shelter which is supported by less than a third of Emmet County tax dollars. Emmet gives the Humane Society $10,000 annually. The shelter is presently going into an extensive expansion program with this budget.

It does operate with a great deal of volunteer help – notably teenagers. Many people would be willing to donate time and materials to the effort of building a decent shelter in Charlevoix County. The alternative is nothing at all. In addition, I fail to understand Mr. Staley's attack on our Charlevoix County Veterinarians. They have nothing to do with the cost and establishment of an animal shelter. This is determined by the dog act, which is a legislative law. Veterinarians do not set any rules.

Mr. Staley unfairly and incorrectly attacked our fine Charlevoix County veterinarians, who were never approached to participate in the rabies vaccination program. Why was a vet brought in from outside the county? The need for such a clinic is questionable.

There are three traditional reasons for such a rabies vaccination program:

1. There is no veterinarian in the area–but there are several in the locale.

2. A rabies outbreak- there is none.

3. A person cannot afford it. In that case the state agency will provide the vaccine completely free of charge.

Distemper shots were also given at the county clinic, which was illegal according to state laws. Why is Charlevoix County involved in such questionable activities when time and expense could be better placed elsewhere?

Stumping the Woods

...With Ollie O. Stump jr.

Many a patriarch, who hung up his cleats when Bob Feller was at his peak, established local records which live only in fading memories; the scenes of their triumphs buried beneath the steel and concrete of an age which chauffeurs pitchers from the bull pen to the mound.

In those austere times, when the counties assessed valuation was less than the contract price of a star today, foresighted elders saw fit to provide a ball field, complete with grandstand, at the tax supported fairgrounds.

The playing field was within the oval of the race track; the highest and best use of real estate. Here the young hopefuls made their nervous debut after an apprenticeship in the 'farmsystem' of pastures and vacant lots.

During the depression the team manager bought his title as do some aspiring politicians today. 'Shorty' Gill, to name one, was unanimously chosen by poverty striken players whose primary interest was some financial backbone for their four figure treasury of $10.11.

Shorty, the towns sole barber, was admirably suited for the position since his fiscal capability stemmed from a steady, though hardly fantastic, income.

The destitute spectators helped create the need for such a patron, for out of a crowd of five hundred fans, three hundred would pay admission into the hat for gate receipts of $15.00

Shorty was not the sponsor, no indeed! Unlike today, no individual could afford such philanthropy. Each team had eighteen sponsors, a mother and dad for each player, who would skimp to provide the necessary equipment for their building Mickey Mantle.

The baseball, in itself, was a capital investment and to increase its life expectancy a 'seamster' was recruited from among the ranks. His talent would be called upon each time a worn seam would burst, causing the ball to flutter in flight and to change a sure two bagger into a breakneck bunt.

Time would be called; the seamster snipped off a snarled backlash of loose thread and with deft stitches restored the ball to a lopsided facsimile of the original.

An official time out was called each time the ball got lost in the outfield hay and on the unfortunate occasions when a base hit 'dropped in' with an indelicate reminder that playing ball in a cow pasture has certain disadvantages.

Hank, our shortstop who had the distinction of making thirteen errors in one inning, stirred up quite a controversy with his idea for saving money.

He asked his uncle to turn out bats on his workshop lathe from the surplus of whiffletrees on the property. The jealousy with which these special bats were guarded led the opposition to rant violently about them being loaded with lead.

Though the whiffletree, known also as whippletree, is remarkable in every respect, it is highly improbable that it photosynthesizes lead during growth.

For the benefit of those unfamiliar with forestry, and perhaps for posterity, a brief description of this fast vanishing species might not be remiss.

The Whiffletree has a four inch diameter at the center and tapers uniformly to two inches diameter at each end. Its wood is pearaly white, densely grained and near indestructible; its durability stemming from its lack of bark or foliage.

Contrary to the forestry specialists, who can tell you its Greek name, the whiffletree is not extinct. An occasional one can still be found on some isolated farm where the third generation owner has tilled the soil for sixty years and more.

A modern day tractor farmer wouldn't know one if he bumped into it and would probably pull your leg to cover his ignorance.

Anyone gazing upon a whiffletree can't help but wonder why such a beautiful creation didn't serve a more useful purpose then as a ballbat which never earned a niche in Cooperstown.

Sports vs Books

By JIM FITZGERALD

After exhaustive study, 2 psychologists have reported that sports do not build character. Being a football star does not make Johnny a better person.

But I am laughing. I am remembering a basketball coach who was also a history teacher. He couldn't understand how I could be 6 foot tall and not want to play basketball. Every time he graded my history assignment, he subtracted 10 percent because I was a sissy and 15 percent because St. Stephen High was in last place in the St. Clair County League and it was all my fault.

He was 1 of those coaches who insisted Lincoln would never have been elected president if he hadn't been a little leaguer. World War 2 would be won on the West Point football field, he said, and France fell to Germany because French kids never learned now to play shortstop.

If that coach is still alive today, he probably thinks the world's greatest sissies are Dr. Bruce Ogilvie and Dr. Thomas Tutko, psychology professors at San Jose State College in California. For 8 years they tested 15,000 athletes, worked with 27 professional teams and hundreds of high school and college teams. And they concluded there is nothing to support the traditional idea that sports build character.

"Indeed," they said, "there is evidence that athletic competition limits growth in some areas..athletic competition has no more beneficial effects than intense endeavor in any other field."

So there, coach. 30 years later, my judgment is vindicated by experts. I never could understand how running around in public in my underwear would make me editor of the New York Times.

It's not that I don't like sports. As a boy, I went to all the games and crawled around under the bleachers, looking for dropped money. That's how I became a fan. I still attend more games today than most normal men. I take my son along to pick up the money although I get half if I see it first.

The other day my mother came visiting and got her first look at the recreation room recently installed in my basement. Dear old mom remembers my hyper-relaxed boyhood better than anyone. She remembers when I delivered newspapers on foot and my dad looked out the window and swore he had to line me up with some trees to see whether I was moving.

"You have finally achieved your boyhood ambition," mother said. "You have your own pool table and your own bar with running water and cold beer. I am so proud of you."

I explained to her that it was, shucks, really nothing. And I asked her if she had been worried, those many years ago, about a son who never went out for school sports.

"You were always sitting around the house reading," she remembered, "while the other boys were out playing ball. I asked you once if you thought you'de grow up to be a great man and you said you'd rather grow up to be a great reader."

Hmmm. I wonder if books build character? I don't remember any teacher ever saying so. I never won a letter for my sweater for reading. There were never any pretty cheerleaders chanting: "Go man, read that sentence, understand that paragraph. Rah rah."

"I'll bet you're glad I built my character with books instead of sports," I told mother.

"You bet," she said. "All you ever read were comic books."

Onward and Upward, with character.

Meet Charlevoix

Meet Bruce Bergmann

Four bridge operators stand watch over the bridge crossing the Pine River channel 24 hours a day, 365 days a year. The newest member of the team is Bruce Bergmann. Today in a brief interview, the Charlevoix Courier asks Bruce to explain a little bit about his job.

COURIER: How did you ever become the bridge tender? Is that what they call you?

BERGMANN: Yes. I was transferred up from Lansing. I put in for a job, I wanted to get home.

COURIER: About how long ago was that?

BERGMANN: Three years.

COURIER: So you've been here for about 3 years.

BERGMANN: Yes.

BERGMANN: Well, open and close the bridge.

COURIER: Is there a little more than just opening and closing the bridge?

BERGMANN: Well, you have a schedule to go by for the different boats and pretty much every day, there's not much to it.

COURIER: How many hours a week do you people have to work?

BERGMANN: 40

BERGMANN: I work a swing shift. Everybody else that's here works a permanent shift, works afternoons or nights, all the time in the mornings.

COURIER: Why are you open in the winter?

BERGMANN: For the Coast Guard and the fish tugs.

COURIER: Has anything really unusual happened to you during your three years here?

BERGMANN: No, not really I guess.

BERGMANN: Watch television and read books, that's about it.

COURIER: Don't you get a little tired of doing that?

BERGMANN: Yes, it gets boring after awhile.

COURIER: I noticed you had a tourist this morning, what do they usually ask you?

BERGMANN: There's quite a few of them. They are just curious about the bridge, they want to see how it works, what it does.

COURIER: What is the most often asked question?

BERGMANN: Just if they can come in and look at it.

COURIER: Do you have to work in connection with the Coast Guard for emergencies or anything?

BERGMANN: Yes. Just through the telephone, they call us up when they have an emergency, just to keep an eye out for it.

COURIER: Have they had any serious emergencies since you've been here, has anybody hit the bridge or any of the bridges here?

BERGMANN: They have been hit since I've been here but not while I was working.

COURIER: What happens usually when a boat hits the bridge?

BERGMANN: Well, the last boat that hit it was a Sea Systems Industry.

COURIER: Was that a big boat?

COURIER: Has there ever been a point in your short time here that the bridge has never worked or gone down when the boats wanted to come through.

COURIER: What happens then?

BERGMANN: We blow a distress signal whatever boat it is usually.

COURIER: What does that mean to the boat then?

BERGMANN: It means that they can't go through that they have to stop themselves.

COURIER: During the summer when we have all the boats and the tourists here, do you open the bridge every time a boat goes through or is there some kind of set pattern or what happens?

BERGMANN: It's open every half hour from 6 in the morning to 6 at night, and then from 6 at night to 6 in the morning, it's open on demand whenever a boat comes.

COURIER: It's like that during the daytime to prevent the traffic from being backed up?

BERGMANN: Yes.

COURIER: What do you like most about your job?

BERGMANN: Meeting people, you know through the summer especially, the tourists stop in and talk. Actually other than that it's everyday?

COURIER: Have you been involved wth boats all your life or is this something new?

BERGMANN: I've been around water all my life, I haven't really been involved with boats.

COURIER: How did you first get with the highway department working with bridges?

BERGMANN: I started working down in Kalamazoo for a district bridge department down there maintaining overpasses and stuff on expressways. There was a chance to move to Lansing wth a mechanical maintenance crew that took care of bridges all over the state, and when there was an opening up here, I put in for a transfer up here.

COURIER: Is this the only bridge like this in Michigan or are there other ones?

BERGMANN: No, there's about 10, or 12 or 13, quite a few.

Grandvue Medical Care Auxiliary Makes Plans to Hold Annual Tag Day

July will mark the beginning of Grandvue Medical Care Auxiliary's fifth year, and the Auxiliary is planning for its annual Tag Day to be held July 19th.

Grandvue Auxiliary had its first meeting on June 12, 1969, when approximately 75 ladies from the surrounding towns of Charlevoix, Boyne City, Walloon Lake, Boyne Falls, and East Jordan met to organize. Membership fees of $2.00 for an active member and $3.00 for an inactive member were agreed upon, along with a life membership fee of $50.00.

At present we have 64 members, with the majority of members coming from Boyne City and East Jordan.

We would like to have more Charlevoix women join our Auxiliary to make it a more well-rounded organization.

Meetings are held the second Thursday of the month, March thru December, at 2:00 in the afternoon, at the Facility.

During the year 1973-74, many projects were completed and interesting programs given. Agnes Darbee of Boyne City was our president.

Programs were varied, with the highlights including a very interesting program by Violet Manglos on foods and the development of cooking, including some delicious recipes. Vi is well known for her ways with foods.

Mrs. Watkins, Administrator of Grandvue, gave a very informative program on Medicare, Medicaid, and Private pay programs, and also the procedures for admission to Grandvue.

Mrs. Florence Wojan of the Department of Social Services spoke to us concerning her new duties as coordinator for volunteer services, and the desire of her office to work hand in had with the various organizations throughout the county.

In December, we gave a party for the patients, with the East Jordan High School chorus singing for us.

During the year we had two games parties and bake sales, and purchased 24 new chairs for the patients' dining room and also 18 new rockers for the patients' rooms. We are now working to earn the money to purchase a new whirlpool for the Physical Therapy Department.

In June we selected our new officers for the 1974-75 season, and elected Mary Margaret Geiken of Charlevoix as our new president.

Our members are reminded that July starts our new year, and all membership dues are payable at this time.

We are very proud of the fine job and the help this Auxiliary has been to Grandvue. Volunteer workers come three times weekly to do hair; they assist in Diversional Therapy; they do shopping for the patients on a weekly basis; they offer assistance when we need transportation for a patient; and are helpers with the Friday afternoon Chapel services.

Our thanks go to each and every Auxiliary member, and also to the many friends who have helped in various ways.

You Don't Need A Million

You don't need to be a millionaire or own a 40-foot Morgan to belong to the Charlevoix Yacht Club.

In fact, you don't even need a boat.

All you need is the love for the water and a willingness to have fun.

According to club member Josh Barnes, the group was formed four years to provide some organized fun for both power and sail boats.

Armed with over several hundred members, the Charlevoix Yacht Club provides some form of organized activity at least twice a week in the summer.

If it's not a box social or powder puff race, it's probably an organized group cruise to Harbor Springs or Beaver Island.

"Sometimes a group of boats will go together and travel in a fleet," Barnes says.

"It's basically a fun organization."

During the weekends, the Charlevoix industrialist said they attempt to schedule trips for each of the three fleets that make up the Charlevoix Yacht Club.

The club has power cruiser, sail and day time cruiser or turnabout fleets.

Then during the week they hold the mid-week sailing races in Lake Charlevoix on Wednesday night.

"Typically we are averaging 14 boats," he continued.

At the end of the season, the club offers a season trophy to the boat owner with the most race points.

On Monday nights, they also have the Wash Day Races where the skipper with the points gets special recognition at the end of the season.

"At the same time we try to get a little aerious and stress boat safety," he said.

One of the most successful programs this year has been the free sailing classes being offered to local residents.

Originally expecting only around 20 people, the class, which is offered to both youngsters and adults has over 80 residents.

To help with both the sailing lessons and to build-up the club, several area industries have donated 13-feet Puffers for members to use.

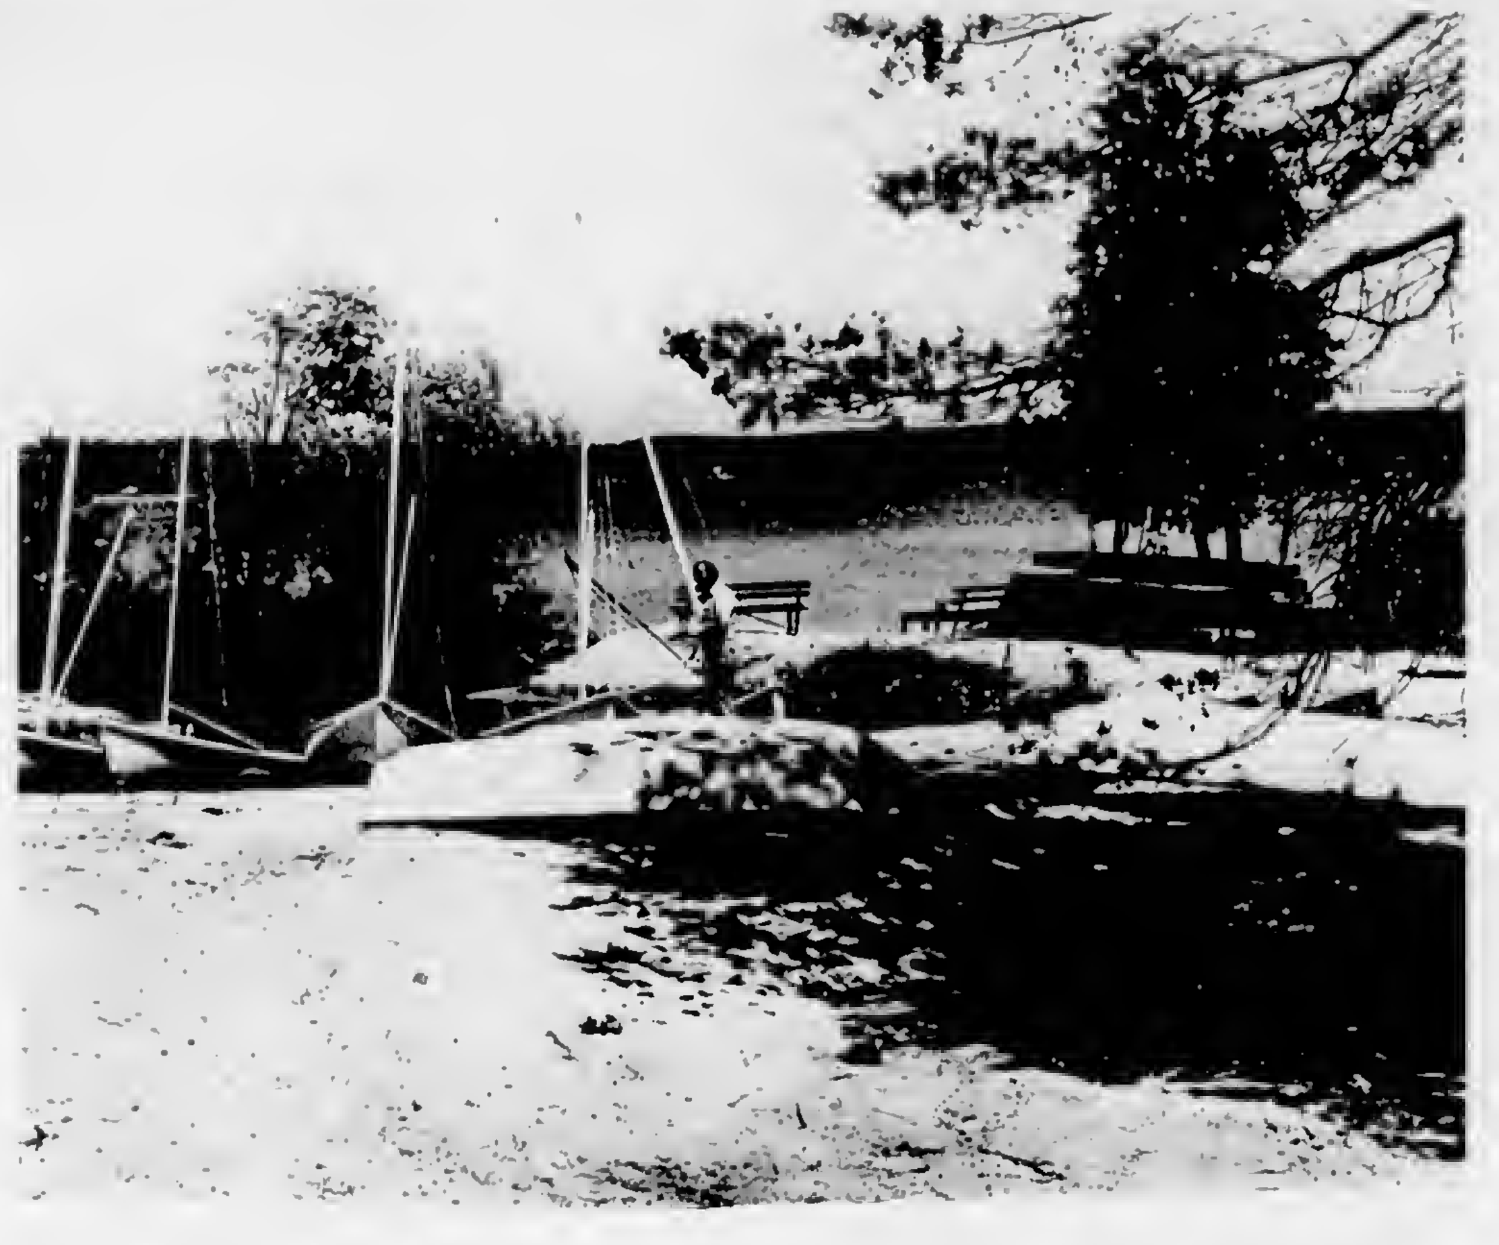
Those making dontions included American Mold, Hufford Industries, Medusa Cement and Lexalight.

The boats will be dedicated in ceremonies before the boat parade during the Annual Ventian Festival on July 26, 27, and 28.

In addition to the Puffers, Freedman Artcraft Engineering Corporation gave three small sail prams.

Barnes said they are still looking for a work and safety boat.

One of the major goals of the club, according to Barnes, is to obtain permanent facility.



JOSH BARNES looks at the new Charlevoix Yacht Club beach and docking area the local club is attempting to construct near Depot Beach in Charlevoix.

Club Offers Free Sailing

BY KAREN BERRY
Charlevoix Summer Resident

Something exciting has been going on down at Depot beach.

Free sailing lessons are being taught there.

These lessons are sponsored by the Charlevoix Yacht Club, and are being taught at 12 and 2 p.m. on Tuesday and Wednesday for children, and at 6:30 p.m. for adults.

During the class, student sailors will be learning all the basics of sailing. For instance, they will learn how to put up a sail, how to navigate a sailboat and what to do if your sailboat tips over.

"So to advance the students farther, we're not going to take any more beginners for the next five or six lessons."

The Charlevoix resident said the response has been great and that they now have 96 people taking the class.

Josh Barnes, who is in charge of the facilities, says: "It's great, especially since the classes have been split up into smaller groups."

Assistant instructor Linda Wojan said the class is very well organized and that the yacht club is providing an excellent opportunity for people to learn to sail.

"I'm glad they have the class," Linda Solomon said. "I am enjoying it and really learning a lot."

Another student agreed and said the class was absolutely great.

Courthouse Named As Historical Site

The Bellaire Area Historical Society will host a dedication ceremony for the historic marker which will honor the Antrim County Courthouse July 18 at 5:30 p.m.

This is only the second historic marker to be placed in Antrim County.

The Courthouse was built in 1904-05 after a twenty five year battle within the county, which included two votes and a State Supreme Court dedication.

In 1879, the people of the county voted to move the county seat from Elk Rapids to a spot in the woods which was the geographical center of the County, later to become the village of Bellaire.

That vote, which was very close, was only the beginning, not the end of the arguments about the new county seat and courthouse.

We feel that our courthouse has had an interesting past, and well deserves the honor of being made a State Historic Site.

On July 18th, dedication day, booklets telling the history of the county seat fight and the building of the Courthouse will be available.

Charlevoix Township

Firemen Zoom Ahead

When Charlevoix Township's fire whistle blows, the red fire trucks won't have to go as far.

Now for a little over a month, Charlevoix Township has been operating its own fire department.

The department represents over a year of training and purchasing equipment for township use.

Charlevoix Township Supervisor Oscar Stroud said the idea for a local fire department instead of depending on Charlevoix developed four or five years ago during a township meeting.

At that time, residents had asked why they couldn't have their own, he explained.

"No one had really taken the time to find out," he said until last year when the township board gave the go ahead to investigate the possibility.

Last July, Stroud said the township purchased two FWD Fire Trucks from the City of Wyoming, each had 500 gallon capacities with 700 gallon a minute pumps.

Then more recently, they secured a stand-by truck with 500 gallon a minute pumping capacity.

Then the township also purchased a 6 x 6 tank wagon.

"Everything has new equipment on it," Stroud said.

Running the township's department is a 20-man force that all recently completed a 66-hour training course certified by the Michigan Fire Fighters Council.

So far, the township spent over $35,000 for equipment and trucks.

"We think we can do it for less, but that isn't the main objective," Stroud said.

Stroud said Underwriters Insurance recently inspected the townships water systems and according to the field man, there doesn't seem to be any problems.

The department has two fire barns, one at Waller and Martin which was donated by Ed Shanahan and a second one on U.S. 31 South, in which the property was given by Medusa Portland Cement.

CHARLEVOIX TOWNSHIP Firemen are now prepared to handle any fire that takes place in their township after recently completing a state certified program.

Eleven Townships Have Zoning

Eleven townships in Charlevoix County now have permanent zoning ordinances. The latest addition to the list is Hayes Township, in which the ordinance became effective on July 2.

Other townships which have permanent zoning ordinances and the year they became effective are Charlevoix (1959), Marion (1961), Norwood (1961), South Arm (1964), Eveline (1969), Wilson (1972), Evangeline (1973), Boyne Valley (1974), Peaine (1974), and St. James (1974).

In addition, Bay, Chandler and Melrose Townships have interim zoning ordinances and are now working on permanent ordinances.

Hudson Township, the only township in the county not now covered by a zoning ordinance, is also in the process of preparing one.

New Book

Summer Resident Writes About Women

EDITOR'S NOTE: Rev. Dr. Thomas Boslooper has been a Charlevoix summer resident for many years. In this month's WomenSports, a new magazine published by Billie Jean King, excerpts from his new book, The Femininity Game, published by Stein and Day of New York, are presented in a feature, "Why Women Lose." New York Times Writer Judy Klemesrud offers the following brief character sketch of Rev. Boslooper to Courier readers.

One of America's most ardent advocates of physical rights for women is none other than a man. And a clergyman, at that. This unlikely feminist is the Rev. Dr. Thomas Boslooper, a mod-looking New Jersey minister with long blond sideburns and a fondness for turtlenecks.

Like most clergymen, he preaches from the pulpit every Sunday, in his 200-family Reformed Church of Closter, N.J., about 12 miles from New York City. But unlike most clergymen, he has spent much of his spare time in the last 16 years trying to find out why so many women have emotional problems.

"Most outstanding women are physically active in one way or another," the friendly, easy-going, 50-year-old clergyman told me in a recent interview. "They also tend to make the best wives and mothers because they have the fewest emotional problems."

Dr. Boslooper, who holds a doctorate in history from Columbia University, has put his findings in a highly interesting book, The Femininity Game. The book was written in collaboration with Marcia Hayes, a syndicated science writer.

The title refers to the game women play whereby they let men be the winners – in sports, in jobs, in life. Dr. Boslooper contends that women have been programmed since birth to play up their looks, charm and helplessness, and to compete against each other for men, rather than on the playing field or in the professional world against men--or alongside them.

Dr. Boslooper said he first began his study of women in 1957, while he was a clergyman in Pella, Iowa, because he was often called upon to counsel women with marital problems.

"I just didn't know what to tell them," he said. "So I decided to go to successful women who had coped well with life and see how they did it."

"I found that all the happy women were physically active and felt feminine, no matter what they did," he said. "Many women with emotional problems constantly tried to do things to make them feel weak and delicate. They neglected all physical activities in an attempt to feminize themselves. They played the femininity game."

He continued his interviewing–with his wife's help and with his own money–after the Boslooper family moved to Schenectady, N.Y. and then to Closter. His book was based on interviews with about 400 women, including Olympic champions, opera singers, fashion models, civic leaders and four former Miss Americas, to try to find out why some women are happy and others are miserable.

I first met Dr. Boslooper in 1963, during a swimming race across Lake Michigan, from Chicago to Benton Harbor, Michigan. I was there as a reporter and I asked his why he was so interested in the women swimmers. He told me about the research he was doing and I thought, 'Well, that's a new line.' Then he told me he was a clergyman.

When I met him four years later in New York, he was nearing the end of his research. At that time, he told me something that made me, a one-time tomboy, feel good.

"My general finding," he said, "is that all mature, intellectually creative women were tomboys when they were young."

His book is full of things that will make any physically active woman who feels guilty about it feel good. One of my favorite passages:

"What's important for women is to have a positive and realistic attitude about their own strength and physical abilities, about aggressiveness, about competition. Women whose attitudes are negative in any of these four areas nearly always develop physical and or psychological problems."

The lean, blue-eyed clergyman advocates coed competitive sports all through grade school, high school and college, "including football, if it could be set up where the players were basically equal as to size and competition."

One value of this coed competition, he believes, is that it would help condition both boys and girls at an early age into acknowledging that physical prowess is a natural expression for women. Also important, he feels, is that coed sports would teach women how to be competitive and aggressive, "something that is very important for their social and intellectual development and their own personal well-being.

"Women who don't get the positive experience of these drives become devious and bitchy," he told me. "I've found that what we call the obnoxious woman is a very aggressive woman who has no way to channel her drives."

Not surprisingly, Dr. Boslooper goes to the Bible to support his belief that women should be physically active. "The Book of Proverbs says a virtuous woman is skilled as a homemaker, but also purchases a field and plants a vineyard," he said. "It also says that she deliberately strengthens her arms and her abdomen."

And what do Dr. Boslooper's parishioners think of his advocating physical rights for women? "They're kind of excited about it," he said, "especially when they see me on TV. I was on the Mike Douglas Show twice, on a New York local talk show, and on 'To Tell the Truth.'"

Anticipating my next question, he added: "I express my views from the pulpit from time to time, perhaps about six times a year. I might say that one of the reasons men put women down professionally is that they are accustomed to putting them down physically. Men can keep women in a secondary position by keeping them weak and the best way to keep them weak is to keep them physically inactive."

When it comes to his own physical activity, Dr. Boslooper is quick to stress that he is no faddist. He plays a little tennis, a little golf and enjoys bicycling and swimming with his 46-year-old wife, Lois, and their two sons, Peter, 17, and Jonathan, 16.

And does his wife outshine him in any way? He smiled. "She can handle a sailboat better than I can," he said, with obvious pride, "and she drives a car better than I do. And it doesn't bother me one bit."

Local Historical Society Discuss Former Residents

The memoirs of two early Charlevoix residents were presented at the July meeting of the Charlevoix Historical Society by Mrs. Charles A. Duerr.

Archibald Buttars came to Charlevoix in 1856 aboard the schooner Rover. He later lived in Elk Rapids and Petoskey, returning to Charlevoix in 1884 to form a bank.

Butters' "Memories of Northern Michigan" appear in the Michigan History Magazine. He relates that there were only two families of white people in Charlevoix when he arrived, the only families between Bear River (now Petoskey) and Elk Rapids.

Buttars states that there were no roads or trails between Bear River and Elk Rapids in 1856 and tells of walking along the lake shore from Charlevoix to Elk Rapids in a Christmas snow storm that year.

Brayton Saltonstall spent much of his youth on Mackinac Island and later retired to Charlevoix to "devote his declining years to his interests as a churchman, a citizen and a father".

In his "Reminiscences of Mackinac", also printed in the Michigan History Magazine, Brayton Saltonstall tells how his father, William, first saw Mackinac Island in 1835, fell in love with the "Fairy Isle", and eventually secured a government contract to supply the garrison there with provisions.

The memoirs mention the sinking of the steamer Westmoreland near Sleeping Bear point in 1854 and describe how William Saltonstall and other passengers on the boat reached shore safely.

The family was touched by another lake tragedy in 1856 when two friends died in the burning of the steamer Niagara.

Old copies of the Michigan History Magazine are bound and are on the shelves of the Charlevoix Public Library. The above-mentioned memoirs appear in Volume Two. They are just part of a large selection of publications on local history available at the library.

close-by locations was destroyed by the early settlers who did not realize what they were doing. However, we are not concerned in this book with the history of the Mound Builders and shall leave that to the historians. Originally, most of this area of Michigan was controlled by the Ottawa tribe who came west and separated themselves from the Algonquins of the eastern seaboard. Again, we are not attempting to write Indian history but know that the Ottawas made a treaty with the Government at Washington and supposedly sold all of their claims at 14 cents an acre. The Indians are still waiting for their money.

Mr. and Mrs. Scott Blanchard

Sarasin-Blanchard

St. Mary's church was the scene recently of the wedding of Debra Dawn Sarasin and Scott William Blanchard.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Clayton M. Sarasin, sr., and Mr. and Mrs. Burr Blanchard.

The Rev. E. Francis Denay officiated at the double ring service at 11 a.m. Saturday, June 29. Mrs. Jock Gigg, at the organ, played a program of traditional music and accompanied Mrs. Maurice Cudd who sang "Because" and "The Lord's Prayer".

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose a gown of nylon organza for her wedding. Fashioned with a scoop neckline and full sleeves, the bodice was embroidered with seedpearls and sequins. The skirt ended in a chapel length train. A Juliet cap embroidered with pearls and sequins secured her fingertip veil.

Ronda Mason attended the bride as maid of honor and Sherri Crosier and Kathy Novotny were bridesmaids. They wore identical empire gowns of yellow rosebud print nylon styled with scoop necklines and carried baskets of summer garden flowers.

Linda Rosenthal, as flower girl, wore a gown similar to the attendants and carried a basket of garden flowers; Chris Sarasin, brother of the bride, was ringbearer.

Jay Mosoryak assisted the bridegroom as best man and Michael Pearsall and Gordon Solomon as groomsmen. Steve Sarasin and Clayton Sarasin, jr., brothers of the bride, and Owen Blanchard, brother of the bridegroom, seated the guests.

Mrs. Sarasin chose a lime green daisy print floor length gown for her daughter's wedding. Mrs. Blanchard, mother of the bridegroom, wore a navy floral print gown.

The couple will reside at 704 Sherman st. Charlevoix. They plan a wedding trip later in the year.

Wedding guests were present from Florida, Pennsylvania, Ohio, and Detroit and Flint in Michigan.

3. Carbon monoxide is a terrible way to kill an animal. It burns out lung linings and sensitive membranes before death - causing a terrible suffering. Larger dogs have been shot to death on the premises of the pound. This is all needless.

It costs pennies to inject a lethal painless sleeping solution into the animal, with a reusable needle and syringe. Sterilization is obviously needless.

There is no struggle, no pain, and it is instantaneous.

The other suggestion has been to devise a water coolant system for the carbon monoxide gas, inexpensive and simple. Both of these ideas have been flatly and pointlessly rejected by the "authorities". I fail to comprehend the continued necessity of this cruelty. Certainly the money lost in dog food to the rats or saved by non-feeding would be enough to provide a merciful euthanasia. In deed, the money spent for burying animal bodies in the dump would be saved if some of these animals were placed in homes.

4. Present conditions of the pound are a direct reflection upon the County Board of Commissioners - as they have been in charge for over 20 years. The failures of 20 years ago cannot be held accountable for the present mess. Without the present shelter built by people who tried to provide for animals, there would be....what?? It cannot be any worse. Indeed, it is fact that surrounding neighbors signed a petition requesting the County Board of Commissioners to make some improvements on the pound. It hurts surrounding property values and it is unpleasant to hear howling, miserable animals with shots in the night. All they received was an acknowledgement that their petition has been read. There seems to be an incredible lack of sensitivity in our elected officials in Charlevoix County.

5. The Charlevoix County Humane Society has asked for nothing from the County Board of Commissioners except the spirit of cooperation and an endorsement of their goals. We wanted to work with the commissioners to put an end to the misery of the pound.

We do not want to see the establishment of another pound but rather a humane shelter for all animals. Charlevoix County needs a shelter to: a) Place adoptable pets in homes, b) Educate people about pet population problems. A viable humane society can provide lists of veterinarians who spay and neuter at reduced fees. An ultimate goal would be to provide such services - as Emmet County plans to begin soon. c) Educate children on how to care for animals and handle them. d) Provide a humane death for unadoptable, sick or diseased animals. e) Help control stray dogs and cats in our county. f) Follow-up animal abuse reports. g) Provide a host of other services too numerous to mention here.

Mr. Staley's attitude is most strange. Members of the Humane Society have asked for nothing but an endorsement of the opportunity to do something for Charlevoix County. This is following the late President Kennedy's precept, "Ask not what your country can do for you, but what you can do for your country."

The Charlevoix County Humane Society is a hard-working group from all over the area. We do need more volunteer help and money.

If anyone is interested in volunteering their time or money, call myself or anyone of our members.

Sincerely,

Carol Leonard

–Supt. McKimmy outlined for board members Board of Education goals; the structure of the educational system from local boards to goals; the structure of the educational system from local boards to the State Board of Education and the Michigan Association of School Boards.

–Advised the board that the custodial staff at the school would hold its election July 18.

–Heard Don Brown request the city recreation director, Curt Kipke, that lifeguards not be rotated at the beaches, and that they be assigned to a given beach and remain there for the summer. Novak said you could not expect the guards to work seven days a week, that the swimming program was so large (some 400 students) that you could not expect the teachers to take a beach plus work with this many children and that it was necessary to rotate guards to a point.

–Vane Smith, high school principal, advised the board he would have copies of new school books at the next meeting.

Tennis Talk

Most people feel that by simply stepping onto the tennis courts they will get good practice. Subsequently, they will expect to improve and become frustrated when they do not.

It is true that there is no substitute for hitting a tennis ball. The more balls one hits, the more grooved the stroke becomes. The ultimate goal is to develop pinpoint control. If you become a total master of a ball's direction and speed, you will be very difficult to beat. This mastery can ONLY be developed through a systematic and disciplined approach to practice.

The novice and intermediate players should not be concerned at all with how hard they hit the ball. Accuracy should be their primary consideration. All too often I see beginners standing the full length of the course blasting balls off the fences. It is usually a one ball rally which does not benefit anybody.

Beginners should not hesitate to stand closer together. Get used to keeping the ball going even if it is a half-court rally. The only way to gain control over your forehand and backhand is learning how to rally.

It is crucial to keep the ball going back and forth regardless how slow the ball is going.

Once you get comfortable at half court, go ahead and move back to the base line.

Do not try to hit the ball any harder, however. Simply be concerned with keeping the rally going. Racquet control has to be developed first before you should even think about hittling the ball hard.

Emphasizing this point, consider the following: 75 percent of all points are ended on mistakes.

Regardless of the level of play, more points are lost by mistakes than are won by hitting a winning shot.

Anytime you are watching a tennis game, try keeping a mental note on the points played. You will see that mistakes dominate the games.

Therefore, it is essential to strive to eliminate your mistakes through hours and hours of practice. Control and consistency will win many more matches than sheer power.

If you are playing a match and your opponent hits every shot for a winner, then you have been beaten by a better player. At least, you have not beaten yourself through mistakes.

Once you get confidence in your ability to keep the ball going work on your accuracy.

For instance, before the rally starts, tell yourself where you want to hit your forehands. Work on hitting every shot to that spot or at least within two feet of that spot. Do not be satisfied until you can hit nine out of ten to

In the first annual Fourth of July Slo-pitch tournament held here during the weekend, the Holiday Inn of Petoskey went through a field of ten teams to win the tournament.

The double elimination event sponsored by Professional Vehicle Service and Lexalite Corp. of Charlevoix was played Friday through Sunday on the local diamond.

Dave Woods of the Holiday Inn squad was voted the tourney's most valuable player after leading in hitting with an .800 average. He also clouted seven home runs to lead in this department.

Woods also led the balloting for the all-tournament team. He won honors at third base

Also selected were;

Cliff Wilder, Lookout Bar-Manton, catcher .500.

Ernie Mindel, Holiday inn Petoskey pitcher .583.

Greg Dantji, Lookout Bar Manton SS .539.

Terry Blissett, Freedmans Charlevoix OF .700.

Al Currey, Freedmans Charlevoix OF .583.

In the opener on Friday, the Shed of Charlevoix defeated Pumco of Petoskey 7-0. Joe Beaudoin and Glen Taylor paced the winners with two hits each.

Holiday Inn took on Morweld Steel of Ellsworth next, winning by a score of 4-3. Dave Woods led the victors with two home runs with one each from Ernie Mindel and Ken Schram.

The third game saw Freedman Artcraft of Charlevoix defeat Colwell-Wangeman of Petoskey 10-7. Lee Milner hit a homer for the losers while Terry Blissett, Don Blalock, Al Currey and Kraag Lieberman homered for the winners. Blalock's pinch hit homer in the bottom of the sixth put the game on ice for Freedman's.

In the nightcap, First National Bank of Petoskey beat Big Rapids Merchants 11-5 as George Anderson and Tim Walker homered for Petoskey. O.J. Faust and Skip Trask homered for Big Rapids.

The Shed fell to Mason-Pierce of Traverse City 12-5 as the action got underway Saturday. Home runs by Mike Bee and Bo Collins aided the winning cause while Randy Faust and Chuck Matters had one each for the losers.

Lookout Bar of Manton then defeated First National Bank of Petoskey 4-3. George Anderson homered for the Petoskey nine.

It took Morweld Steel eight innings to eliminate Pumco 5-4. Tim Elenbaas and Jack Danbert had two hits each for the Steelers while John Ross had three for Pumco.

Big Rapids then eliminated Colwell from the tourney by a score of 6-4 with the help of three hits by Merritt Clark.

Another overtime contest spelled defeat for Morweld Steel as the Shed knocked them out of the running by a score of 5-4. This time it took 11 innings. Roger Crain scored the winning run of his fourth hit of the game.

In the only real rout of the tourney, Big Rapids avenged their loss to First National Bank, pounding 26 hits enroute to a 23-1 victory. Clark had two homers for the victors in a home-run-filled contest.

The next game in the winner's bracket saw Holiday Inn give Mason-Pierce its initial loss of the tournament by a score of 9-7. Mindel, Woods and George Cook all blasted homers for the winners while Bee and Alpens had one each for Traverse City.

Freedman's went down to defeat in the next game, bowing to Lookout Bar of Manton 12-5. Bucky Colton accounted for two homers while Cliff Wilder had four hits including a homer for Manton. Blissett, Lieberman and Bernie DeVries blasted homers for the losers.

In the nightcap, Freedman's defeated the Shed 9-6 to eliminate them from the action. Currey, Lieberman, Blissett and DeVries led the action with homers for the victors. Beano Archey led the attack for the losers with two hits.

As action resumed Sunday morning, Mason-Pierce eliminated Big Rapids 13-6 with the aid of two homers each from Alpens and Frank Mnjerle and one from Collins.

In the battle between the undefeated teams, Holiday Inn beat Manton 5-0 with Woods clouting two homers and Mindel and Al Wolf adding one each.

As the action continued, Mason-Pierce eliminated Freedman's 8-4 with Bee knocking two over the fence while Jim Urick got one homer. The loser's attack was led by Bill Joy with two hits and Currey's homer.

In their third game of the day, Mason-Pierce knocked Lookout Bar out by a score of 16-10. Urick, Alpens and Bee homered for Traverse City. Wilder hit two out for the losers.

In the championship game of the tournament, Mason-Pierce, in their fourth game of the day, was eliminated by a strong Holiday Inn team 15-8. Woods and Ken Schramm had two homers each.

Next, try to do the same thing for the backhand. Once you feel you are gaining control over your forehand and backhand, concentrate on hitting your shots deep (that is, close to the base line). A soft deep shot is much more effective than a short hard one. It keeps your opponent back by the fence and off balance.

A disciplined practice session, concentrating on consistency, accuracy and speed in that order, is more effective than days of sloppy practice. The only way to improve your match play is to work on your weaknesses in practice.

B. No building shall hereafter be erected or altered to exceed the height limitations, or occupy a greater percentage of lot area, or intrude upon the required front yard, rear yard, side yards or inner or outer courts, or accommodate or house a greater number of families, or provide less space per dwelling unit than is specified for the district in which such building is located.

C. No lot area and no yard, court, parking areas or other required space shall be divided, altered, reduced or diminished to create an area or dimension less than the minimum required under this Ordinance, except where such reduction has been brought about by the expansion or acquisition of public right-of-ways for a street, road or highway. Section 5.03 - Lot-Building Relationship

Hereafter, every building erected, altered or moved shall be located on a lot of record as defined herein, and except in the case of an approved multiple dwelling development, there shall be no more than one (1) principal building and its permitted accessory structures located on each lot in any residential or agricultural district.

5. Affects only property subject to exceptional or extraordinary circumstances or conditions that do not generally apply to other property or uses in the vicinity, and have not resulted from any act of the applicant.

D. In addition to the foregoing conditions, the following rules shall be applied in the granting of variances:

1. In granting a variance, the zoning board of appeals may specify, in writing to the applicant such conditions in connection with the granting that will, in its judgment, secure substantially, the objectives of the regulations or provisions to which such variance applies. The breach of any such condition shall automatically invalidate the permit granted.

2. No application for a variance which has been denied wholly or in part by the zoning board of appeals shall be submitted for a period of one (1) year from the date of the last denial, except on grounds of newly discovered evidence or proof of changed conditions found upon inspection by the board of appeals to be valid.

3. Each variance granted shall become null and void unless the provisions of the variance have been utilized by the applicant within six (6) months after the granting of the variance.

Section 7.06 - Stay of Proceedings

An appeal stays all proceedings in furtherance of the action appealed from unless the Zoning Administrator certifies to the Zoning Board of Appeals after the notice of the appeal shall have been filed with him that, for reasons of facts stated in the certificate, a stay would, in his opinion, cause imminent peril to life or property, in which case proceedings shall not be stayed otherwise than by a restraining order, which may be granted by the Zoning Board of Appeals or, on application, by the Circuit Court on notice to the officer from whom the appeal is taken and on due cause shown.

Youth Ask Citizens

S.O.S.--Save Our Sand

Youngsters living near Charlevoix's North Point are up in arms over the city's policy to remove sand from Mt. McSauba.

They claim it's ruining some of Michigan's best sand dunes and they've been out doing something about it.

Monday night, several members of the group presented city councilmen with an unofficial petition containing signatures of residents objecting to the city removing sand for use at Depot and Ferry Avenue beaches.

The petition represented several weeks of work done by the youngsters trying to warn the community about the alleged potential environmental threat.

"We're doing it because other people should be interested," explained 13-year-old Holly Postmus.

"We're asking the city to stop removing the sand."

Both Holly and other area residents have been concerned about the 40-acre lakeshore property that was purchased by city for $800 38 years ago from Edward C. Waller of Chicago.

The property has both a natural sand dune area and forest land that have been used as a park by local residents.

"We are very concerned about the camping, soil erosion, and city taking away the sand," says Mrs. Alvin Ranger.

Holly's mother, Mrs. Cynthia Postmus, added that there use to be an enormous sand ridge along the Lake Michigan lakeshore, but it has been quickly disappearing because of what they say is the city's policy of taking away sand.

City Street Foreman Bill Brodine said the complaints and petition came as a surprise to him.

"People want us to haul more," he said.

"Right now Depot Beach could use some."

He said the street department has been using Mt. McSauba sand for years to replenish washed away sand at both Depot and Ferry Avenue Beaches.

"If you don't get it from the mountain, where else are you going to get it, he asked.

"As far as I'm concerned they should haul more.

"Everybody I talked to wanted us to do it."

He said the city has been doing it over the years so that people will have nice city beaches for their children to play on.

When asked last Friday, Mayor Ed Hansen said he wasn't aware the city was still taking it away.

One of the major problems with the property, according to Hansen, has been the fact that it is located in Charlevoix Township and is too remote for the city to police.

Because of that, Hansen said perhaps the city should consider trading it for property that might be more advantageous to the city

Equally concerned about the property has been engineer Arthur Ranger, who earlier this year asked the Department of Natural Resources to designate the North Point areas as an environmental area and bring it under the protection of the Shorelands Protection and Management Act

But Director A. Gene Gazlay said that the sand dunes protection is not provided for in the Shorelands Act.

The shoreline area has been discussed for several years by many experts.

Dr. Richard A. Davis, a Western Michigan University associate professor of geology, has been conducting a continuous shoreline study and has warned shoreline property owners about the threat of erosion.

"Loss of land to erosion may be held to individual property, but this may facilitate erosion to a neighbor's property," he said.

People don't fully understand the causes of shoreline erosion, he noted, so they build homes near the lake without considering possible future damage of erosion.

"In the future preventive laws could be regulate commercial and private development on erosion-prone sites, but now only some local municipalities have that right."

Destruction of the dunes has also brought an archeological concern.

Charlevoix has been the center of excavations conducted by Michigan State University archeologists who have uncovered a total of 2,550 square feet of village, some of which dates back to 1,500 years B.C.

Residents are concerned that future excavation of the land might be prohibited if the city continued to take sand away.

City Council Toughens Watch On Mt. McSauba Property

Charlevoix's 40-acre lakeshore property located north of the city will be watched much closer following action taken Monday night by city council.

The city agreed to ban use of motor vehicles, including motorcycles, in its Mt. McSauba ski resort park following complaints from adjacent property owners.

Besides posting a ban on motor vehicles, councilmen also directed the police department to investigate and file complaints under the state trespass law against those misusing the park.

The decision followed a 30-minute discussion between the council and local residents about how people were leaving trash and making too much noise with motorized vehicles.

Residents also complained about the city taking sand from the dunes portion of the property and trucking it to other beaches throughout the city.

"The problem seems to revolve around that it is city property in the township," said Councilwomen Jeannine Wallace.

"No one seems to know who should control it."

She said the city's park ordinance appears to only be useful for property located within the corporate limits, but does not have any legality over the Mt. McSauba property located in Charlevoix Township.

"The city attorney feels we should treat it as private property owners," she said.

However, Mrs. Arthur Ranger said that complaining as private property owners to the county sheriff has not been successful.

"We would also express our concern about the city taking sand out of the area," Mrs Ranger added.

Mrs. Wallace said that with 400 sq. miles in Charlevoix County to cover, it is difficult for the county sheriff, but residents should make a call.

"I think the first thing we have to do is see what this land is committed for" he said.

"It is understood to be a park."

City Attorney Donald Berlage said one way to handle the problem is to handle the dune buggies that seem to be tearing up the land.

He then presented the council with a suggested resolution to curb the vehicles and at the same time ask the township to develop a park ordinance.

The matter was referred to committee for further investigation, but while doing so, Alvin Ranger asked the city to also consider waste disposal if it is going to continue allowing for camping.

In other business, the council:

–Took no action on Lake Charlevoix Cable TV's $1.50 rate hike because they felt they had no jurisdiction.

Ruppe Visits Charlevoix

Congressman Phil Ruppe of the 11th District announced Monday, July 15, he will hold office hours at the Charlevoix County Building this Friday, July 19th.

The office hours, which are scheduled for 2:00 to 4:00 P.M., are open to area citizens interested in discussing national legislative issues or personal concerns dealing with the Federal Government in a private meeting with the Congressman. No appointment is necessary.

Who's Going to Pay $800?

That's the amount of money the city charged the township for giving them only 30 days notice over cancelation of city fire protection.

"They say they're not going to pay," Acting City Administrator Robert Wexstaff told city council.

The apparent controversy over the bill came with the city billed the township for one month's fire protection after the township had started up its own department.

According to city officials, the township didn't give them enough notice that their services would no longer be required.

To further cloud the issue, Mayor Ed Hansen has told the city fire department to cover any township fire calls phoned in to the city to insure the fire is covered bill the township.

The matter was referred to committee, but no one appeared to know how the city would collect the money from the township for either the month's service or the township fire runs.

One Week Left

What? No Venetian Queen

Where have all the pretty girls gone?

Apparently, they've faded and gone like the flowers in the song for the Venetian Queen committee has been able to find only one candidate for the Venetian Queen contest now underway.

Mrs. Bruce Bartlett, chairman of the Venetian Queen committee, said she and members of her committee have contacted a minimum of 25 girls and invited them to enter the contest which features a Venetian Queen program with a host of prizes including a cash prize for the Queen plus lesser prizes for the next three runners-up.

She went on to say that the Committee would have to complete plans no later than Thursday if they are to have the contest always held at the high school gymnasium on the Friday night of the Festival.

The queen and her court ride on the beautiful Charlevoix float during the Venetian Festival parade and participate in the program at East Park before witnessing the Venetian Boat parade Saturday evening. The Venetian Queen then represents Charlevoix at various festivals and other events throughout the year.

Where have all the pretty girls with a sense of civic pride for their community gone? If you know, won't you please call Mrs. Bartlett or the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce office and let them know.

If they're available, Charlevoix's lovely Venetian float will not be a part of the Venetian Festival street parade and the city will be without royalty for the coming year.

WVOY--Charlevoix's Latest

It's WVOY, 1270 on your AM radio dial.

General Manager Terry Edger says all they need now is a telegram from the Federal Communication Commission saying it's all right to begin.

According to Edger, listeners will hear mostly contemporary radio programming that's geared for Charlevoix's young adult audience.

"We're going to be constantly aiming at that type of audience," Edger says.

For example, the station is only going to carry five minutes news sports on the hour and those won't be sponsored by an advertiser.

"We think these are features that listeners should get to listen to without being sponsored," he said about the news, sports and weather.

Edger added that once the station established its programming, it will remain the same all day and not be in blocks containing different music types like in other stations.

Edger comes to Charlevoix with a wealth of radio experence that dates back to when he began operating an amateur radio station in junior high in Hastings.

After four years of electronic experience in the Air Force, he began working as an engineer-announcer for a Muskegon radio station and later became chief engineer of a Charlotte, Michigan station.

Then it was on to Gates Radio Company in Bloomington, Illinois for two years to be an automation program specialist and then back to Hastings as an announcer until moving to Charlevoix in March to set up WVOY.

His wife, Judy, also holds a FCC license and will be the station receptionist.

Tim Moore, who will be doing the morning show, began his broadcasting career with a Houghton

"Among other things they'll learn; during the one hour period is how to balance, they'll acquire more coordination, communication without speaking and most of all, they'll get a chance to use their own imaginations and creativity," said the Charlevoix summer resident about her students.

These Modern dance lessons are being given in the basement of the Charlevoix Public Library from 4-5 P.M. on Tuesday for children, and on Monday from 7-8 for adults.

'Famous Father' Starts This Week At Cherry County

Forrest Tucker and his daughter Brooke will star in the comedy Rock A Bye Daddy at the Cherry County Playhouse July 16 through the 21st. Mr. Tucker, well known as the star of the popular TV shows F Troop and Dusty's Trail, will play the part of a bewildered father who finds himself suspected of being responsible for the delicate condition of his daughter's girlfriend. Brooke who appears regularly on Medical Center will play the part of Mr. Tucker's stage daughter.

Show business has long been a tradition in the Tucker family. Forrest Tucker's mother introduced him to the stage early in his life when she took him on tours of the Midwest, when she was performing as a spiritual singer. Mr. Tucker's career began, like so many famous comedians of our day, on the burlesque stage, where he worked as a stand up comic. His career includes over 100 films and 2,000 performances as Prof. H. Hill in the national company of The Music Man as well as his many TV appearances.

The Tuckers appearance in Traverse City will mark the second time that father and daughter have performed Rock A Bye Daddy. Earlier this year they received critical acclaim for their performances at the Dury Lane Theatre in Chicago.

Rock A Bye Daddy plays Tuesday through Friday at 8:30 Saturday at 5:00 and 9:30 Sunday and at 7:30 and a Thursday Matinee at 2:00 p.m.

Ferry Brings Memories

The long association of the Alexander family of Ironton with the Ironton Ferry was renewed last Wednesday when Diane Alexander cut the ribbon heralding completion of major repairs on the 46 year old vessel.

The ceremony was held at the west approach to the ferry before an assemblage of Charlevoix County officials and local townspeople. County Road Engineer-Director Irvin H. Sturm and County Commissioner Ralph Richardson officiated.

Diane's great grandfather, Captain Sam Alexander, served as skipper of the ferry boat for almost half a century before his death in 1948 and her grandfather, Ross Alexander, worked on the boat with his father for several years as a young man.

It was in the late 1880's that young Sam Alexander started working on the old wooden structure which was operated by manpower to ferry horses and wagons, supplies and people across the south arm of Lake Charlevoix. At that time, passengers joined crew members in pulling the cables that "powered" the vessel from shore to shore.

Nineteen-one was a big year in the history of the Ironton Ferry. That was when a one-cylinder gas engine, built by Theodore Erickson of Charlevoix, was installed to provide power, and Sam Alexander became captain of the ferry.

Eventually this was replaced by a two-cylinder engine which served until the old wooden boat was replaced by the present steel structure in 1927.

Captain Sam sent son Ross to Ferrysburg that year to bring the new ferry boat "home." Since it had no power, it was towed by the "Fulmar", a Bureau of Fisheries boat stationed in Charlevoix. The trip from Grand Haven to Charlevoix took five days because of stormy weather.

The new ferry boat coast $12,000 in 1927. The rebuilding and repairs this year will amount to almost $100,000.

It was in 1936 that the creator of Ripley's "Believe It Or Not" came to Ironton, crossed on the ferry, and used it for one of his famous cartoons. The legend read, "Sam Alexander, ferry boat operator, has traveled 15,000 miles and was never farther than 1,000 feet from his home."

The wide circulation of the cartoon brought immediate fame to "Captain Sam" and the Ironton Ferry.

He received communications from all over the world and sightseers came by the thousands to ride the famous ferry.

Among the celebrities who "came to see" were Amos and Andy of comedy fame, according to Ross Alexander.

Originally, the Ironton Ferry was operated by Eveline Township and subsidized by Charlevoix County.

In 1949 the county took over operation, and for the first time a fee was charged for passage.

The first two years the fee was ten cents, then it was raised to 15 cents, 25 cents and 35 cents to its present 50 cents as higher costs of operation and inflation became a fact of ferry life.

Ross Alexander recalls many things about his father, but the story he likes to tell is how "Captain Sam", as a challenge, kept the ferry running all one winter. Some nights he had to go out two or three times to run the ferry in an ice-breaking operation.

When asked what he thought about replacing the Ironton Ferry with a bridge Ross quickly indicated he didn't like the idea. "The bridge would have to be high – like the Mackinac Bridge – or a swing bridge. It would have to be a mile long. It would be too expensive. The ferry is unique."

Mr. and Mrs. Ross Alexander live in the house in Ironton where Ross was born 75 years ago. His roots are deep in the community, where he served as postmaster and keeper of a general store.

Mrs. Alexander, a native of Central Lake, met her husband when she came north to teach school in Ironton. She has been a correspondent for the Charlevoix Courier for many years and is writing a history of Ironton.

"Captain Sam's" grandson and namesake and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Alexander, who are Diane's parents, also live in Ironton.

Grandparents and parents were proud spectators as Diane cut the ribbon in front of the ferry. The ceremony undoubtedly brought back many memories of the Captain and early days of the Ironton Ferry.

Charlevoix Co. Humane Society Studies Laws and Constitution

A constitution and by-laws was presented to members of the Charlevoix County Humane Society at the July meeting, held last week in Boyne City.

After consideration by the Executive Committee it will be presented again for final approval.

Robert McKown reported on a visit he had made to the Emmet County Humane Society facilities and suggested some ways in which they could be adopted to Charlevoix County needs.

He also expressed hope that the Society could work with the County in providing necessary care for abandoned and lost animals.

After the constitution is adoped, the Society will go before the Board of Commissioners with a plan of cooperative action.

A report supplied by Commissioner Ralph Richardson outlining how money budgeted last year for dog control was spent, was criticized for vagueness, and some figures were questioned.

The Society "reluctantly" accepted the resignaton of President Mrs. Richard Miles, who is moving out of the county, and elected Mrs. Anthony Wojan, Jr. of Charlevoix to succeed her.

Other officers who have been serving the newly-formed Humane Society are Mrs. Robert Snyder, East Jordan, vice-president; Mrs. Irvin Sturm, Boyne City, treasurer; McKown of Boyne City, recording secretary; and Mrs. McKown, corresponding secretary.

At the present time, members are busy with fund-raising projects and a membership drive. They will also have a float in the Venetian Night parade.

Sheriff's Marine Division Patrol Watches Charlevoix Area Lakes

The sheriff's Marine Division has two boats. One is located in Walloon Lake and is used in other smaller lakes in the county. The other is located in Lake Charlevoix and is used also to patrol Round Lake and parts of Lake Michigan.

The marine patrol units are equipped with specialized rescue equipment and direct radio communication with the sheriff's department to serve the operators of the 2,417 registered boats in the county.

Responsibilities of the Marine Division include enforcing Michigan Waterways laws, retrieveing the bodies of drowned persons, inspecting boat liveries, inspecting pleasure craft for boat safety equipment, search and rescue assignments, and conducting boat safety courses for young people.

Last year, the Marine Division spent 650 man hours patrolling the lakes of Charlevoix County, investigated four boating accidents, inspected 478 pleasure boasts for safety equipment, inspected 191 livery boats, and instructed 114 students in pleasure boating courses.

The sheriff's Marine Division feels that it is responsible to some degree for the good safety record of boats on Charlevoix County lakes.

Last year, the entire state of Michigan registered 392 boating accidents, 94 deaths, 183 injuries, and property damage amounting to $235,300.

Marine Deputy Nelson Green is assigned to the Walloon Lake Patrol unit and Marine Deputy Art Spears to the Lake Chasrlevoix patrol unit.

A POWER transformer in downtown Charlevoix went out in smoke last Friday and left part of the downtown district in the dark for three hours. City Administrator Robert Wexstaff thinks it might have been caused by an electrical storm earlier in the week.

County Dog Shelters Require Cooperation

Since Charlevoix County is faced with the possible closing of its dog shelter by the State and there is now an active Humane Society in the County, it seems that the time has come for them to work together.

There have been charges made by each group against the other. The Humane Society has charged the County with gross neglect of dogs in the shelter, with using inflated figures on costs of providing a proper shelter, and with insensitivity to the whole problem.

A member of the Board of Commissioners has stated that the County cannot share financial responsibility with a new organization whose purposes and aims are unknown to them, whose fervor might die down, and who could leave the County with their debts.

Counties and Humane Societies have worked together successfully in other communities. Emmet County is an example. There, volunteer Humane Society help spends much time trying to place unwanted animals, doing clerical and light maintenance work, and raising funds for operation of the shelter.

It would not take much time or cost much money to survey other communities to find out how humane societies and governmental units work together for mutual benefit.

Any cooperative endeavor should be more than meeting minimum state requirements for animal shelters.

It should include education of the public in the care of animals and animal owners' responsibilities to the public. It should make possible inexpensive sterilization and spaying and necessary immunizations. It should provide for placement of adoptable animals and humane disposition of those not adoptable.

Working together, County authorities and the Humane Society should insist that all laws governing control of animals are enforced humanely and without discrimination.

Before the State actually closes the Charlevoix County dog shelter, leaving the County with no place to shelter apprehended animals, and while the Humane Society is seeking a format of usefulness, we suggest that County and Society meet together in a spirit of helpfulness.

Charlevoix Recreation Does Excellent Work

Charlevoix Recreation Department should be commended for its recent handling of the Charlevoix Tennis and Slo-pitch tournaments.

Both events attracted widespread interest and developed a feeling of goodwill in the community.

It was particularly good to see such a large response from local residents.

Tennis is especially becoming a very popular sport in Charlevoix and should receive as much financial support from city council as possible.

We would hope they would continue to search for more federal funds to construct more tennis courts.

It is a sport that can be played and enjoyed by people of all ages without requiring a large financial investment for equipment.

As for ball diamonds, we would hope the city continues to work with local civic groups in establishing municipal diamonds that can be used by various group.

It is unfortunate that both the tennis courts and diamonds have raised the wrath of local adjacent property owners.

In planning for future sites, perhaps the city should look towards constructing some of these areas near the city airport.

There is a lot of property that because of restrictive zoning required because of airport usage that might be able to be used for tennis.

In the meantime, we urge local residents to cooperate as much as possible with the city in resolving their difference.

Both sports are important, especially to our youth, and should be promoted as much as possible.

Mt. McSauba Needs Some Attention

A serious environmental issue is beginning to develop on the Mt. McSauba property outside of Charlevoix and we hope something is quickly done about it.

For the last several years, the public has been taking advantage of the beautiful stretch of beach and woodlands given to the city many years ago.

However, the property is now becoming an eyesore and its beauty is being taken away by the sight of trash and motorcycles noise.

There also seems to be a question of whether or not the city should continue to remove sand from the dunes to other city beaches.

The city should carefully look at the property and establish what it wants it to be used for.

But in any case, the city should post rules and then enforce them.

As it stands now, it is not clearly defined what the park usage is designated to be and as a result has many conflicting usages.

Residents should also start patrolling the area for trash and take it on their own to make sure it is disposed of.

Letters to the editor

Dr. Roberts Doing Well

Dear Charlevoix Courier,

Would you please print this article in your paper?

I would like to pass this word along to Jim's friends back home.

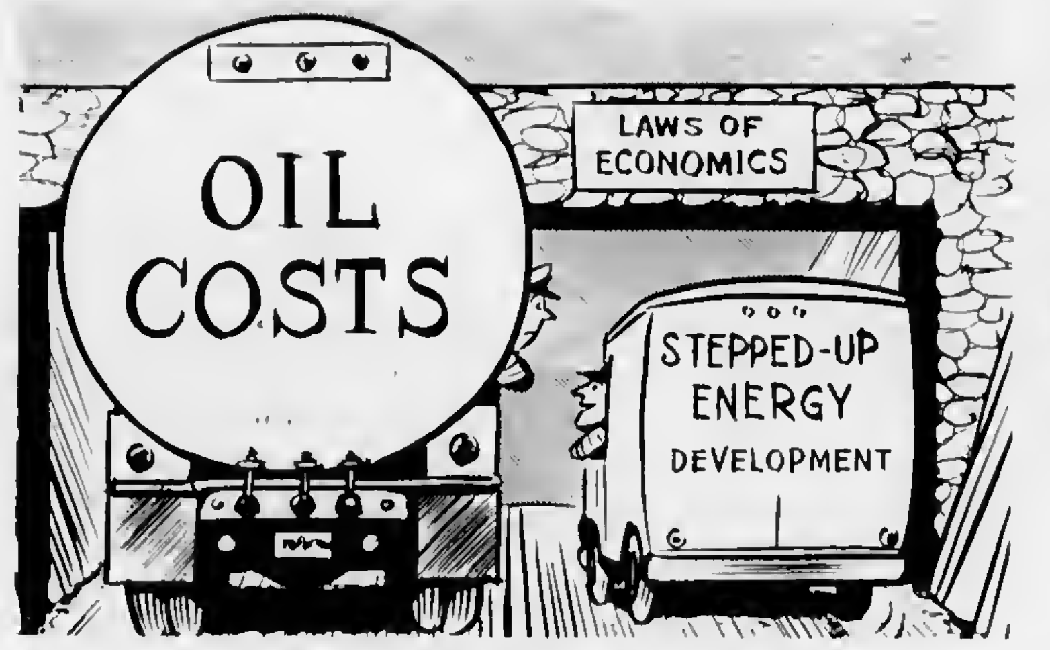
He is now back home, recuperating, in Slippery Rock and is doing very well.

Dr. Roberts was a speaker at Charlevoix's Commencement exercise in June 1970.

Dr. Roberts is the son of the late Bertha M. Roberts of Barnard.

Thank you very much,
Mary E. Schrandt
(sister of Lansing)



"MIND IF I PASS BY...?"

Clockwise

By BOB CLOCK

BEAVER ISLAND–When the Clocks moved to Beaver Island last month, I had hopes that the girls and Danny would have an opportunity to taste some of the elemental delights of pioneer living, such as building a fire to cook their breakfast, pumping their own drinking water, washing their own clothes and doing without such conveniences as an electric refrigerator, indoor plumbing and television.

This, of course, is not the case. Our Beaver Island home has a magnificent four-burner, two-oven gas range in the kitchen. Our water–hot and cold–comes from taps in the kitchen and bathroom. We also have an electric refrigerator, an indoor john and a superb TV which pulls in as many channels as the Lake Charlevoix Cable TV Co.

There is even a laundromat on the island which Judy located within minutes after setting foot in St. James. It's a wonderful little facility on the King's Highway, owned and operated by Mrs. Winnie McDonough.

I had just about given up hope of giving our youngsters a taste of life-in-the-rough when an unexpected opportunity presented itself last Tuesday morning. Judy was in Charlevoix cleaning up after our first tenants left and I had been left in charge of our brood in St. James. A cursory inspection of the premises convinced me that a trip to the laundromat was in order before Judy returned.

At my urging, the kids assembled all of their dirty clothes in the back of the bus and Tuesday morning we headed out for Winnie's establishment. We were chagrined to find all of the washers in use with a good half-hour wait ahead of us.

So we all piled back in the bus and I told the kids I'd show them how the pioneers washed their clothing "when daddy was a boy." Furthermore, it was a beautiful sunny day, just right for drying clothes outside on the line.

Back at the house I found two big tubs hanging outside the shed and a little three-legged table that obviously was intended as a stand for the wash tub itself. Then I searched the premises in vain for a washboard. There wasn't even a nail for one on the side of the shed.

My next stop was McDonough's General Store.

"You won't believe this," I told the clerk, "but I need a washboard."

Without flinching she located one for me on a high shelf at the rear of the store. It was a genuine antique manufactured by the National Washboard Co. of Memphis and Chicago. It was the only one in stock and carried a pre-Civil War price tag of $1.50. The clerk assured me I could get several times that much for it if I wanted to re-sell it to a dealer in early Americans. I assured her I wanted to use it.

I also found a bar of Fels Napha soap, another piece of early Americana that I thought had been relegated to the Smithsonian Institution.

For the next hour, the Clock children and their pioneer father played rub-a-dub-dub in the backyard, scrubbing clothes in one tub, rinsing them in another and hanging them on the line to dry.

We were so busy we hardly noticed when an ominous tattle-tale grey cloud crossed the sun, followed by another and another. I was just hanging the last of Danny's underpants on the line when the first drops of rain began to fall.

I was heartsick to have all of our back-breaking labor come to naught, but I wasn't about to let the kids know.

"There!" I said brightly, viewing three clothes lines sagging with dripping garments," we finished just in time. The rain will provide the final rinse cycle before the sun comes out to dry them. That's the way the pioneers used to plan it."

They all looked at me with doubtful expressions, but allowed as how the rain shouldn't hurt–much.

The rain, as you'll recall, continued most of the afternoon, followed by a real cloudburst toward evening. The laundry stayed on the line all night and didn't even start drying until the next morning when the sun rose in a crystal sky over the Straits of Mackinac.

"Now, isn't this a lot better than fiddling around at the laundromat?" I asked the girls the next afternoon as we unpinned the clothes and folded them into our laundry baskets.

Oddly enough, no one answered.

My Neighbors

"How can I be sure you're not bugged?"

Stumping the Woods

...With Ollie O. Stump jr.

A mules intution prompted Jenny to note a certain air of finality in Charlie's act of hanging the scythe on the barn wall. Put off guard by her reflections, she found herself imprisoned in the harness which Charlie threw across her back with a triumphant smile.

Her foreboding of skullduggery was confirmed when she was led, minus buggy, out to the road and headed toward town. During their stormy years of mutual distrust, each time Charlie proceeded on foot he would make the return stip seated comfortably over a new set of wheels destined to ease his labors.

Charlie's evasiveness, when asked why he didn't ride her rather than walk, recalled fond memories to Jenny of his only attempt to subject her to such humiliation. Charlie had vaulted from the porch rail to get aboard and, like a projector run in reverse, 'devaulted' with an enthusiastic assist from Jenny.

While thus dismounting Charlie demolished the porch rail, wrecked a planter and crashed partway through his newly-hung screen door. The footwork, on her part, necessary to give Charlie the proper momentum sent a rock through the front window and into Aunt Esthers china closet, creating further difficulties for the hapless vaquero.

Arriving in town, they turned into the alley behind the hardware and there it was, a gaudily painted two-wheeled contraption with a dishpan seat impaled on a flexible steel strap and a saw toothed arm angling upward from the undercarriage. With Charlie enthroned like a maharaja, they rolled up main street and further into the mechanical age on wheels pulled by a mule.

In one backward glare Jenny noted a design fault which she could use to advantage; the seat was within range of her swishing tail. Since vehicles were not recalled for driving hazards in those days, Charlie was responsible for any modifications. He briefly considered immobilizing the smarting hairpiece with a weight but caution dictated acceptance of this indignity rather than chance n brain concussion.

Jenny's counterattack crystallized as they turned into the farmyard. The hinged end of the gate and the angled mower blade presented provided the opportunity and a well calculated lunge to the right wedged the blade solidly between the gate and its anchor post.

She then dug in like a horse at a pulling contest, encouraged to utmost effort by the screening duet of parting hinges and a terrified Unle Charlie, swept off his seat by the splintered wreckage. With a thud, the mower blade dropped into operating position and Jenny proceeded to give the equipment a shakedown trial free of supervisory interference.

Application of full power created a tornado of grass and dirt, not to mention a forty foot row of blossoming potato plants. At regular intervals the cutting edges sharpened themselves on scattered stones in a shower of sparks. Just as the operation was proving profitable the mower arm was brutally amputated by a pine stump.

With the bouncing cripple in tow, Jenny headed for the spring behind the barn to slake her thirst. Enroute, the right wheel encountered a roll of rusty fence wire which wrapped itself around the machine till it resembled an oversize beetle in a metal cacoon.

With ears folded like muffs, Jenny was immune to Charlie's harrangue about stupid mules unable to grasp progress which makes the world a better place in which to live; for humans, that is! Standing in the shade Jenny, a firm believer in the competitive system, hid whatever chargin she may have felt as she watched Charlie cutting her coming winters sustinee with the help of his neighbors horse.

If it Fitz — Pass something to Mother

By JIM FITZGERALD

When you sit down to eat at our house, you get to chew on a lot more than food.

And this is a good thing, says Dr. Dena Cederquist who is a nutrition expert at Michigan State University. Of course, she's never eaten at our house. We never feed strangers at our house, unless they are cats.

Dr. Cederquist bemoans the loss of the family dinner-hour. Today, people eat on the run, she complains, and that's bad–not only for your digestion, but also for your mind, personality and character.

"The dinner table was a place where ideas were exchanged, questions debated and where children learned to be part of a group," Dr. Cederquist says.

It is a shame Dr. Cederquist is a woman. Otherwise, she might have married my wife and they certainly would have lived happily ever after. This would have left me a lonely bachelor, reading a newspaper as I ate my meals, with no kids fighting across the roast beef and no cats licking crumbs off my shoes. Under such miserable conditions I probably couldn't have survived more than 150 years before I died of a terrible ache in my side from laughing so much.

My wife likes to teach lessons in living at the dinner table. For instance, during a recent dinner I happened to catch sight of her through the flowers and candles in the middle of the table. She looked peaked and drawn. There was no food on her plate.

"Why aren't you eating?" I asked her.

"Because no one will pass me any food," she gasped, writhing in the last stages of malnutrition.

All of the food was on my side of the centerpiece where I could suck it up without even leaning forward. Attacking from the sides, both kids could also easily grab what they wanted. But my wife couldn't even see the food.

"Why don't you ask us to pass something?" I asked.

"I shouldn't have to ask," she answered.

It occurred to me that the food is always placed at my end of the table, every meal, every day.

"How long has it been since you've eaten?" I asked her.

"About a month," she said. "The last time was when the kids had guests and I got to sit at your end of the table."

"You set the table every meal. Why do you alwasys put the food at my end? Why don't you put some at your end?" asked her.

"I want to teach this family some manners," she said. "You shouldn't just sit down and gobble. You should always pass the food-plates around and you should never have to be asked to pass something."

"Not even the butter?" I asked.

"I might have asked for the butter but I never had anything to spread it on," she said as she slowly slumped to the floor.

"What's wrang with mother?" our daughter asked.

"She has passed out from not having anything passed," our son explained. "It's a good thing she didn't fall on my cat."

Onward and Upward.

Meet Charlevoix

Meet Judge Breighner

Charlevoix County's new Circuit Court Judge Martin Breighner was sworn in last week, succeeding the Honorable Edward H. Fenlon.

Judge Breighner has been practicing law in the Emmet-Charlevoix County area since 1958. He was born in Maryland, but grew up in Detroit and graduated from St. Gregory High School there, from the University of Michigan School of Business Administration in 1949, and the University of Michigan School of Law in 1952.

Following his graduation from law school, he was employed by a Detroit law firm for one year and then worked with Argus Cameras, Ann Arbor, for five years as house counsel and corporate secretary, after which time he came to Petoskey.

Judge Breighner and his wife, Nancy, have a son in college, Martin, a son in high school, Josephy, and a junior-high-school-aged daughter, Mary.

COURIER: Why were you interested in the circuit court position?

BREIGHNER: Well, Ken I was approached by a number of friends and by a number of members of the Bar, and I was asked by them to serve or make myself available to serve as Circuit Judge. Prior to those contacts, I had not given it consideration. I have been in practice here for 17 years, and I have established a successful and comfortable practice. Accordingly, it took a great deal of self-analysis and soul-searching on my part before I could make a decision as to whether or not I did wish to give up private practice which is required when one assumes the office of Circuit Judge. I made the decision to seek the office because of the confidence that had been expressed in me by these people; and also, because of the challenge of the responsibilities of the office of judge. A Circuit Judge has a great deal of power, and he has a great many responsibilities; and I think that one who serves in that office should be seasoned, should be mature, should be fair-minded and should recognize the awesome responsibility of the office. The compensations, I think, come from the satisfaction of doing a good job and from the challenge of dealing with many many different kinds of legal problems. Those would be my reasons for becoming interested in this office.

COURIER: What do you personally feel makes you qualified to hold such a position?

BREIGHNER: I graduated from the University of Michigan Law School in 1952, and I have been in continuous law practice since that time. That would encompass a period of approximately 23 years; and during those 23 years, I have been exposed to almost every area of the law that one who is engaged in general practice might meet. I have spent considerable time in the courts in trial work, and I have spent considerable time in the office and considerable time in other areas, administrative practice, business practice, and criminal practice, divorce practice, and the other areas of practice. I think that this broad exposure is perhaps the best preparation for one who has to functon as a trial judge in the court of general jurisdiction where each day a different kind of problem is presented. It seems to me there could be no better preparation for that kind of work, the kind of preparation that I have had.

COURIER: What do you hope to accomplish in your brief tenure?

BREIGHNER: Well, I would take the problems one at a time, Ken, and I would attempt to deal with each matter that was presented to me as a Circuit Judge as fairly and as expeditiously and courteously as I possibly could. I don't know how a judge could have any goal other than that.

COURIER: Presently, do you have any plans in making any general changes in court policy?

BREIGHNER: Well I feel that I am too much of a greenhorn, at this point, to say that I plan to do things differently than the way they are being done at the present time. I have to get my feet wet, and I would have to get in there and start functioning; and if I discover in the course of performing the duties that I can recommend some improvement, then I will do so. I have no designs at the moment because I haven't had the opportunity to serve before.

COURIER: What do you feel is the roll of the press in covering the courts, particularly locally here and in Charlevoix Counties?

BREIGHNER: Well judicial proceedings are public matters, and the press is entitled to report those public matters because they are of interest to people who read newspapers and listen to the radio; and I think the press has a responsibility to furnish the information to the people who read and listen to news media. I think the press also has a responsibility not to opinionate and not to editorialize but rather to simply report. It makes the job of judicial administration very difficult if the press is offering opinions and editorializing.

COURIER: Do you mean trial by the press?

BREIGHNER: Yes, there's been a lot written at all levels in our society about the respective roles of the courts and the press, and I think that each performs a very important function in our society. Generally speaking, where you have responsible people you get responsible results. If you have responsible reporters, you get responsible reporting. If you have responsible judges, you get responsible judicial results. But our system is keyed to the free interchange and the free flow of information, and I certainly subscribe to it.

COURIER: What are your future plans professionally after this short tenure is over with?

BREIGHNER: Well, as you perhaps realize, I have to run in the election this fall. First the primary in August, and then the general election, if I survive in the primary, in November. If those things work out and I am elected, I will then serve the remaining four years of Judge Fenlon's term; and I will serve those four years to the best of my ability. What will occur after that is difficult to forecast at this time. I don't know how anyone can determine what he is likely to do four years from now.

COURIER: Do you care to speculate on what type of decision the Supreme Court will be making in relation to the Nixon case?

BREIGHNER: Well I would say that I probably have no better information, and my opinion is no better than that of the average citizen. I know only what I read in the newspapers, and it seems to me from what I do read in the newspapers, that the Impeachment process seems to change from day to day. As I understand that the Congress through a committee is presently in making a determination as to whether the House should provide an inditement and that comes in the form of Article of Impeachment. So if the particular committee that has the responsibility reports to the house that is recommends the inditement, then the full house has to take a vote; and if the full house votes Articles of Impeachment, that is the equivalent of inditement. From that point then, the Senate becomes the trial and President Nixon would be entitled to a trial before the Senate and then would either be found guilty or convicted of the Article of Impeachment or the inditement or acquitted.

So that really when you talk about what's occurring, you have to think of it in terms of the stages, and I suppose the first stage is the one of what the committee is going to recommend. Now the press sems to indicate from everything that I can read, that the committee will probably recommend Articles of Impeachment to the House. I think I read just last night that the votes about two-thirds, one-third, or at least that's the speculation regarding the vote. So if that's correct information one might expect that there would be a recommendation of the full house that there be Articles of Impeachment, then the full house has to vote. Well it seems to me just as a private citizen, that if the committee recommends to the full house that they issue forth Articles of Impeachment, that the house almost has to do it; because if it doesn't, then it's not supporting its own committee but politics can produce strange results, and I don't suppose anyone really can say what the full house would do. But presumabley and logically, one might expect that the house would then indite President Nixon by reason of Article of Impeachment. The matter then is transferred from the House to the Senate and who knows what will happen in the Senate. President Nixon, if it got that far, could resign or he could decide to undergo a trial; and if he did, why you have a process which is somewhat judicial and somewhat politicl. I don't know that anybody could really forecast what is likely to happen in the Senate if the thing ever gets there.

Public Television Gains Momentum

If all goes as planned, Charlevoix residents will have commercial-free public broadcasting available to them within six months.

Some 15 residents met last week in Charlevoix to discuss campaign tactics for collecting some of the $190,000 still needed to get public broadcasting from Central Michigan University on the air.

Programming will include such offerings as "Sesame Street," and "Electric Company," for younger viewers.

Adults will have choices that include "Masterpiece Theatre," the Boston Pops Orchestra or "Book Beat."

With completion of a quarter-mile high tower in Montmorency County, public television transmitting is expected to begin no later than January 1, 1975.

Even old TV sets with "rabbit ears" will be able to pick up the broadcasts.

Construction on the tower is now under way.

It will be the tallest tower and the most powerful broadcasting station in Michigan

According to William Odykirk, of Central Michigan University, the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare, and the State of Michigan are cooperating to bring the facility to northern lower Michigan.

Completion of the program rests upon the ability of CMU to raise from private sources the $250,000 necessary to put WCML-TV (Channel 6 on the air.

A grant from HEW and additional support from the State of Michigan has already guaranteed more than $341,000.

Members of the Petoskey branch of the American Association of University Women will lead local fund efforts in a four-county area to raise $87,500 for construction of WCML-TV, Channel 6, Central Michigan University's new regional public television station.

The AAUW Petoskey branch role was announced today by William C. Odykirk, executive director of development at CMU.

"Not only has the branch consented to take a leadership role in raising funds for construction, it also has contributed $400--the first contribution--to serve as an example to other area clubs and organizations," Odykirk said.

"CMU is privileged to have AAUW's interest in the project and its enthusiastic support."

According to Odykirk, the Petoskey AAUW branch will direct fund-raising efforts in Emmet, Cheboygan, Charlevoix and Otsego counties.

A 20-member steering coordinator Mrs. Martha Drake of Petoskey, will plan special and general gift solicitations and public relations activities.

Steering committee members include Mrs. Nancy Hall, Mrs. Gail Weimer, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Pointner, Charlevoix; Forrest Evashevski, Thomas Turcott, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Keefe, Glen Casey, Mrs. Judy Rogers, Mim Geraghty, James Brush, Mrs. Sue Schauyb, William Ohle, Mrs. Walter O. Briggs III, and Mrs. Richard Kutcipal, Petoskey.

Also Mrs. Katharine Hafstod, Harbor Springs; Mrs. Janet Trowbridge, Gaylord; Mrs. Prentice Brown, Jr., St. Ignace; and Mrs. Chris Driscoll, Cheboygan.

Odykirk has also sought the cooperation and assistance of northern county officials in providing information on the fund raising projects now underway in their areas.

He said that Fred Bear, of Bear Archery, will be the honoarary chairman of fund-raising activities and "was working very hard on it because he feels it is badly needed."

Broadcasting will be done on a seven day a week schedule, beaming about 125 hours of program per week to a potential audience of some 300,000 persons.

Programming will include all public broadcasting service network offerings and CMU Mid-American sports coverage. Programs to five institutions of higher learning, as well as, CMU credit courses will be available.

Committees have been, or are being, established throughout the area.

BIG BROTHERS OF Charlevoix County are involved in many activities. Most recently some 40 Big and Little Brothers took a trip to Detroit to watch the Tigers Play.

Charlevoix Group Helps

Big Brothers -- Big Friendship

Hundreds of thousands of boys, aged eight through 17, are growing up in homes without the presence of a father.

In Charlevoix County alone, there are 196 boys without fathers. Now only 40 have Big Brothers.

These boys lack the friendship and guidance that can have a profound effect on their behavior.

Often this lack of companionship with a responsible, adult male can cause serious behavioral problems in a boy which he may express in unhappiness, maladjustment, difficulty with the law, and a lack of faith in people and the world he knows.

The purpose of Big Brothers is to offer these boys hope and opportunity for further growth and development through friendship with men on a one-boy to one-man basis.

Bill Miller, executive director for Charlevoix County's Big Brothers program, says they have a primary interest in providing guidance for a fatherless boy by matching him with an adult, preferably on a one-man to one-boy basis.

"In the past three years, we have matched 65 boys in the area and only two have had to be committed to institutions," he said.

"These two were already on probation and at 14 and 15 were perhaps beyond our capacity to help.

It costs from $8,000 to $11,000 to the state, county and city to have these boys incarcerated and housed along with providing clothing and education, he said.

"We are a definite asset to the community and are eliminating the added expense by helping these boys stay out of trouble," he continued.

Big Brothers of Charlevoix County plans a monthly event, in addition to the Big Brother seeing his boy weekly for such things as bowling meets, kite flying, booting and canoeing.

Recently the county organization took 40 Big and Little Brothers to Detroit for a Tiger game and had a float in the Boyne City and East Jordan Fourth of July parades.

Miller says the program has operated for the last three years on deficit financing and desperately need more support in finances and volunteers.

"Our main support is from the Community Chest and an occasional lift from an organization such as the Lions as we try to send at least 10 youngsters to Camp Daggett each year," he said.

Miller, who has been with the organization for four years, will resign August and will be replaced by Don Luedke.

Serving as president is Jim Bullard with Terry Boss as vice president.

An executive meeting will be held on July 18 at 8 p.m. in the County Building for election of new officers and directors.

Amendment to Sewage Rules and Rates established by Council Resolution dated September 1, 1973.

RESOLUTION

BE IT RESOLVED by the City of Charlevoix that in order to give equitable treatment to certain City of Charlevoix property owners, subject to special improvement assessment extension in connection with "May Street Sewer Extension Project", that the above referenced Sewage Rules and Rates be amended to exempt those properties, being served by said May Street Sewer Extension and subject to special assessment, from the payment of the $200 tap fee established in said Sewage Rules and Rates as effective September 1, 1973.

The foregoing Resolution was unanimously approved.

Council discussed extending sewers to Charlevoix Township on Mercer Blvd. to Waller Road and to Charlevoix Township line at M-66 on the South running along Stover Road and old M-66. Charlevoix Township agrees to donate the twelve inch mains on both projects.

Alderwoman Wallace reminded Council the City still hasn't performed the separation of storm and sanitary sewers as requested by the State. Several questions were asked and if it was referred to the Finance Committee for study.

Council discussed if bids should be gotten to repave Pine River Lane and West Dixon Avenue or if the areas should be repaired by patching only. It was decided that curbing should be replaced and the streets patched this year.

After a discussion as to May Street repair or paving, the engineer's recommendation to apply a base coat and let it settle for a year was accepted by Council. The Acting Administrator was instructed to have the street sprinkled daily to settle the dust until the base coat is completed.

Acting Administrator Wexstaff read the following bids for chain link fence:

Bidder: Bob's Fence Service; Baseball field; $275. / C. Ft. 5' fence, Water Pumping Station; $2400.

A representative from the Lions Club, sponsors of the Little League, was present to explain that the Lions Club in the future will try to have the game better supervised. He asked to have the City put up "no Parking" signs on the streets in the area. Council suggested that the area on McSauba Road be considered for use instead of the Westport Subdivision area, for games. Attorney Berlage advised the City to consider if the Recreational Director has a responsibility in this matter.

Alderman Plumm asked if any determination had been made regarding Leonard Dubey. Acting Administrator Wexstaff said he had suggested he go to the Waste Water Treatment Plant as recommended by the Utility Committee. Alderwoman Wallace asked to go on record that she disapproves the method used to settle this matter; since the Union Contract does spell out a grievance procedure which should have been followed.

Alderman Plumm asked what is being done regarding the bids for a new street sweeper. Mr. Wexstaff explained that he didn't feel that the men could be taken from their work to go to see the sweeper at work. He will discuss it with Brodin and Russell and know by the next meeting. Attorney Berlage advised that the Committee can decide, the order be placed and ratify the purchase at the next regular meeting.

Here's Some Answers About the Fair

It's Art Fair time again! And as people circle the date on their calendar around the second Saturday in August, numerous questions arise about the annual event.

Some of our regular readers may find it handy to clip the most frequently asked questions along with specific answers given by the Art Fair Committee and pass this information on for the benefit of newcomers.

Q. Who sponsors the Charlevoix Waterfront Fair?

A. The Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce. In the past, funds have gone directly to help support the Chamber, but recently a good part of the proceeds are allocated toward a scholarship for promising art students.

Q. What is the difference between the Charlevoix Waterfront Art Fair and the Hobby-craft Fair?

A. The Art Fair entries are limited to artists and artisans in the traditional categories of painting, ceramics, sculpture, weaving etc. while the Hobbycraft Fair is open to a much larger variety of handwork such as painted stones, greenware, decoupage, macrame etc. Both fairs serve a purpose, each in its own way.

Q. Why doesn't Charlevoix have a TWO day art fair?

A. Few people are aware that the committee is up and in the park from 6 A.M. until 9 P.M. checking weather, handing out I.D. badges, guiding exhibitors, guarding special exhibits, helping with a thousand other details that go into making this Art Fair such a success year after year. There isn't the volunteer manpower in a community this size nor does the committee have the physical stamina to last more than one day! Besides, many artists tell us that they like a one day fair.

Q. Why is the fair so crowded?

A. On the one hand, it's desirable to present a good balanced variety of exhibits. For instance this year in addition to paintings, ceramics, jewelry and weaving, there will be some batik, wood blocks, portraits, glass, etc. On the other hand, artists feel that in order to be seen and appreciated, enough space should be alloted to each person. In order to achieve both objectives and after much debate, the committee decided to limit the number of exhibits to less than 200.

Q. Why is it necessary to submit slides to a jury?

A. Because jurying makes for a better fair! For example, a good jury will prevent a fair from becoming top-heavy with too many ceramics and too few paintings, or too many landscapes and not enough contemporary art.

Q. Who makes up the jury?

A. Members of the jury vary from year to year. There are always several competent jurors, who by their education and training are qualified to make thoughtful and sometimes difficult decisions. It's interesting to note here, that there is usually unanimity of opinions and jurors lean over backwards to accept (not reject) the work of imaginative, talented amateur and professional artists.

Q. What is the difference between an amateur and a professional artist?

A. A professional artist is one who earns the major portion of his livelihood in the art field. Example, art teacher, commercial artist, fine artist or designer. Next is the amateur artist who often has had a good deal of art training and who's work sells well—yet he does not earn his living primarily in the art field. Then there is a third group—the talented student (and there's a fine line to be drawn here between the talented student and the skilled amateur) where the jury sometimes has the most difficulty in making decisions. Hopefully, if rejected, the talented student will continue studying and apply again next year.

Q. On what basis is some of the work rejected?

A. There are often several good reasons or a combination of reasons. 1) the quality of the slides submitted for jurying are poor. 2) the subject matter is unoriginal and / or not handled in a fresh or interesting way. 3) the subject matter may be a postcard or a work of art—an exercise—as opposed to an original composition. 4) the quality of the work may be marginal or on a good student level. Design, style, technique, original approach and composition are all taken into consideration when evaulatuing each entry.

Q. Why are photographs not accepted as an art form?

A. The committee has always felt that this media should be juried separately and that a photography show, possibly for the whole area, would be more satisfactory for both the artists and the public. Fortunately the need was met by the Crooked Tree Arts Council who is sponsoring the second annual photography show July 16 at the Emmet County Historical Museum at the Petoskey Waterfront.

Q. How many applications are received? How many accepted?

A. Somewhere between 500 and 600 applications are received every year. This year there will be about 150 exhibitors.

Q. Who actually benefits from the Charlevoix Waterfront Fair?

A. Many people! The artists enjoy the show and tell part of selling their work to the people who stroll through the park. Summer visitors have fun choosing sketch of the area for their cottage or taking home a memento of their vacation. Year 'round residents take pleasure in seeing new things being done in the field of arts and crafts. In addition to all this, the Fair has been instrumental in attracting several good commercial artists to open permanent studios here. It has indirectly led to the hiring of qualified art teachers in each of the three schools. In addition to benefitting the Chamber of Commerce and the Charlevoix merchants, the $10 entrance fee, helps talented youngsters persue careers in art through the scholarship fund.

Local Fair July 16

Women of the Congregational Church in Charlevoix worked busily all winter on items for the Country Fair at Calico Corner.

The yard of the church will be transformed into Calico Corner on Wednesday, July 24th. The Country Fair will open at 10 a.m. and close at 4 p.m.

The women held weekly all day workshops to work on their patchwork pillows, Christmas - tree ornaments, candlesticks, aprons and afghans.

Islandscapes

By

Susan Allen

ISLANDSCAPES is a new book of verse recently published by Susan Allen, who summers both here and on Mackinac Island. The book is available at the Park Place in Charlevoix.

Susan Allen

'I Still Believe in the Island'

It's legendary that anyone getting to know Mackinac Island leaves with a deep sense of loss and remembers with nostalgia.

One young woman who spent her summer growing up on the Island has produced a slim volume of poetry portraying its charisma.

Susan Allen's paperback, "Islandscapes" was published in May.

It is dedicated to her son, Glenn, and to the Island.

John Voelker, author of "Anatomy of a Murder" under the nom de plumé, Robert Travers, writes his reaction in the forword to "Islandscapes" - "The poems by Susan Allen reflect some of the ecstasy and awe that have moved people about the place ever since the first Indian beached the first canoe there."

Susan B. Anthony, niece of the famous sufragette, author of Ghost in My Life writes of the poetry: "The graciousness of Susan's upbringing shines through her words penned in delicacy."

On a recent visit to Michigan (Susan lives in Atlanta, Georgia) she autographed books in her hometown, Kalamazoo, where Gilmore's Department Store served luncheon to her University High School classmates.

She did several interviews in Lansing and was in Charlevoix where she gave some readings of her poetry at the Grey Gables. While here she wrote several poems on the hills of Charlevoix, which she may someday polish up for publication.

The young author is the daughter of Judge and Mrs. Glenn Allen, who own the little yellow schoolhouse on the Boyne City Road, and have many roots in Charlevoix, particularly at the Belvedere.

Susan's great aunt was Belvedere Allen, whence the resort received its place name.

During her high school years, Susan also summered at the Belvedere and participated in the Cabaret with friends, Becky Mckay, Chipper Ranson, Irene Leland, Betty Witherspoon, Kitty Shelton and her second cousins, Chris, Bill, and Marnie Payne. Many of these friends are now married, but return to Charlevoix in the summers.

Susan and her family were weaned away from the Belvedere, when her father became a member of Governor Romney's staff, where he was required to spend the summer months on the Island.

They found a charming Victorian Home on the East Bluff, which they call "La Chaumiere."

The cottage was redecorated by Susan and her mother and it is here that most of her poetry was born, including an account of Christmas spent on the Island.

In August she will return to the Island and continue to write, capturing its charm and many moods.

In new poems she reincarnates and orchestrates the spirit of Mackinac.

She hopes that some of the friends she enjoyed at Charlevoix will visit the Island, where she will autograph in the little Island library on Market Street.

Library notes

The Library has just received a copy of The Gulag Archipelago, the much-awaited, controversial and highly publicized new novel by Aleksandr Solzhenitsyn. It is doubtful if any work of literature in our era other than The Divine Comedy is commensurate with this profound classic in structure, scale, emotional range, and above all, in the staggering magnitude of its underlying concept.

Written in a tone that combines wrath, bitter calm, savage irony and sheer comedy, it encompasses history, autobiography, documentary, and political analysis as it examines the Soviet apparatus of repression from its inception following the Revolution of 1917.

The "Archipelago" of the author's work is the network of secret police installations, camps, prisons, transit centers, transportation systems and espionage organizations which, in his view, honeycombs the length and breadth of the Soviet Union.

The Fan Club is the title of the new novel by Irving Wallace. We have nothing good to say about it, and neither does the New York Times Book Review which calls it junk literature. It is a sick, savage, a sordid book--a far cry from entertainment. One wonders how such a distinguished author could dream up such a plot, how he could possibly write the book or find a publisher to publish it. It is, of course, on the best seller lists which should tell us something about best sellers. Discriminating readers will pass this one up.

On a happier note, we recommend with much satisfaction, The Chateau by Stephen Coulter. This is a delightful, readable novel which tells of what happens when Francis Gautier brings his young American bride Susannah to the Chateau La Guiche heart of the Bordeaux vineyards. Charming, beautiful and impetuous Susannah sets out to make La Guiche a great and noble vineyard and to found on its lands a new dynasty of Gautiers.

The book is full of the detail and excitement of a little-known but fascinating business and craft, rich in history and fact, moving with the speed and tension of fiction on the grand scale.

Dorothy Eden has given us a splendid new novel, and we guarantee that The Millionaire's Daughter won't stay on the shelves very long.

From the time this 19-year-old beauty captivates New York, until the very last page, this is a deeply-moving and dramatic novel, which is what we have come to expect from this delightful author.

Tennis Talk

By CHUCK WRIGHT

Learning to hit your shots (forehand, backhand, and serve) is one important aspect of tennis, but actually learning what to do during a game of tennis is equally important.

There is a general strategy for singles that all players should be aware of. Depending on your opponent's weaknesses and strengths, some strategies become more effective than others. You should always be aware of general tennis strategy when you are playing a game of singles.

Do not get caught in the midde of the court. So many beginning players get caught three or four steps inside the baseline when they play singles. You should always be all the way up to the net or all the way back in the court.

If you are in the middle of the court when the ball comes, you will be badly out of position. Usually the ball will land right at your feet which makes an effective return virtually impossible.

Further, you are unable to tell if a ball is going out or not if you stand in front of the baseline. Subsequently, you will lose points you should have won.

Try to keep the ball deep even if it means sacrificing some power. A deep shot keeps your opponent off balance and it also prevents him from coming to the net. A short shot lets your opponent be the aggressor. Therefore, try to hit deep shots; a soft deep shot is more effective than a short hard one.

Always move your opponent around. This again keeps him off balance and allows you to control the points. If he has a weak backhand, take advantage of this weakness by moving him over to the forehand side and then making him run for a backhand. If you simply hit to his backhand all the time, he will get used to it and become steadier. Make your opponent move.

Mixing up the speeds of your shots prevents your opponent from getting his rhythm. A chop here, an overspin there, and a power drive thrown in - this is the way to throw your opponent off.

Playing the net is very difficult for some people but it is the best offensive strategy in tennis. From the net, you can punch the ball wherever you want it. You are the aggressor at net. Come to the net when you hit a difficult shot to return. Otherwise your opponent will have an easy passing shot or lob.

Get your first serve in even if it is not at its hardest. The serve is an offensive weapon and you gain a great psychological advantage if you get your first serve in play. How often I see a player blast his first serve, usually in the net, and then dink his second serve. His opponent then has the advantage.

The service return is extremely difficult. You should concentrate on taking a short stroke and making good contact with the ball. Do not overswing on the service return; you do not have the time.

Above all, be consistent. Remember, 75 percent of all tennis points are ended by mistakes. Eliminate mistakes as much as possible and you will be a winner. Hitting deep, playing net, and mixing the speeds of the ball are all secondary to simply keeping the ball in play.

Strategy is important in tennis. A knowledge of how the game should be played is essential to winning tennis.

Kentucky Fried Wins

Kentucky Fried Chicken broke open a 3-3 ballgame with four runs in the third and went on to defeat A&W 9-5 in the first round play-off game. Both teams were undefeated going into the contest.

Lee Ann Steelman's three-run home run was the big blow during Kentucky Fried Chicken's third inning rally.

The rally started with two outs and A&W helped it along with two errors during the inning. Cheryl Pence started it all by reaching first on an error. Winning pitcher Jodi Alger followed with a sharp single.

Terri Morris then hit a fly ball which should have ended the inning. The ball was dropped, however, allowing Pence to score. Steelman took further advantage of the errors by clearing the bases with her long three-run blast.

That made the score 7-3 at the end of three and A&W never seriously threatened after that although they did manage to get single runs in the sixth and seventh. A&W began the scoring with two in the second. Connie Crain walked, and three straight singles by Holly Garten, Susie Boss, and Candy Olson put the two runs across.

Kentucky Fried Chicken countered with three runs in their half of the second. Pence led off with a home run. Morris und Steelman followed with singles and with two out Toni Felter singled them home.

A&W tied the game in the third when Kathy Sindek singled, went to second on an error and scored on Garten's single.

A double play stopped Kentucky Fried Chicken from scoring in the first. With Tori Alger on first, Connie Crain made a nice grab of a line shot and doubled up Alger at first.

Terri Morris capped the scoring for Kentucky Fried Chicken with a two-run home run in the fifth. It was the team's third home run of the game.

Kentucky Fried Chicken's first round championship guarantees the team a spot in the play-offs at the end of the summer. It now becomes the team to beat in women's slo-pitch.

Physicals Needed To Play Sports

Charlevoix boys and girls, grades 7 through 12, who plan on participating in competitive sports must take a physical examination on Tuesday, July 30.

Examinations will be held in the Charlevoix High School, Building B.

Boys exams will begin at 7 p.m., while girls examinations will be at 8 p.m.

Area doctors will conduct the examinations under the direction of Dr. David Roebuck of the Charlevoix Area Hospital.

High School Principal Vane Smith said students are encouraged to attend this physical examination clinic if they plan to participate in any part of the school system's athletic program.

Students are asked to bring a urine specimen with them when they arrive for examination.

The coaching staff will be on hand to assist students in registration.

Students who do not receive physicals at this time must make their own arrangements as physical examinations are necessary for participation in any or all sports, Smith said.

Little League This Friday

East Jordan and North Emmet will clash in the opening game of Charlevoix's first Little League baseball tournament to be played at 6 p.m. Friday.

The three-day tournament will be played at the Little League park south of Carpenter ave. on the city's southwest side.

Charlevoix, the host team, and Petoskey will meet in the first game at 1 p.m. Saturday afternoon with the winner of the East Jordan-North Emmet game taking at Boyne City at 3 p.m. Saturday. The Boyne City nine drew a first round bye.

The finals are scheduled for 2 p.m. Sunday.

Charlevoix will be represented in the area tournament by an all-tournament team selected from the four local Little League teams, Round Lake Lodge, Smith's Little Roofers, Parsel Olds and Pearl Construction.

When the team appears in the tournament, all players will be wearing special tournament uniforms purchased for this purpose with monies in the Bruce Morgan Memorial Fund.

Morgan had been a team manager in the Little League for two years prior to his untimely death on Feb. 14.

Saturday Wedding

Beth Bergmann Marries Anthony Sommerfield

Arrangements of white mums and daisies graced the altar of Bethany Lutheran Church Saturday evening for the wedding of Beth Marie Bergmann and Frederick Anthony Sommerfeld, U.S. Air Force.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Bergmann of Charlevoix and Mrs. Bernard E. Talmage of Virginia Beach, Va., and Frederick D. Sommerfeld of Anchorage, Alaska.

The Rev. E. Priess of Boyne City officiated at the double ring service in the presence of 75 guests. Mrs. Richard Elzinga, at the organ played a program of traditional music and the wedding marches.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose a full length gown of white voile over taffeta for her wedding. Fashioned with a bodice of cluny lace, the gown featured a high neckline, long sleeves and an A-line skirt that terminated in a chapel length train. A Juliet cap held her elbow length veil that was edged in the same lace. She carried a bouquet of yellow rosebuds, daisies and baby's breath.

Robert Lucas of Petoskey assisted the bridegroom as best man. Allen Bergmann of Charlevoix and William Bergmann of Long Beach, Calif., brothers of the bride, seated the guests.

Mrs. Bergmann chose a light blue floor length crepe gown and matching lace jacket for her daughter's wedding. Mrs. Talmage, mother of the bridegroom, wore a light green crepe gown with long chiffon sleeves.

A reception, hosted by the bride's parents, followed at the American Legion post home. Assisting were Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Henley, Mr. and Mrs. Al Fraser, Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Carter, Charles Bergmann, Mrs. John Curtis, Mrs. Harley Warner, JoAnne Green and Linda Krueger.

Wedding guests were present from Wisconsin and Virginia and several Michigan cities.

On Friday evening, Mr. and Mrs. Talmage hosted a rehearsal dinner at the Shed.

Mary C. Feindt, retiring president of the Michigan Land Title Association after serving two years, was presented with a special plaque, a map of Michigan bearing the organization's seal, at the group's recent convention.

The presentation was made by Mrs. Feindt's successor, William M. Quinn of Lansing.

Mrs. Feindt, who owns the Charlevoix Abstract & Engineering Co., is the first woman to head the Michigan Land Title Association in its 73 year history. She also is a member of the Board of Governors of the American Land Title Association.

Special Tennis Showing

Keeping up with the latest in Tennis fashions isn't difficult if you happen to know summer resident Beth Johnson of St. Louis, Missouri.

Proprietor of one of the nation's most exclusive women's tennis dress shops, Mrs. Johnson will bring her store's entire collection to the Harbor Springs Colonial Inn on July 30 and 31, and August 1 and 2.

Their motto is "We dress the ladies for the court," and to acomplish this they search from California to Florida for the best in tennis attire.

"Tennis has been a major sport here long before the craze took the country," Mrs. Johnson said.

"I think everyone will be very excited about our extensive collection."

The collection includes everything from cotton to knits, the classic look to the exciting new things Chrissie Evert and Margaret Court are doing and many especially priced clothes for teenagers.

The unusual Christmas gift items range from wrap-around skirts that reverse to red-checked gingham to wrist bands and hats with clever trim designed exclusively for The Tennis Court.

Included will be the great European tennis shoes, Tretoen and Addidas.

When asked why she had decided to open a tennis boutique, Mrs. Johnson said she had been through the throes of trying to dress her two teenage daughters and herself practically and attractively for the court and finally decided to open a shop that would be fun and solve the problem for everyone.

WVOY

Lake radio station before going on to Central Michigan University (CMU) for a degree in radio.

While at CMU, he worked with both public broadcasting television, as well as being program director for the college FM station and working for a local commercial station.

Robert White, WVOY news director, gained most of his experience while in the Army and working for WHAS in Kentucky and one of the nation's largest statons.

He also worked at CMU when going to school and has worked for stations in Clarksville, Tenn. and Midland.

White received recognition last year for having the best radio documentary in Michigan by The Associated Press.

WVOY will be carrying AP wire service news.

With studios located on Bridge Street, it will be transmitting its signal from a tower on Loeb School Road, two miles south of Charlevoix.

CHARLEVOIX COUNTY State Bank will be trying to eliminate some of the city's parking problems by leasing the Erber Auto parking lot for 24 of its employees who drive to work. Bank President E.D. Hawley (right) and Vice President Gordon Wellman present Tom Erber with a check to cover the lease.

Islanders

The island population is changing and people who have never lived on an island are moving here.

These people feel the need of the security the plane offers. If there wasn't a special need for it, the board never would have approved the idea."

The plane is operated under the jurisdiction of the Charlevoix county Sheriff's Department.

However, not all island residents are as 'high' on the idea. Jewell Gillispie, manager of the island's electrical facility for the REA, feels the unit is impractical in view of the island's many other needs.

It will necessitate building a hangar at the township airport, paying maintenance coasts and other expenses involved which are expected to be comparatively minor.

Gillispie went on to say "It's a dream as far as I'm concerned. I forsee that it will end up in a wrangle with lots of problems."

He also feels that Welke's airport will jeopardize the island's own airport. Earlier this year $110,000 in a state grant was earmarked for the island airport.

It is expected that this money plus allocations made by the board of commissioners to county airports will be matched by the townships in improving the island airport.

Edward Wojan, a recent winner in the Michigan lottery, has shown his faith in the project by offering a part of his winnings as a start toward contructing a hangar at the township airport for the plane.

Don Cole, who is employed by the Charlevoix county road commission on the island, is another resident who does not favor the project. He said in the beginning he was in favor of it.

This has changed, however, for now he feels that this is the first move toward "pushing". the doctor off the island and closing the Medical Center for which everyone has worked so hard.

He also feels that it's an unnecessary expense, and that the newcomers on the island are beginning to control it, a thought shared by Gillispie.

Bud McDonough, an island businessman, has other thoughts and voiced them by saying that probably 90 or 95 percent of the people think it's great. Much the same thoughts were voiced by Mrs. Bert McDonough and Mrs. Frank Nackerman.

State Says County Jail Lacks Women

The State Jail Inspector has advised the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners that there is a shortage of female employees at the county jail but Sheriff Philo Sumner says that the two women now employed there can handle the work.

Mrs. Sumner, who is employed as a full-time matron, lives on the premises and another woman works as a dispatcher-matron on the daytime shift.

State law requires that a matron or assistant matron care for prisoners lodged in the female section of the jail and accompany a female prisoner to court.

Sumner points out that last year there were only 55 days of female occupancy in the jail.

For Emergency Use

Islanders Take A Look At New Airplane

By FRAN MARTIN

Beaver Island located 22 miles off the mainland from the pierheads at Charlevoix and from Cross Village to the east has become the home of the first emergency evacuation plane to be located on a Michigan island.

The plane, a six-passenger DeHaviland Beaver U-6A, was acquired earlier this year through the efforts of Civil Defense in cooperation with the Charlevoix County board of commissioners which appropriated $4,000 to underwrite the cost of having the plane taken from mothballs at Davis-Monthan Air Force Base, Ariz., and readied for the flight to Michigan where it was converted to civilian use.

It was then taken to the island where it is hangared at Welke's airport maintained by St. James and Peaine townships, the two units that comprise the island.

The acquisition of the plane was made possible because the 17-mile long island boasts three qualified pilots, William Welke, a sheriff's deputy on the island, his son, Paul, and James Janda, a retired police officer and former pilot with the Chicago police department, who have volunteered to man the emergency unit.

In addition, another Welke son is a mechanic and will keep it in flying condition.

In the past, the residents of the island, approximately 200 during the winter and several hundred more during the summer months, have had to depend on the U.S. Coast Guard Air Station at Traverse City which always meant a delay while the evacuation was cleared with the Ninth District office in Cleveland or the McPhillips Flying Service out of Charlevoix or a similar service at Harbor Springs.

These, according to island residents, often necessitated long waits, or, in some instances when the weather was bad on the mainland, the inability of the pilots to get to the island. It has been the contention of island residents that it is often possible to fly from the island when weather would not permit planes to leave mainland airports for the island.

With a 500 mile radius to reach an airport that is open, the emergency evacuation plane will be able to reach a mainland airport that is open.

What do island residents think of the emergency evacuation unit converted to carry three stretchers?

The Charlevoix Courier has made a survery among island residents, most of them either natives of the island or people who have lived there for some time.

Their answers were almost as varied as their personalities but the majority add up to an answer given by several of this interviewed..."If it saves one life, it's worth it".

Archie LaFreniere, a native son, former U.S. Coastguardsman and businessman who worked hard to keep the Coast Guard station there open, said "Now that we have no more Coast Guard protection as far as the boats are concerned, I think this is a good sound program. I think we should give it an honest try and, if it saves one life, it will be worthwhile".

LaFreniere said that when the Coast Guard was there, the island people always felt some sense of security but now that the station is closed, that security has been lost.

Mrs. Bernard Wagner, whose husband is fire officer with the DNR, came to the island 10 years ago from Lake City. As she said "It's a different kind of life here.

I guess when you are born on an island you don't have the fears that those of us who move to one experience. This is a remote place and at times it's hard to get on or off the island. We love it here.

We want to retire here. This plane has given us a feeling of security that we haven't known." She went on to say that "we're lucky to have the people we have here...Dr. (Joseph) Christie, five registered nurses, a license practical nurse and now the pilots who will fly the plane."

This makes everyone feel better," she added.

One of the professional people she mentioned is Mrs. Russell Green, the former Joy McDonough, a native of the island and a registered nurse. Her comments were "I think it's great and I'm all for it. It will certainly make the situation easier".

She went on to say that the island has its Medical Center, a hospital in miniature, where certain emergencies and other cases can be cared for. There is always someone on call to assist the doctor.

However, there are times when more is needed..

"I remember one case last summer when we had a real emergency. We had to wait and wait to get the patient to a mainland hospital. It was most frustrating when you realized how critical the situation was.

Now we can take care of that ourselves by getting the patient off in a hurry and do away with the waiting. If it's used only once, it's worthwhile as far as I'm concerned."

Dr. Christie, who moved his practice to the island six years ago from Harbor Springs and who says he has no regrets, said "Getting the emergency evacuation plane was the greatest favor anybody ever did Joe Christie."

He went on to say that he and the other professional people do the best they can with the facilities they have.

"However," he added, "there are times when these things aren't enough and this evacuation plane is going to make things a lot easier for all of us."

Kenneth A. Staley, chairman of the Public Safety committee of the Board of Commissioners, is equally enthusiastic about the unit. "This is what government is all about...to provide services for people who can't afford them for themselves.

We're fortunate we have people like Welke and the others who will volunteer their services to make this possible.

New Sanitary Code For County Use

The Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners voted 11 to 4 last week to adopt the new District 3 Health Department Code, but the four negative votes indicated objection to further Health Department control.

The section on wells in the new code brings the Health Department into an area of permits and regulations not before covered.

It makes it mandatory for anyone installing a water well to secure a permit which will be granted only after certain specifications are met.

Commissioner Delbert Ingalls voted against adoption of the code and indicated his opposition to the section on wells.

Ingalls feels that the Health Department, with its septic tank controls, now has enough jurisdiction over the "few farmers who are left" without their paying a $10.00 fee and submitting specifications to drill a well.

He also points out that water supplies on dairy farms are already inspected by the State, and that the Health Department inspection would be "just another overlapping regulation".

State Commission Approves Loans

Attorney General Frank J. Kelley, Chairman of the Municipal Finance Commission, announced today that the Commission approved $325,000.00 of Tax Anticipation Notes for the Charlevoix Public Schools, Counties of Charlevoix and Antrim.

Attorney General Kelley said, "The proceeds will be used to operate the school district until the collection of current taxes.

These notes are dated August 9, 1974, to be due March 1, 1975, and will carry a maximum interest rate of 6 percent per annum."

Who Will Judges Select As '74 Venetian Queen?

By FRAN MARTIN

Who will reign as Queen of the 1974 Venetian Festival?

That question will be answered Friday when eight candidates vie for the crown during the Venetian Queen Pageant to be held Friday in the Charlevoix High School gymnasium at 8 p.m.

Seeking the title will be Tori Alger, Janet Begrow, Gwyn Durr, Trish Durr, Mary Kayner, Faith Malpeli, Sylva Ruble and Shelly Warner, most of whom decided to enter the Venetian Queen contest when it was threatened for lack of local interest.

Who will succeed the current raven-haired royalty, Carole Pence, who will be present to crown the 1974 Venetian Queen at the climax of the Pageant?

That will be a choice made by judges, as yet unnamed, this Thursday when they interview each of the eight in private before seeing them in action during the Pageant Friday evening.

During the pageant each will model a costume from a local shop, present her choice of talent and be escorted in formal attire.

Lisa Wasoski, 1972 Venetian Queen and a member of the Queen's Committee will serve as master of ceremonies at the Pageant. Music for the event will be by the Charlevoix Jazz Band under the baton of Gary Stutzman.

The second appearance of the reigning royalty and her court will be during the program in East Park Saturday evening when they are introduced to the crowd in East Park before boarding a boat to watch the Venetian Boat Parade and fireworks on Round Lake as darkness falls.

To acquaint the Charlevoix Courier readers with the candidates, a brief resume of each follows:

Tori Alger, 18, a 1974 graduate of the Charlevoix High School and the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Alger, plans to enter Central Michigan University this fall to major in math and Physical Education. She is interested in all types of sports, was a member of the girls track team, plays softball and likes all spectator sports. An avid reader, she was valedictorian of her graduating class. She is blonde, has blue eyes and is 5'3".

Janet Begrow, 17, has blue eyes, brown hair and is 5'2". She is a June graduate of the Charlevoix High School, attended classes at North Central Michigan College while in high school and plans to continue there until January when she hopes to transfer to the University of Colorado. Her goal is a degree in Business Administration. Her interests are sailing, skiing, art, organizing activities, meeting people and sports. She is the daughter of Mrs. Patricia Begrow and Harold Jack Begrow.

Gwyn Durr, 19, is a graduate of Marvin Pittman High School in Statesboro, Ga., and has received an Associate Degree from North Central Michigan College. She plans to attend Central Michigan University to become an elementary teacher. She is interested in arts and crafts and outdoor sports and is excited about learning to play golf this summer. She is the daughter of Lt. Col. and Mrs. William R. Durr, Jr. She has brown eyes, blonde hair and is 5'3".

When her sister, Trish Durr, 21, decided to enter the Venetian Queen's contest, it marked the first time two sisters had vied for the crown. A recent graduate of Michigan Tech with a major in Business Administration, she plans to return to the university this fall to do graduate work. Her main interest is Computer Science. She enjoys swimming and softball. She is a graduate of Marvin Pittman High School in Statesboro, Ga. She has hazel eyes, auburn hair and is 5'3". She, too, is the daughter of Lt. Col. and Mrs. Durr.

Unhappy with Work

County Republicans Oust Chairman Over Policies

The Republican Party of Charlevoix County ousted its chairman, Robert L. Wise, Jr., at a special meeting last Friday night.

Wise opened the meeting and was presiding when he asked party member Grover Geneit to explain why he had called the meeting.

"This is nothing personal," Geneit said, "but many people have been complaining about the bad job Bob Wise is doing."

"There have been no financial reports, no follow-ups on memberships, no executive committee audits, no petitions for candidates being circulated. And Charlevoix County lost the Circuit Judgeship because no one was on the ball.

"The last straw," Geneit added, "Was the article in the Northland Press in which both Representative (Ralph) Ostling and State Senator (Robert) Davis were presented in a bad light."

Geneit then asked for an explanation of the newspaper article, answers to the other charges and Wise's resignation.

Wise answered that the finance committee did not respond to his requests for action, that he didn't know he was supposed to prod to get petitions, and that the newspaper article partially misquoted him.

The newspaper article had to do with a suggested debate between Richard Friske and Ostling, both Republican candidates for State Representative. Friske had suggested the debate and Wise thought it was a good idea.

In the article Wise quoted Ostling, in language that the White House might have deleted, as refusing to enter into such a debate. Ostling has denied such a statement.

"What I was trying to say to the Northland Press, Wise continued, "was because of Watergate. I wanted to say 'Hey, voters of Charlevoix County, you have two candidates who will stand up and talk so you can make your own minds about their points of view."

Geneit then pointed out that at the last party meeting Wise had said that the party chairman should not get mixed up with candidates before primaries.

"Then you turned around and introduced Friske at a fund-raising dinner," Geneit added.

Wise said he didn't associate himself with Friske as a candidate, he just introduced him.

Geneit countered, "the fact that you were there automatically associated you with him."

Wise said that he still thought a debate between Ostling and Friske was in order.

Geneit said there was no reason for a debate. "Friske and some other candidates are running on the Republican ticket who are not Republicans."

Endorsing that point of view, Robert Bergmann read a statement.

"Friske was elected as a Republican by the Republicans in the 103rd District to the state legislature. During his term in office he publicly left the Republican Party and advocated the program of the John Birch Society," he said.

"The Republican County Committee publicly opposed his re-election for this reason. Friske is not a Republican and should not be promoted or supported by the Republican Party," he added.

Mrs. Oscar Stroud wanted to know what would happen if Friske wins the primary. "Who is the Republican Party going to vote for," she asked.

Wise volunteered, "As far as I'm concerned, if Friske is the Republican candidate I'll vote for him."

Charlevoix Mayor Edward P. Hansen then took the floor. "Bob Wise, you violated a private telephone conversation with our elected representative in Lansing," he said. "As far as I'm concerned, whether you meant it or not, you have done everything possible to split the Republican Party in Charlevoix County.

"Is this party going to be split or are we going to get another party chairman? That is the question before the meeting," Hansen added.

Wise inquired what the procedure was for removing the chairman. "To resign would be to admit failure and I have no such intention," he said. "I am not a member of the John Birch Society and do not intend to be."

At this point Wise read the minutes of a meeting of the

New PUD Ordinance

Charlevoix Twps. Paves Way For New Shopping Complex

CHARLEVOIX--The Charlevoix Township Zoning Board voted unanimously to accept the proposed amendment adding a Planned Unit Development Zone (PUD) to the township zoning ordinance at Monday's public hearing to clear the way for a new shopping center.

A PUD zone is an area set aside by the township where multiple zoning is allowed on a single piece of property. This would permit a developer to build commercial and residential buildings on the same site.

This amendment, the first of its kind in the county, was prompted by a request from Dr. Walter F. Hoffmann of Charlevoix to permit him to construct a shopping center and residential buildings on a 52 acre parcel of land he owns near the junction of Boyne City-rd. and US-31.

Monday's public hearing was called to accumulate public input on the matter and to make final additions to the amendment before it is recommended to the township board for approval.

A dozen township residents attended the meeting and no objections were raised against the planned development. The audience asked the zoning board several questions concerning buffer strips and what business usage was allowed in the PUD zone and seemed satisfied with the amendment.

The amendment will now go to the County Planning Commission for review and then to the township board for its acceptance or rejection.

The zoning board also accepted Dr. Hoffmann's request for an interim PUD zoning from agricultural for the area pending approval of the zoning ordinance by the township board and providing he meets the stipulations in the amendment.

Dr. Hoffmann's development will include a shopping center with a department store, furniture store, branch bank, auto dealership, motel and restaurant.

Open September 4

The Charlevoix Public Schools will open Wednesday, Sept. 4, for the 1974-75 school year it was decided by the Charlevoix School Board Monday night.

Action taken by the board included a recommendation to invite the Citizen's Study Committee steering committee to participate in discussion and the dissemination of the school bond issue and appointment of several committees.

In an effort to promote the proposed new high school, the board voted to invite the steering to help bring information to the public.

A Case of Judicial Ethics

Judge Reibel Ending Off-Bench Activities

By TOM DAMMANN

"The effects of Watergate have trickled down to the lowest levels," Nineteenth District Court Judge Arthur Reibel said Monday, revealing that he is divesting himself of all his properties including the tugboat, the Northshore and an oil tank barge, as well as Castle Farms.

Judge Reibel said he is acting in accordance with the new proposed rules for judicial conduct which directs" all judges in the state to divest themselves of properties which might become the subject of conflict of interest charges."

He said that he had received a copy of the proposals from the State Supreme Court administrator and that though they are not yet in effect he is assured they will be soon.

"Since Castle Farms and Beaver Transit, Inc. are both commercial properties, the Supreme Court Administrator infers that I should get rid of them," Judge Reibel said. He added that he is presently negotiating with possible purchasers of both ventures.

He made his statement during a discussion of most recent legal problems involving the two vessels arising from foreclosure proceedings instituted last week in Federal District Court in Grand Rapids.

According to Grand Rapids Attorney Thomas Mulder, a specialist in admirality law, "warrants for the arrest of the two vessels," in admirality law terms, have been issued by the federal court but not yet served.

The action was taken in behalf of the National Bank and Trust Company of Traverse City which holds a "preferred marine mortgage" on the boats in the amount of about $35,000, now in default.

Such proceedings come under the exclusive jurisdiction of the federal courts, Mulder explained in a telephone interview.

Under normal procedure the ships will be seized by the U.S. Marshal who will post the guards on each ship for 24 hour protection.

They must be held by the marshal as security until the ships are sold and their sale must be approved by the bank, Mulder explains.

Judge Reibel said he is certain the bank will not press the procedure because he has informed it of his efforts to negotiate a sale.

Mulder said, "I know nothing about that," when he was informed of the judge's remarks.

Earlier this year Charlevoix County Sheriff Philo Sumner padlocked the two vessels, valued by Judge Reibel at $80,000, and held them as collatorial in a $24,000 judgement against Reibel, won by former owner of Castle Farms, in a suit rising from the sale.

The ship's were freed when Reibel posted a bond pending the settlement of his appeal of the case by the state Court of Appeals.

On July 1, Reibel announced his intentions of selling the tugboat and barge and withdrew from a "naval battle" with the Beaver Island Boat Company, his competitor in the Beaver Island trade, with which he had been contending before the Charlevoix City Council over rights lease space at the city's commercial docks.

Property on which his Beaver Island dock rested was foreclosed and repurchased, subject to Reibel's recommendation, within six months by Karl Keubler, for what was owed him in defaulted payments.

Meanwhile, at its monthly meeting July 10, the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners ordered Judge Reibel to remove two telephones listed under Castle Farms, Inc. and the Beaver Island Transit, Inc., which were in his judicial offices in the county building and answered by office personnel.

Forewarned, Judge Reibel removed the phone the day before.

When he first announced he was selling the boats Judge Reibel stated he would concentrate on district court business.

For starters, despite the fact that it is against the law to harbor wild animals without the permission of the DNR, Judge Reibel last week ordered the return of two baby raccoons to two East Jordan families.

The animals had been "confiscated" by DNR officers and the families of James Ulvund and Vernon Stark were charged with illegal possession.

Both families plead ignorance of the law and were innocent because the babies had come to them and were in need of care.

Judge Reibel agreed, charged them no fine and let them take the animals home providing they set them free once they are old enough to fend for themselves.

Burns Clinic Acredited Officially By American Medical Clinic Association

PETOSKEY–Burns Clinic Medical Center, P.C., has been accredited officially by the American Association of Medical Clinics (AAMC), Alexandria, Va., making it the third clinic in the stote to receive such approval, Dr. Peter J. Connaughton, Chairman of the Clinic's Board of Directors announces.

The other two clinics are the Chelsea Clinic, in Chelsea, and the Clinic of the Henry Ford Hospital of Detroit, according to Richard Kowalski, Burns Clinic Administrator.

Burns Clinic, one of 14 clinics thusfar accredited in 1974, will be recognized at a special reception to be held at the AAMC's 25th Anniversary meeting, September 3-6 in Washington, D.C.

A voluntary procedure, AAMC Accreditation requires that the clinic satisfy a professional survey team, which includes at least two experienced group practice physicians. It must qualify under a wide range of demanding criteria designed to assure the highest possible quality of patient care and diagnostic scope, medical educational activities, staff research and technological activities in support of the medical practice.

The quality of the staff and specialty distribution are considered, as well as organization, management, ethical factors, cost effectiveness and the adequacy and quality of the group's facilities.

Accreditation results from collective assessment of these factors by a survey team, the AAMC Accreditation Commission and its Board of Trustees.

"Among other things, for example, they might check the records of some 50 patients from the beginning of medical care to the conclusion," Kowalski explains.

"The emphasis is on the quality of patient care," he says.

The accreditation evaluotion program began in 1968, some 125 clinics are now accredited across the nation.

AAMC, the national organization representing all forms of medical group practices, sponsors a wide variety of services and activities to encourage the maintenance and improvement of high quality health care delivery at a reasonable cost to patients.

The AAMC's accreditation program is a primary means of pursuing this objective. All medical and dental group practices, members and nonmembers, may voluntarily request accreditation.

In a letter advising Dr. Connaughton of the accreditation, Dr. Henry Hood, Chairman of the Accreditation Commission expressed the hope that in addition to the recognition the certification brings, the Burns Clinic will also benefit from "having carefully reviewed your own operation."

Burns Clinic was founded in 1931 by Dr. Dean C. Burns, who is a member emeritus. Its staff now numbers 50 physicians trained in general medicine and the major specialties.

A quiet blending of peaceful surroundings, quality maintenance free living and a dramatic view of Lake Michigan and Fisherman's Island enhance the many desirable features offered within this spacious home.

Natural cedar interior, 4 bedrooms, 2 baths, 2 fireplaces, modern kitchen, dining room, living room, and more. Custom designed and equipped with every modern convenience to make living easy. 145 feet of lake frontage add the final touch of perfection to this exceptional property.

Some Costs May Be Down

It Looks Like A Good Season For Growers

By FRAN MARTIN

"Ops," the Roman goddess of the harvest, has smiled on the fruit growers in the area this year, loading their trees with an abundance of beautiful cherries and apple and in lesser numbers, peaches pears, plums and apricots.

This week the Charlevoix Courier has contacted the larger, more versatile fruit growers regarding the outlook for the 1974 season and found, Ops has, indeed produced a good crop of fruit.

While the season is not at its peak, it averages approximately 75 percent of what it could be and is some 20 percent over last year when there was a shortage of both cherries and apples as the result of late frosts.

Fruit Stand Purchases

The majority of people purchase the ripe fruit at a stand, the orchard where it is raised or at a local market and give little thought to what has gone into the product before it reaches the buying public.

However, before you taste a black sweet cherry, bite into a juicy apple or eat any of the other fruits raised in the area, the ground has been tilled and fertilized with a commercial product that has more than double in priced over the past year and which is now in short supply. The trees hove also been sprayed for leaf spot, a fungus, and other things that can damage the tree and the fruit.

In addition, the grower has had to trim the trees, do some grafting, reploce old or damoged trees, sweat through an early warm spell, such as this area experienced early in March this year, late frosts, the threat of hail and wind storms that might damage the trees and later the fruit, and, when the fruit begins to ripen and the battle of the birds, mostly starlings.

Yield Looks Good

And whether the grower has a bumper crop or not, certain expenses for the orchards cannot be neglected.

This year all growers agree the yield looks excellent and the prices are better than ever...17 cents for the maraschino-type cherry, 18.5 cents for the tart cherries, and 21 cents for the sweet cherry.

Prices for the other fruits will likely be up some but apples; because of the anticipated abundance, will probably be lower than in 1973, growers agree.

While growers will realize a profit this year, they remember last year when the yield was far below normal because of frosts and increased cost of labor, fertilizer and equipment.

Time was when large growers hired migrant workers to harvest their crops but the trunk shakers have proven successful and are now used in most orchards to harvest cherries.

Asked if this type of harvest damaged the fruit, Marvin Shooks who, with his brother, Versal, operates probably the largest fruit farm in the area, said that they do no more damage to the fruit and probably less to the trees themselves.

Cherries Trucked

Once harvested, the cherries are trucked to processing plants where they are immediately placed in cold water thus cutting down on any permanent damage that might make them unusable.

The shakers, incidentally, cost upward of $20,000.

The Courier survey took them to major known growers in Charlevoix county and a few in the northern section of Antrim county on the northern fringe of Michigan's fruit belt.

Among the growers contacted were the Shermans who own not only large orchards, but the Sherman Canning Co. Inc. of East Jordan.

William Sherman, one of the partners in the family business, said that the Sherman Orchards on Peninsula Rd. cover 170 acres; that they lease another 70 acres and do custom harvesting for still other growers with the two shakers the company owns.

The majority of the cherries are known as pie cherries and are the Montmorency variety, Sherman said.

He added that the company would, in harvesting their own and others cherries, harvest from 1.0 to 1.5 million pounds of cherries this year.

Sherman Processing

The processing plant, located in East Jordan, also cans other products including asparagus, two kinds of beans and other vegetables. Their farms are limited to cherries, all of which are handled commercially.

Among other growers contacted were Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Y. Cooper who own the popular Cooper orchards off M-66 in Eveline township where they have 50 acres in fruit; the David Rosenthals in Marion township; the Richard Friskes whose orchards are in both Charlevoix and Antrim counties; John Bascom of Norwood whose orchards are located in Antrim county; the John Elzingas whose fruit farm is on US 31 north of Atwood; the Shooks brothers whose orchards are located north of M-88 and the smaller John Tillotson orchard at Ellsworth.

There are other orchards but a number of these are leased or harvested by larger growers.

At the Cooper orchard where people may pick their own fruit in season, apples are the chief crop according to Mrs. Cooper.

They have four varieties of cherries which are now ripening, the Bing, the Queen Anne used as Maraschino cherries and two tart or pie cherries which are sold at the orchard or to a processing plant for commercial use.

Eight varieties of apples from the early yellow transparents to the late varieties are grown on the 20 acres devoted to this fruit.

Many are sold at the farm, others to commercial dealers and still others trucked by the Coopers to the upper peninsula for sale there.

They have no apple storage facilities so plan on disposing of the crop before departing for their winter home in Florida about mid-November. They return in mid-April.

Rosenthals Operation

The Rosenthals have the most versatile operation with several varieties of sweet cherries, three kinds of tart cherries, the types used as maraschino cherries olus plums, pears, apricots, peaches and the majority of the various kinds of apples.

Other than the tart and maroschino type cherries, they sell the largest percentage of their fruits at the farm where buyers may pick their own or purchase it by the lug.

Like other growers, the Rosenthals had trouble obtaining fertilizer. Both the Rosenthals and the Coopers had some on hand but expect to pay more than double the price for any ordered for use this fall.

The Rosenthals have winter storage for their apples and offer them for sale throughout the winter and some types of pears until the holidays.

The Friske orchards have the various types of cherries, all of which are sold to the processors except for the sweet cherries which are sold at the farm or to local stores.

Pears are also sold locally and plums are taken to the two processing plants in Elk Rapids.

The Friske's main crop is apples, 10 varieties in all, all of which must be harvested by hand, stored at the farm and sold in the area.

The John Elzingas

The John Elzingas on US 31 neor Atwood have 24 acres in apples, their main crop, in addition to cherries which are sold to the processing plant.

The sweet cherries, peaches and pears also raised on the farm are sold at the family's fruit stand where various varieties of fruit products including jams, jellies and even pies are available.

MRS. ROSENTHAL shows some of the delicious cherries that are being picked from her family's orchard just south of Charlevoix.

AREA FRUIT growers indicate that Charlevoix County should have a good fruit crop this year after fighting frost conditions the year before. There seems to be some question as to what consumers will have to pay this year.

Charlevoix's 'Aging Program' Will Not Get Much Funding

The Northwest Michigan Regional Planning and Development Services, Inc., with headquarters in Traverse City, has been formally designated an "area agency on aging" to receive funds for planning and administering services to senior citizens in the northwestern 10 counties of the Lower Peninsula.

Charlevoix County is part of this area, known as Region 10, and members of the county Commission on Aging have been working with the Regional Planning and Development group in preliminary planning.

A small amount of money, $70,382, has been allotted to Region 10 by the Michigan Office of Services to the Aging. Of this, $16,000 is earmarked for administration purposes in the Regional office, and $54,382 for services in the Region from October 1, 1974 through June 30, 1975.

The Regional Planning and Development group has the authority to fund projects and to discontinue or expand projects.

Manistee County, which is part of Region 10, has had a Commission on Aging and a Commission on Health in operation for some time.

If the Regional Commission decides to continue these programs, the entire budget for the remaining counties in Region 10 could be reduced by $25,000.

Ronald W. Crummel, Aging Project Director for the Northwest Region, says that they hope to secure additional funds from sources other than the Michigan Office of Services to the Aging to implement their work.

Their is another program of Services to the Aging for which a regional administrator has not been appointed.

It is the nutrition program, for which the state agency has allotted the ten county northwest region $101,572 for the period of October 1, 1974 through June 30, 1975.

At the present time this program is being administered by the Michigan Office of Services to the Aging, although the Northwest Regional group may act as a coordinator between them and county Commissions on Aging.

There is a 26 member Commission on Aging working under the jurisdiction of Northwest Michigan Regional Planning and Development Services, Inc.

It is made up of representatives of counties and cities in Region 10 and includes three persons from Charlevoix County: Vern Whiteford, East Jordan, Mrs. Mary Geiken, Charlevoix, and Mrs. Ruth Behrens, Boyne City.

CHARLEVOIX COUNTY'S new Circuit Court Judge Martin Breighner officially took the gavel from retiring Judge Edward H. Fenlon Friday morning in the Charlevoix Courthouse. Fenlon had announced his retirement earlier because of health problems and Breighner was appointed by the governor to fulfill his term until November.

Does Venetian Need A Change in Policy?

Where have all the pretty girls gone?

Apparently, they've faded and gone like the flowers in the song. The Venetian Queen committee has had problems finding candidates.

Until this week, the committee had contacted 25 girls and was able to come up with only one candidate.

Was it because there was a lack of young, beautiful girls in Charlevoix?

If you take a stroll down one of our beaches you'd find that probably wasn't the case.

Perhaps its more of a change in attitude--one that has been burning like wildfire across the United States.

Girls no longer want to be looked at as sex objects.

They would rather be looked at for who they are.

Even though the committee had been ahle to come up with enough candidates, perhaps next year they should base the competition on different eriteria.

In years past, when a girl is being evaluated she is judged on her appearance and talent.

The committee has eliminated the bathing suit competition, but maybe they should go a step further and do without the fashion show.

Rather than looking at what perhaps outsiders might see as a basis competition, the committee should ask younger girls what criteria should be used.

Perhaps the committee should consider evaluating what the candidate has done lor her community or fellow person.

Or maybe, there should be a longer interview with the judges and some type of written presentation made.

It is a difficult question to consider, but one thing is sure--Charlevoix contestants or potential contestants are not satisfied.

Times are changing and with these times must come some changes in the Venetian Queen's Contest.

Charlevoix Gets Only A Small Piece of Pie For Aging Programs

Word has finally been received that there will be a small amount of money available to Charlevoix County from the Michigan Office of Services to the Aging for the purpose of planning and administering services to senior citizens.

It will be a small amount indeed. The entire ten county northwest section of the state has been alloted $70,382 for the period from October 1, 1974 through June 30, 1975.

Northwest Michigan Regional Planning and Development Services, Inc. will receive $16,000 of this amount for administrative office expenses, leaving a total of $54,382 for services to senior citizens.

This amount could be cut by $25,000 if the present programs for senior citizens in Manistee County are continued.

Simple arithmatic indicates that Charlevoix County's share could be as little as $2,000 or $3,000.

Most of this money will go for planning; to devise ways and means of giving senior citizens the help they need. This planning is a prerequisite to receiving other monies funded through the Older Americans Act and administered through the Michigan Office of Services to the Aging.

Members of the Charlevoix County Commission on Aging have a big job ahead of them. They must submit plans for programs they feel will best benefit senior citizens of the county.

They must also work hard to see that these plans are implemented, the Charlevoix County gets its share of money. If they don't, the money will go somewhere else, to another county or city which speaks with a louder voice.

Right On WVOY

After seven long years of battling it out with the FCC because of objections from one local station they're finally on the air.

If last weekend's broadcast was an example of programming to come, Charlevoix residents will have a lot they can enjoy in the years to come.

We are looking forward to more good listening and wish them the best of luck.

If you haven't had a chance to listen to them on 1270 on the AM dial, we recommend you give them a try.

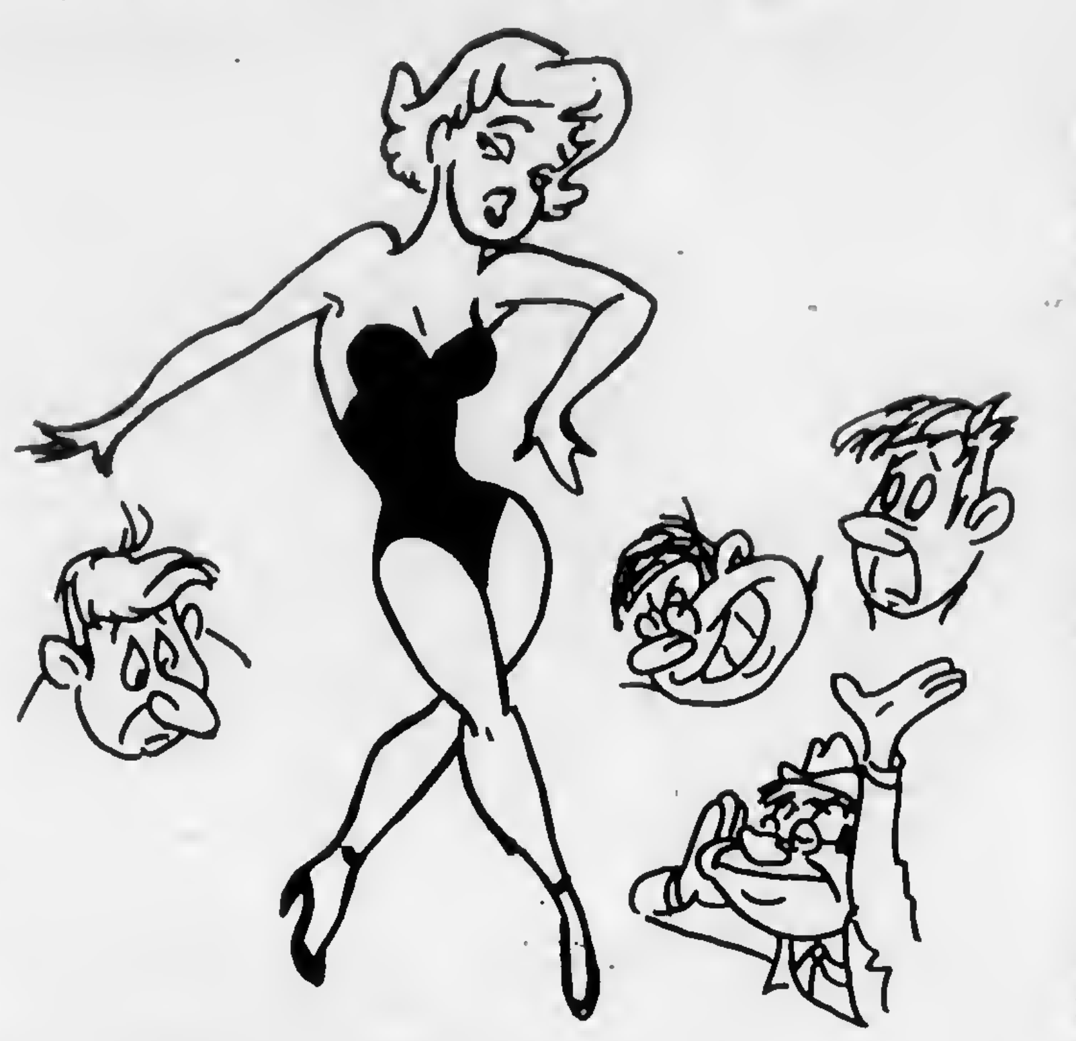
Girls Want to be People?



Clockwise

By BOB CLOCK

It is ironic that the same people who are smart enough to send a man to the moon and make butter out of sunflower seeds have been unable to do something about the lowly mosquito – one of the scourges of mankind since the days of the ark.

And mosquitos have become the bane of the Clocks' life on Beaver Island. We have put up all of the window screens we can find, even adding a couple of our own. We spray each other with Bug-Off until we reel from the fumes. We hound the kids to keep the doors closed. And we brush the dogs before they enter the house just to make sure there are no sneaky little skeeters hiding in their fur.

But every night as soon as the lights are off our bedroom sounds like a proving ground for model airplanes as dozens of mosquitos take to the air looking for warm bodies to bite.

For my part, I'd just as soon hide under the blankets and let them look for warm bodies elsewhere. But Judy will have none of it. With the first buzz she jerks on the light and leaps to her feet in the middle of the bed, a position which gives her a lethal clout in all corners of the tiny bedroom.

With a practiced eye she scours the room until finally, "Smack!" She pins one to the wall with the palm of her hand. I call "Bravo!" from under the covers. A few seconds later, "Slap!!" she has smashed a big one between her hands. I applaud lustily from the security of my lair. After a short pause I hear her rustling around the window where she has two of them trapped in the curtains. "Squish! Squish!"

Finally the buzzing stops and I emerge from the blankets to survey the carnage. Judy is still swaying in the middle of the bed, drunk with power.

"How many did you get?" I ask.

"Seventeen," she answers modestly.

"You're better than a purple martin," I tell her.

"I think that's all for tonight," she replies, a trace of disappointment in her voice.

"Don't worry. There will be more tomorrow night," I assure her.

Judy surveys the room once more and then flops back into bed.

Sometimes she repeats this little performance two or three times a night. Other times once is enough, depending on how many mosquitos have worked their way into the house during the day.

Once in a while she conducts her mosquito safaries from the prone position in the dark, using me as bait. She tracks the little critters by their buzz and as soon as one of them lands on my nose, ear or chin she lets him have it. Some mornings I awake all black and blue and encrusted with dead mosquitos.

I really suppose I should assist her in her nightly forays against the little invaders as a means of self-defense if nothing. But there really aren't enough mosquitos for both of us and I hate to spoil her fun.

Letters to the editor

Republican Upset With Party

Dear Editor:

I attended a special meeting Friday night, called for by Grover Geneit, Republican executive member. The meeting was for the purpose of either retaining or removing Chairman Wise. I would like to say right now, that this was a meeting that had all the earmarks of a Ku-Klux-Klan meeting. I had a feeling that I should have been armed with more than words. I went there with the purpose of trying to work within the county party. I'm convinced the local party is so "party oriented" to politics, that good government and the candidates platform is of no importance. I will, myself, always be a republican at heart, but to work with the local party at this time is impossible for me.

Mr. Wise was removed by the voting executive board, but before he was, there were several attacks on both Mr. Wise and Mr. Friske. Mr. Robt. Bergman read a letter renouncing Mr. Friske because he belonged to the John Birch Society. Mr. Geneit told Mr. Wise that of all his mis-feasance in office, the straw that broke the camels' back, was when he introduced Mr. Friske at his fund-raising dinner. Mr. Wise rebutted by saying that he agreed not to support any candidate in the primary and he felt that as County Chairman of the party and having two candidates in the party, he was obligated to introduce both. I, for one, agree with him. Introducing potential candidates is certainly a long way from monetary or verbal support.

When asked several times by Mrs. Stroud "What will the local party do if Mr. Friske is elected?" One answer I heard was "I'll join the Democrats." Well, there you are - real Republicans aren't they? Ninety nine percent of the people would not answer her when she again asked the question - "What will this party do if Mr. Friske is elected?" Mr. Wise stated that as Chairman of the Republican Party, he would support Mr. Friske is he won in the primary, and the same for Mr. Ostling. I believe he was removed from office for this stand of support.

A Disgruntled Republican,
Willis L. Peters

Fourth of July--No Joke

To whom it may concern:

Regarding your recent article in the paper on the belated 4th of July festivities in Bay Shore it is of my belief your criticism, harsh or not is unfounded.

While you may have just been seeking a laugh it is not right to criticize these people obeying their patriotic duties.

While they are late they are doing something to honor our country's birthday which unless I missed the boat completely is a darned lot more than was done in this town on the 4th.

What great act was done to honor our country in this "great town" on the 4th? The raising of an additional half dozen flags?

Other places in this area celebrated the 4th in some way. Has it come now to where money means more to us of Charlevoix than our country does?

Yours,
Joe Seidel, jr.

Girl Says She's Lucky to Live

Dear Mr. Editor:

My name is Perri Durbin, I'm 10 years old, I am a summer resident of Charlevoix.

This year in school we studied about a terrible drought in Africa. Many thousands of people died already and millions more are dying of Starvation. The drought area is called, "The Sahel".

We had many fund raising projects in school and raised over $350 in a month. The money was sent to Norman Michie at the United Nations Emergency Relief Fund, to help airlift food to the needy victims of the drought.

I think we are very lucky to be living in a country with such abundance and I feel we should share this abundance with those that aren't as fortunate as us.

Yours truly,
Perri Durbin

Stumping the Woods

...With Ollie O. Stump jr.

Out of respect to Alexander Graham Bell I hope memory deceives me, as it does in old age, when I attribute to him the worlds first telephone message in 1876–'What God hath wrought.'

Most assuredly divinity would be appalled to see how these infants have matured into spies with inquisitive tentacles webbing the land and an orbiting sattelite which helps us mind the business of our foreign neighbors.

Many citizens, recently become prominent, share this view of electronic spies recruited into the war on privacy.

There was a time when a mother beamed over her childs first legible writing. Now she dashes to the phone to share a far more epochal achievement. "Rebecca dialed her first call!". Grandma learns this by long disntance.

In our childhood (the first one) we were at a more advanced age before achieving this milestone in life.

The reason was physical rather than mental since it took a sturdy arm to lift the receiver which weighed as much as the crank for shaking grates. The instrument, being top-heavy, often toppled to the floor on the first attempt resulting in a swat to the bottom to remind us that the worlds eighth wonder was for adult talk, not childish prattle.

Contrary to popular belief, the telephone is not an invention. It is n device! Why the distinction? Simply because it has no ancestry linking it to those Greek and Roman geniuses who invested everything of value to mankind – free of charge. We merely patent adaptations of their inventions – for profit.

Lacking roots in antiquity, the phone is subject to modern aliases. In New Zealand its the 'telly' and at the local pup its the 'horn' but it was most aptly named the 'whosit' by a snoose chewing Norwegian in Trenary who visited an affluent cousin in Bruces Crossing. Awestruck by the elegance, he later marvelled to listeners at the general store,

"Dere vas eefen a whosit on da vall!!"

This definition, tested by the passage of time, is returning to popularity; acclaimed as most fitting by those who, at 3 AM are summoned by the whosit on the bedside table to establish their identity to some anonymous caller dialing all the wrong numbers listed under Smith.

Wiretapping, for which we boast the discredit, was incorporated into the system whenever three families hooked into the line.

The tapping was done openly since people in those days were too uneducated to be anything but aboveboard.

Upon lifting the receiver and hearing two people converse, you tapped the line by using the receiver hook like a telegraph key to convey your desire to use the line.

This Morse code irked these early 'tapees' everybit as much as do the clandestine operations today.

All calls were operator assisted by 'Central' at no extra charge. She also monitored the calls with the help of other subscribers, some of whom were disqualified if the conversation were in an alien tongue.

Modern homes are a signal corps network of whosits, everywhere except the comfort station and the hall closet; all rendered kaput by teenagers digging bettles and rolling stones. In the good old days of crank calls kids were doing chores and homework to meet the bedtime deadline of 9:30.

Our advanced Phones, with names such as Princess, are inferior to the whosit in one vital respect. A child could cry to Central,

"Mommy's lying on the floor."

Listeners rushed over along with the alerted doctor. Today such a plea would be answered with a dial tone, and we call that progress!

If it Fitz

A plague on her

By Jim Fitzgerald

It was Dominion Day in Toronto, something like our 4th of July, and I figured thut was why hotel management had stolen my car. They couldn't fool me; I've seen too many movies.

Obviously, my wife Pat had dropped dead of the plague and the Toronto Tourist Assc was afraid of losing money.

This tragedy began immediately after we checked into the world's largest Holiday Inn, in downtown Toronto. A bell boy assured me he would get my wife and luggage up to our room. He said I should go park my car in the underground garage and we'd all get together later for fun and tips.

I agreed, thus bringing quick tears to Pat's eyes. She embraced me warmly and lovingly whispered in my ear: "Where is the key to our safety deposit box?"

This was her snide way of reminding me that I have a tendnecy to get lost while traveling. She keeps remembering the time we were staying at a Howard Johnson's and I went to play golf without her and then returned to the right room but the wrong Howard Johnson's.

The crack about the safety deposit box meant Pat thought there was no way I could escape an underground garage without her, and therefore she would soon be reading my insurance policies and last will and testament. (Wait until she finds out I'm leaving everything to the Traveler's Aid Society.)

Anyway, I was determined to prove her wrong. As I wound my way down into the garage, I remembered Hansel and Gretel. But I didn't have any cookie crumbs to drop. So, please excuse the vulgarity but appreciate the cleverness, I occasionally spit out the window. The plan was to follow the saliva trail back to the surface. And it worked.

I parked in Stall 34, immediately writing 34 on my notepad, shirt and chest. I had almost completed the walk back up to the hotel when I remembered I'd left my reading glasses in the car. I was planning a lot of reading the next 4 days (wine lists), so I went back to Stall 34 for the glasses.

My brown Oldsmobile was gone. Parked in its place was a green Ford, no relation. I double checked my notes and the stall sign. 34. There was no mistake.

In less than 5 minutes, my car had been wiped off the earth. It was mysterious, astounding...it was as though I'd never been there; never checked into the hotel at all.

Suddenly, I realized that was it. I remembered that oft-told tale about the mother and daughter who went to the Paris Exposition around the turn of the century. The daughter left her mother in hotel room number 321 for a few minutes. When she returned, there was no Room 321 and no mother. The hotel management insisted the 2 women had never even checked in. The bell boy who carried their bags a few hours earlier swore he'd never seen the 2 women. And so on....

It was a long time before the mystery was solved. The explanation was that the mother had died of the dreaded plague. The hotel manager knew news of the plague would send all the tourists running for home. The Exposition would flop and local businessmen would lose millions. So Room 321 was boarded over and the death was covered up to save the tourist industry.

There was only one thing to do. I went to the hotel bar to await the end of the Dominion Day celebration at which time Toronto businessmen would doubtless return my car. I made a note on my chest to remind me to ask them about Pat's body, too.

I was explaining the note to a skeptical bartender when Pat walked in. She soon explained that the parking garage had 2 levels with a Stall 34 on each level and I'd probably parked on the 1st level and searched on the second.

Meet Charlevoix

Meet John Cross

Nets blowing in the wind, seagulls flying, a clear blue lake. Fishing boats coming in with a silvery mass entangled in nets. Few people realize the beauty of this scene, or even know it exists. However, there is one man, John Cross, who does. He's lived with it partically all his life.

COURIER: How long have you been living in Charlevoix?

CROSS: About 60 years.

COURIER: Out of that time, how long have you been in the fishing business?

CROSS: About 60 years.

COURIER: How did you first become interested in fishing?

CROSS: I had no other choice. At the time, our family lived on Beaver Island. My father was sick in bed, and there were 16 children. I had to go out and make a living to help support the family. I also got my brothers interested in it.

COURIER: In all the years you've been fishing, what's the most exciting thing that's happened to you?

CROSS: Aw, the hell with that question. If I said one thing, I'd probably wish I'd said another.

COURIER: What's the most common tpe of fish you catch?

CROSS: Whitefish.

COURIER: Have you had any trouble with limits on the amount of fish you can catch?

CROSS: Yes, sure. I can't catch a lot of trout, because I have to pay the government 35 cents a pound on it. Also, I can't catch perch, herring, pickerel, pike or bass because they're game fish. Because of this, and also because there are few places you can fish, there are very few professional fishermen left. Oh, yeah. Also it's hard to catch any chubs, because the salmon and trout are eating them all.

COURIER: Would you explain the methods of fishing you use?

CROSS: We use gill nets. They sit out like a fence in the water, because the fish can't back up, when they swim into the net, they become trapped.

COURIER: Do you use any other methods?

CROSS: Not at the moment. But were planning to go into the trap net business.

COURIER: How do the trap nets work?

CROSS: They're like a box in the water. It has leads on it, the fish swim to the bottom and get trapped.

COURIER: How many hours do the boats actually spend fishing per week?

CROSS: They spend six days a week, most times seven. Leave at six, and get back at seven.

COURIER: Do you yourself do much of the actual fishing?

CROSS: No, not any more. I mainly run the market. My son usually runs the boats.

COURIER: Who buys most of your fish?

CROSS: I sell it mostly to individual people through the market.

Resident Defends Dune Buggies At Mt. McSauba

Dear Charlevoix Courier,

I am writing this hoping to present a few points on the Mr. McSauba dune buggy situation.

Dune buggies are becoming more common than several years ago, however they are not the odd destructive monster some people are trying to make them appear. Most are just a modified V.W. and fit into a class of recreation vehicles already used and enjoyed by vast numbers of people. They are less dangerous, less odorous and much less noisy than motorcycles, snowmobiles and some boats.

There are many boating accidents and fast boats can be a nuisance to fishermen and swimmers alike. Many are noisier than dune buggies and the motor much more dangerous. However, they are patrolled and kept in line rather than banned. I can't imagine closing boat launching ramps like that of Ferry Beach because some people abuse their rights on the water.

When there was trouble on the tennis courts and a petitioned complaint on the new ball field behind the sheriff's office, they tried to find remedies rather than banning the sport. Mt. McSauba is a favorite of snowmobilers. These machines can go many places a dune buggy can't and the tracks I'm sure more harmful to the much discussed vegetation than the 4-6 pounds of air in a dune buggy tire. There is still very much green growth on the hills in front of the beach. Dune buggy roadways are behind these hills where the land is lower and there is very little growth even where these vehicles are not trodding.

As for uprooting trees, unlike the narrow paths that snowmobiles can take between and around trees, dune buggy drivers are much more limited due to size and most roadways are in the wide open spaces. I have yet to see a d.b. winding itself around the base of a tree with squeals of delight like a certain TV commercial last year for snowmobiles.

With all the trouble and complaints on snowmobiles I have yet to hear of banning them except a few whispers about it because of a so called energy crises. I won't go far into motorcycles, but again with numerous accidents, the noise and exhaust smell, they are not banned, but becoming evermore popular.

Granted banning d.b. off the beach is not saying we can't use them at all, but it's like telling a snowmobiler they can use their machines anywhere but in the snow.

No sheriff can possibly compete with the many entrances and exits available to motorcycles, snowmobilers, and people on foot, whether for quiet sunbathing or a rollicking beach party. in banning motor vehicles they are in essence only banning d.b. because of the limited access to the beach by this vehicle which can be easily shut off. I have heard others say it doesn't bother them because they'll find a way in.

I spend 2-3 hrs. of almost every sunny afternoon at this beach and many an evening watching the sunset and love it out there because of the peacefulness. I really can't add beauty because due to the trash left behind by some of the dead fish and rotted lake debris along the shoreline it is becoming an eyesore. I have brought much of this kind of thing home to my own garbage can.

Someone made a statement to the effect of drunk drivers driving like maniacs. In all the time I've spent out there I have never seen this. The result would probably be one dune buggy quickly hung up on a cliff, in the bottom of one of the hollows or sunk in soft sand along side of the trailway. The majority of the d.b. operated in this area are handled in a sane manner by mature adults, most of them with children of their own and many times riding with them, an open and clear cut roadways through the dunes behind the beach and sun bathing area.

Dune buggies are not a cheap toy with an initial cost of usually $1,000 to $2,000 plus upkeep costs, licensing and insurance and most owners aren't about to just take them out and abuse them.

I imagine I have made enemies out of other type machine operators I am really not trying to downgrade anyone else for the type of fun they enjoy, however, after years of problems with differnt types of machines, these people are still pretty free to enjoy them as they wish. Dune buggies were meant to be used on the sand and now because a handful of people don't like them, Charlevoix's sand is to be made unavailable to us and we're supposed to just lock up these vehicles and forget it.

There is plenty of room out there for everyone to safely enjoy themselves if done in a clean respectable manner. There are even plenty of hills for Mrs. Ranger to be carried over, if that still be her desire.

Thank you,
June Mitchell

Telephone Bill Going Up

Telephone rates in Charlevoix will be going up shortly.

Miss Lee Johnson of Michigan Bell Telephone said Charlevoix is being reclassified to a different rate group because of the additional telephones that can be reached in the Charlevoix exchange.

Telephone users, who have one or two party lines, will see a 25-cent rate hike, while those on four or eight party lines will have a 10-cent increase.

Business telephones will go up 55 cents.

Day Camping-- Away From Television

Remember the days when kids were kids?

You know, the days when they built tree forts and spent hours at the beach building sandcastles.

Those were the times when "GI Joe" and "Barbie Dolls" weren't needed to provide entertainment.

Times have changed, but Charlevoix's Hal Evans hopes he can recapture some of the past through the city's summer day camp program.

He's trying to get kids unglued from the "bloob tube" and outdoors to enjoy what's around them.

At the same time, Hal hopes to provide a chance for area youngsters to learn a little bit about themselves and how to work with others.

The Charlevoix Middle School teacher hopes the week-long summer experience might eventually be developed into an outdoor education program for the school.

They don't have one now and he feels it is important.

"It started real slow in June," he said about the program.

"But there were 12 the last two weeks and now there are 15."

Hal says while trying to get children away from the television set, he's also trying to get them to slow down and appreciate the outdoor environment.

Another objective of his program is to have them develop confidence in both themselves and with other people.

One way to accomplish the goal, Hal says, is for youngsters to go throuogh a confidence course that includes climbing through tires and climbing walls.

"There's no way to get through it by yourself, you have to work together," he said.

Youngsters are also given opportunities to learn more about the outdoors through nature hikes, craft projects and playing on the beach.

"From this I hope they get outdoors and they enjoy the woods, instead of being afraid," he said.

Those signing up for the Charlevoix recreation program spend a week at Mt. McSauba.

Generally in the morning they hike to the top for storytelling followed by a short hike.

After making lunch and craft period, they usually head for the beach for other activities, such as gathering materials and building sand castles.

Hal says he enjoys the program and thinks the outdoor concept has been something seriously neglected in the classroom.

"There isn't a subject you couldn't use outdoors...including math," says the Charlevoix math teacher.

Six-year-old Wendy Knight says she likes the nature hiking portion of the program, while Tony Puther, 7, thinks building things is a lot of fun.

"It's just fun," says 10-year-old Nancy Korn about the program. "There are alot of things we can do at the beach."

SIX-YEAR-OLD Wendy Knight tries to climb through the hanging tires (above), while others below attempt to scale a wall on the Charlevoix Day Camp confidence course.

Pericles And Aspasia

By TOM DAMMANN

The swans of Upper Lake Michigan have become such a common place for tourists, that their strange history has been forgotten.

It all begins with a single bird, Pericles. If he hadn't been so mean, there might never have been a flock of swans in Michigan.

Pericles was a mute swan, whose living direct descendants now number almost 700. They comprise the second largest flock on the North American continent, the first, with about 2,000 members, being scattered along the Atlantic coast from Annapolis to Cape Cod.

The story of the Michigan mute swans begins circa World War I, when Mr. and Mrs. George Douglas imported Pericles and his wife Aspasia, from England, to grace their spacious estate in Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

The pair settled down peacefully and proved to be decorative attractions until Pericles took to harassing one of the Douglas daughters, Ellen, aged five.

"My school mates and I used to walk beside the pond near our house and Pericles would start chasing us," Ellen (now Mrs. Gregory Williamson) recalled recently. "We thought it was sort of fun, but mother was frightened. She ordered them banished and father sent them up to Charlevoix, Michigan.

The swans' new home was a small stream running through the staid Chicago Club, still a thriving summer resort for well-to-do Middle Western families, where the Douglasses had a cottage. There, under the watchful eye of Club Superintendent James Gaskin, they spent the next 20 years.

Pericles and Aspasia were a prolific pair, according to Bob Miles, professional photographer who recorded most of their lives. Soon there were more than Mr. Gaskin could handle so four were shipped down to East Jordan, some 20 miles away on the south arm of Lake Charlevoix.

The swan's wings were pinioned. Their only means of travel was walking or swimming. Even so, Mr. Miles recalls, Pericles and Aspasia would escape now and then to visit their children and Mr. Gaskin would go fetch them in his pick-up.

"Pericles was especially difficult at these times, and put up a rough fight," Mr. Miles says. "He was mean...meaner than most.

"But if he hadn't been mean we might never have had a flock of mute swans in Michigan. They might have been in Iowa instead."

The Michigan flock is now concentrated around Traverse City some 50 miles south of where Pericles and Aspasia began raising their family. But one family continues to nest in Oyster Bay on Lake Charlevoix, near the Douglas cottage, still used by Ellen and her sisters.

Swans tend to stay where man will feed them, Mr. Miles says, so when Mr. Gaskin died, they scattered.

Today the flock's principle feeder and faithful chronicler is Willis "Bill" L. Gelston, Superintendent of Traverse Bay Region Intermediate School District, who watches their every move, swims with them, bands them and writes an annual report about them for the Michigan Department of Natural Resources, the only such regular study in the United States.

"He's a swan addict," Mr. Miles says.

In the spring of 1973 Mr. Gelston noted the largest number of nests ever, 174, scattered from Lake Michigan to Lake Huron and south of the Straits of Mackinac to a line running east from Traverse City. In 1974 the number dropped off by some 20 due to cold weather and high water.

Mr. Gelston visits each nest once a week until the young cygnets leave them. He rises as early as 2 a.m. motoring more than 12,000 miles to carry out his studies.

Swans begin to pair up as early as the spring of their first year and by the next spring have begun scouting for nesting territory, Mr. Gelston says. They begin mating in their third year, defending their nesting territory for the rest of their lives.

The mute swan lives to be more than 50 years old and is monogamous, though Mr. Gelston has noted evidence of divorce. In the case of death the surviving parent cares for the young. Usually the survivor finds a new mate, though there are several reports in Charlevoix of a widower who mourned to death.

Actual nesting doesn't begin until swans are three years old, when pair bonds become permanent. Their nests are usually oval, four to four and a half feet wide, and five and a half feet long. Depth of the nest depends on the substructure used—soil, muskrat house or stump, but usually only three or four inches.

The birds seem to prefer cattail and bulrush communities, surrounded by water, islands of soil or floating mud, or narrow peninsulas.

The nest territory may cover four to ten acres. The size is governed by topography, vegitation, shore line characteristics, but mostly on the aggressiveness of the couple involved. If they have been successful defenders they will return to their territory year after year.

Nests are from an ⅛ to ¼ mile apart. Building begins in late March and early April, some time after mating, and is a cooperative enterprise. The male, called the "cob" gathers the material, while the "pen," the female, arranges it, using her body as a form.

Eggs are laid as soon after the nest is completed and will weigh 14 ounces. They are greenish blue at first, gradually fading to live green. Mr. Gelston says the average clutch is 4½ per nest, with eggs being laid every 36 to 48 hours. Incubation takes from 36 to 38 days. Hatching may take 24 hours for the entire nest full, usually occurring during the last two weeks of May and the first week of June.

"Only 45 percent of the nesting pairs who lay eggs will successfully hatch young." Mr. Gelston says. "Forty-eight percent of the eggs hatch, and only 58 percent of those cygnets will survive until November 1. This means that each nest will produce 1.2 young and 28 percent of eggs laid will hatch and survive until November 1.

Between 1967 and 1972 the flock increased at the average annual rate of 18 percent. In 1974 although there are fewer nests, the hatch is bigger and the flock continues to grow.

Cygnets are able to swim as soon as their down is dried but stay close to their nest for the first two weeks. Their greatest enemies are snapping turtles, hawks, owls and large fish, which account for the most mortality.

The family territory usually expands after hatching. If this encroaches on territory of other swans with a brood, a fight occurs with one family being driven away.

Cygnets begin flying when they are 115 to 140 days old. Families generally remain together until November or December, when the adults will either force the young away or abandon them. The adult pair then spends as much time as weather will permit defending its nesting territory.

"But they can tear and slash you with a honey spur on the wrists of their wings," he says, showing numerous scars on his hands and forearms.

Antrim County Dedication

Bellaire Gets Historical Site

An event that happened nearly 70 years ago came alive again for Lyle Dickerson of Bellaire last week.

The Bellaire Area Historical Society President watched the Antrim County Courthouse be dedicated as a state historical marker.

"There were crowds of people from all over the county," recalled Dickerson as he welcomed more than 100 local residents to the dedication on the courthouse lawn Thursday.

"We think it is very fitting to dedicate this building to Antrim County."

Following Dickerson's brief remarks, poet laureate Max Ellison of Bellaire recited two poems about Antrim County men from his new book, "Clean Livers of Antrim County and Other Myths."

Others making brief statements were Senator Robert W. Davis and Jerry Roe, president of the Michigan Historical Commission.

The courthouse was constructed in 1904, although the courthouse square was purchased as early as 1879.

The first pioneers of Antrim County settled along Grand Traverse Bay near Elk Rapids in the 1850's.

Later settlers moved inland and urged that the county seat be transferred from the bay shore closer to the geographical center of the county.

After a close election in 1879, Keno, later named Bellaire, became the new county seat.

Thus began a bitter controversey which was appealed to the state Supreme Court and lasted for twenty-five years.

The courthouse was designed by Jens C. Peterson and built by Waterman and Price for $30,000.

Permission to place the marker on the Courthouse lawn was granted to the Bellaire Area Historical Society by the 1974 Antrim County Board of Commissioners.

Ruppe Sees Election Reform

Election reform was one subject local citizens discussed with Congressman Phil Ruppe during his last Friday's visit. Douglas Melvin Common Cause Coordinator for the Congressman's District, asked about Ruppe's position on current election reform legislation.

The Congressman explained that he will support a current reform bill and is co-sponsoring a strengthening amendment which would create an Independent Federal Elections Commission with subpoena power.

Melvin agreed that this Commission was key to election reform.

However, Melvin said, local citizens, Common Cause, the League of Women Voters, the Association of American University Women and the National Association of Rural Electric Cooperatives, are urging passage of two additional amendments.

A combination of private and federal election funding, along with strict limits on individual donations to any candidate, would go far in removing special interest influence on elections.

Congressman Ruppe replied that his polling of constituents did not indicate much support for public financing of elections.

Later Melvin said, Common Cause will increase its efforts to encourage people to communicate the desire for public financing to the Congressman.

Melvin added that people do not realize public funding would not cost the individual tax payer anything. It would simply set aside ear marked funds from which a candidate could draw after he had raised matching amounts in small contributions to prove he had public support.

The main goal of election reform Melvin emphasized, is to end the system of special interest groups from buying candidates.

CONGRESSMAN PHILIP RUPPE (left) was in Charlevoix last Friday to visit and answer questions from area residents. Doug Melvin from Common Cause was on hand to ask about campaign reform.

Wyeth Comes To Charlevoix

Through the courtesy of the Flint Institute of Arts, visitors will view "The Sweep" painted in 1967.

This egg tempera panel depicts the shore of a Maine landscape, but it could just as well have been painted in northern Michigan.

Atop the stone wall dominating the foreground lies a sweep, a long oar used in Maine for beaching a boat the last 100 yards. A cluster of spruce trees at the left focuses attention on a small distant building. The property is that of the artist.

Mr. Wyeth has expressed his own pleasure with the painting, being particularly gratified with the subtlety of tones in the leaden sky with exactly the effect he was after.

Charlevoix visitors are accustomed to the special exhibit every year on the bandshell. Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Cummings annually loaned one of their masterpieces from their private collection and this special exhibit has become one of the most popular features of the Fair.

However, since the Cummings are no longer residents of the area, the committee of the Fair were hard put to find a substitute patron.

Fortunately, through the intervention of another Charlevoix resident, Mrs. Peter Kleinpell, who is also a member of the board of the Flint Art Institute, the Director, Mr. Stuart Hodge, agreed to loan this lovely 25" x 36" panel to Charlevoix for the Waterfront Fair.

Many people are not aware that the Flint Institute of Art is the closest museum to the Charlevoix area and although it is small compared to such prestigious institutions as the Chicago or Detroit Art Institute, it offers visitors some very choice examples of paintings, sculpture, tapestries and furniture.

It boasts an outstanding collection of antique glass paper weights, and it hosts many fine traveling exhibits throughout the year.

It is the hope of the Art Fair Committee that the loan of Flint Art Institute's Andrew Wyeth painting will be the continuation of a happy association between the two communities of Charlevoix and Flint. Two years ago a group of students from the Charlevoix High School art class made a visit to the Flint Art Institute and the group was most enthusiastic.

Due to the energy crisis, there was no trip planned this year. Instead, Flint is sending one of it's prize paintings for the whole community to see.

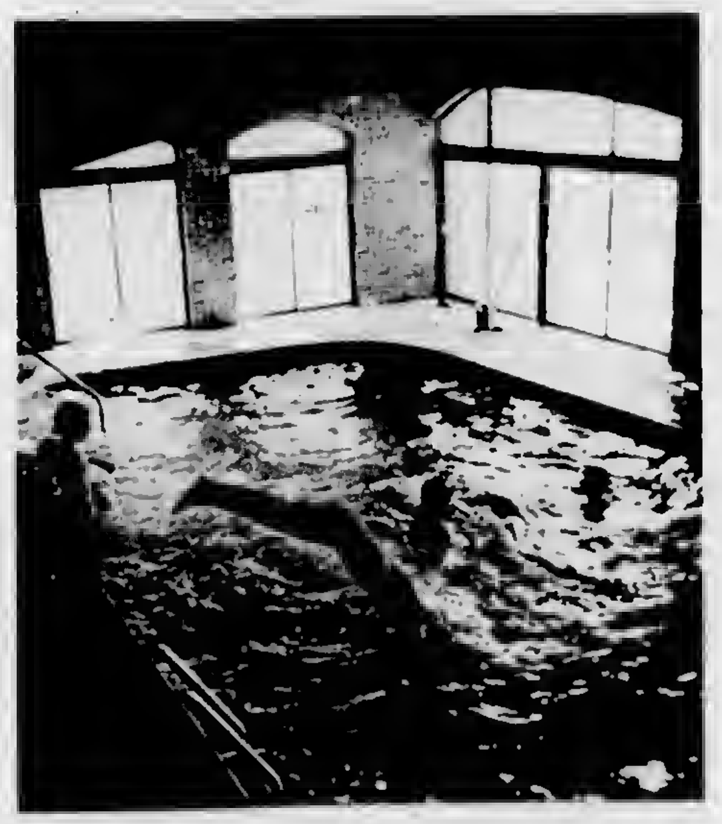
THE DUNES

Pool Is Now In Use

The luxurious Dunes condominium, in the heart of Charlevoix, has reached another pinnacle in its development with the completion of the beautiful year-round swimming pool.

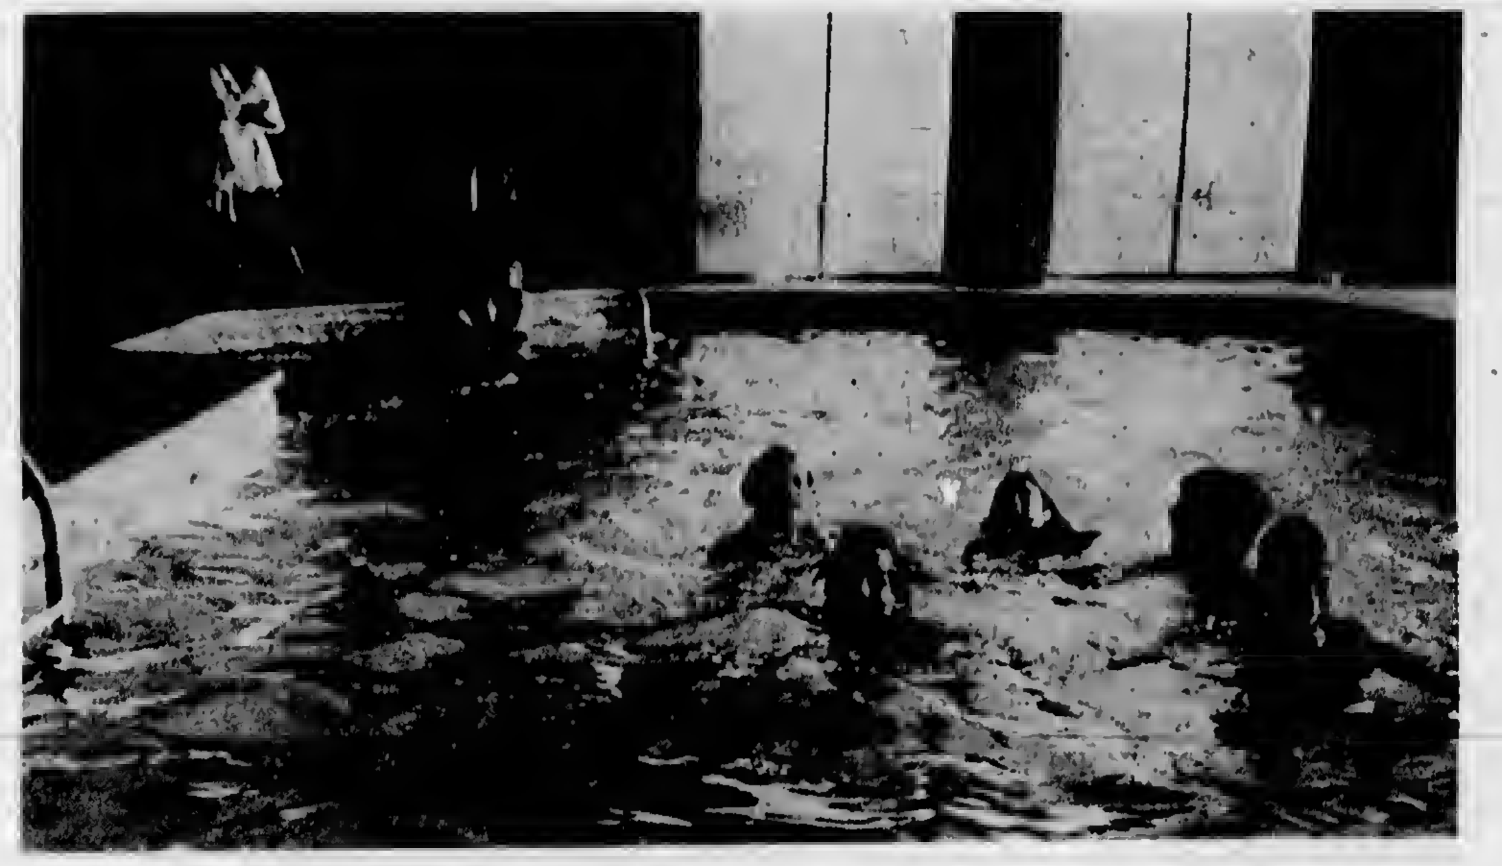
Ron Steffes, developer of the 24-unit European-flavor luxury condominium, has announced the completion of the pool facility, and states that one hundred swimmers can easily be accommodated at one time. The freeformed pool boasts such features as: underwater lights for night swimming; a controlled atmosphere to prevent the high humidity common with many indoor pools; urethane insulation to soften sound, thus avoiding the "gymnasium effect". The DUNES pool is marble-lined to avoid the rust problems common with chlorine use, and the tile is impervious to moisture.



A GRACEFUL BRICK arch dividing the pool at The Dunes accents the large patio doors leading out from poolside onto a wide veranda overlooking the Lake Michigan beach and shoreline.

Mr. Steffes points out that owners at THE DUNES have the convenience of being able to change into their swim attire in the privacy of their own units, and can walk down carpeted stairs and hallways -- completely indoors--to reach the pool. Especially nice on a cold winter day.

THE DUNES condominium pool boasts an additional feature in the Hydrotherapy Unit and Sauna. Skiers will enjoy the large sauna room where they can relax and ease weary muscles after a day on the nearby ski slopes.



ENJOYING A REFRESHING swim in the pool at The Dunes are Steve Moraniec, Anne Steffes, Mike Moraniec, Joe Moraniec and Dave Hibberd.

Adjoining the Indoor Swimming Pool is the carpeted Game Room with a parqueted dance floor and jukebox. Parents not wishing to use the pool can view their children and others from the comfort of this lounge facility.

THE DUNES has also recently completed and furnished one of the bedroom guest units for your inspection. Recent purchasers are now moving in--THE DUNES sales staff is on the premises to serve you--so stop by today and inspect the great new features now completed at THE DUNES--situated on the curve on Petoskey Avenue, just north of the bridge.

If you have not already received your full information brochure on THE DUNES, fill out the coupon below and send for it today. Two bedroom units are complete at $58,900. Three bedroom units complete from $74,500.

Charlevoix Lifeguards Need Your Help For Safe Beaches

Have fun, but play it safe on the beaches, warn Charlevoix lifeguards.

City lifeguards watching over city beaches are concerned that people aren't taking the necessary safety precautions when swimming.

They're also worried about the increased amount of trash and litter.

"Unfortunately, sometimes I feel like a glorified babysitter," says Lifeguard Liz Collier.

The 20-year-old Water Safety instructor says too many parents are sending their youngsters to the beach with older brothers and sisters, who don't keep a watchful eye.

Even the parents who bring children to the beach, soon forget about them, she says.

"They don't keep any sort of eye on them," she continued.

Miss Collier says the beach can be fun, but people have to obey the rules posted at the lifeguard stand.

She said many people resent being reminded about the beach rules, but they have to understand that the lifeguard is doing it for their own safety.

Erin Arvilla, who has been lifeguarding for four years, says people have to remember not to run on or push people from the docks and rafts.

She said people have to be especially cautious at depot beach, where the board is beginning to crack.

"And we're having problems about littering," she added.

"During the course of the day, kids come down and don't use the trash barrels."

On the subject of floatable objects, she reminds parents to not let their children go out above their waist in water.

"Everyone thinks you can go out all the way and you can't," she said.

Charlevoix County Commission Races

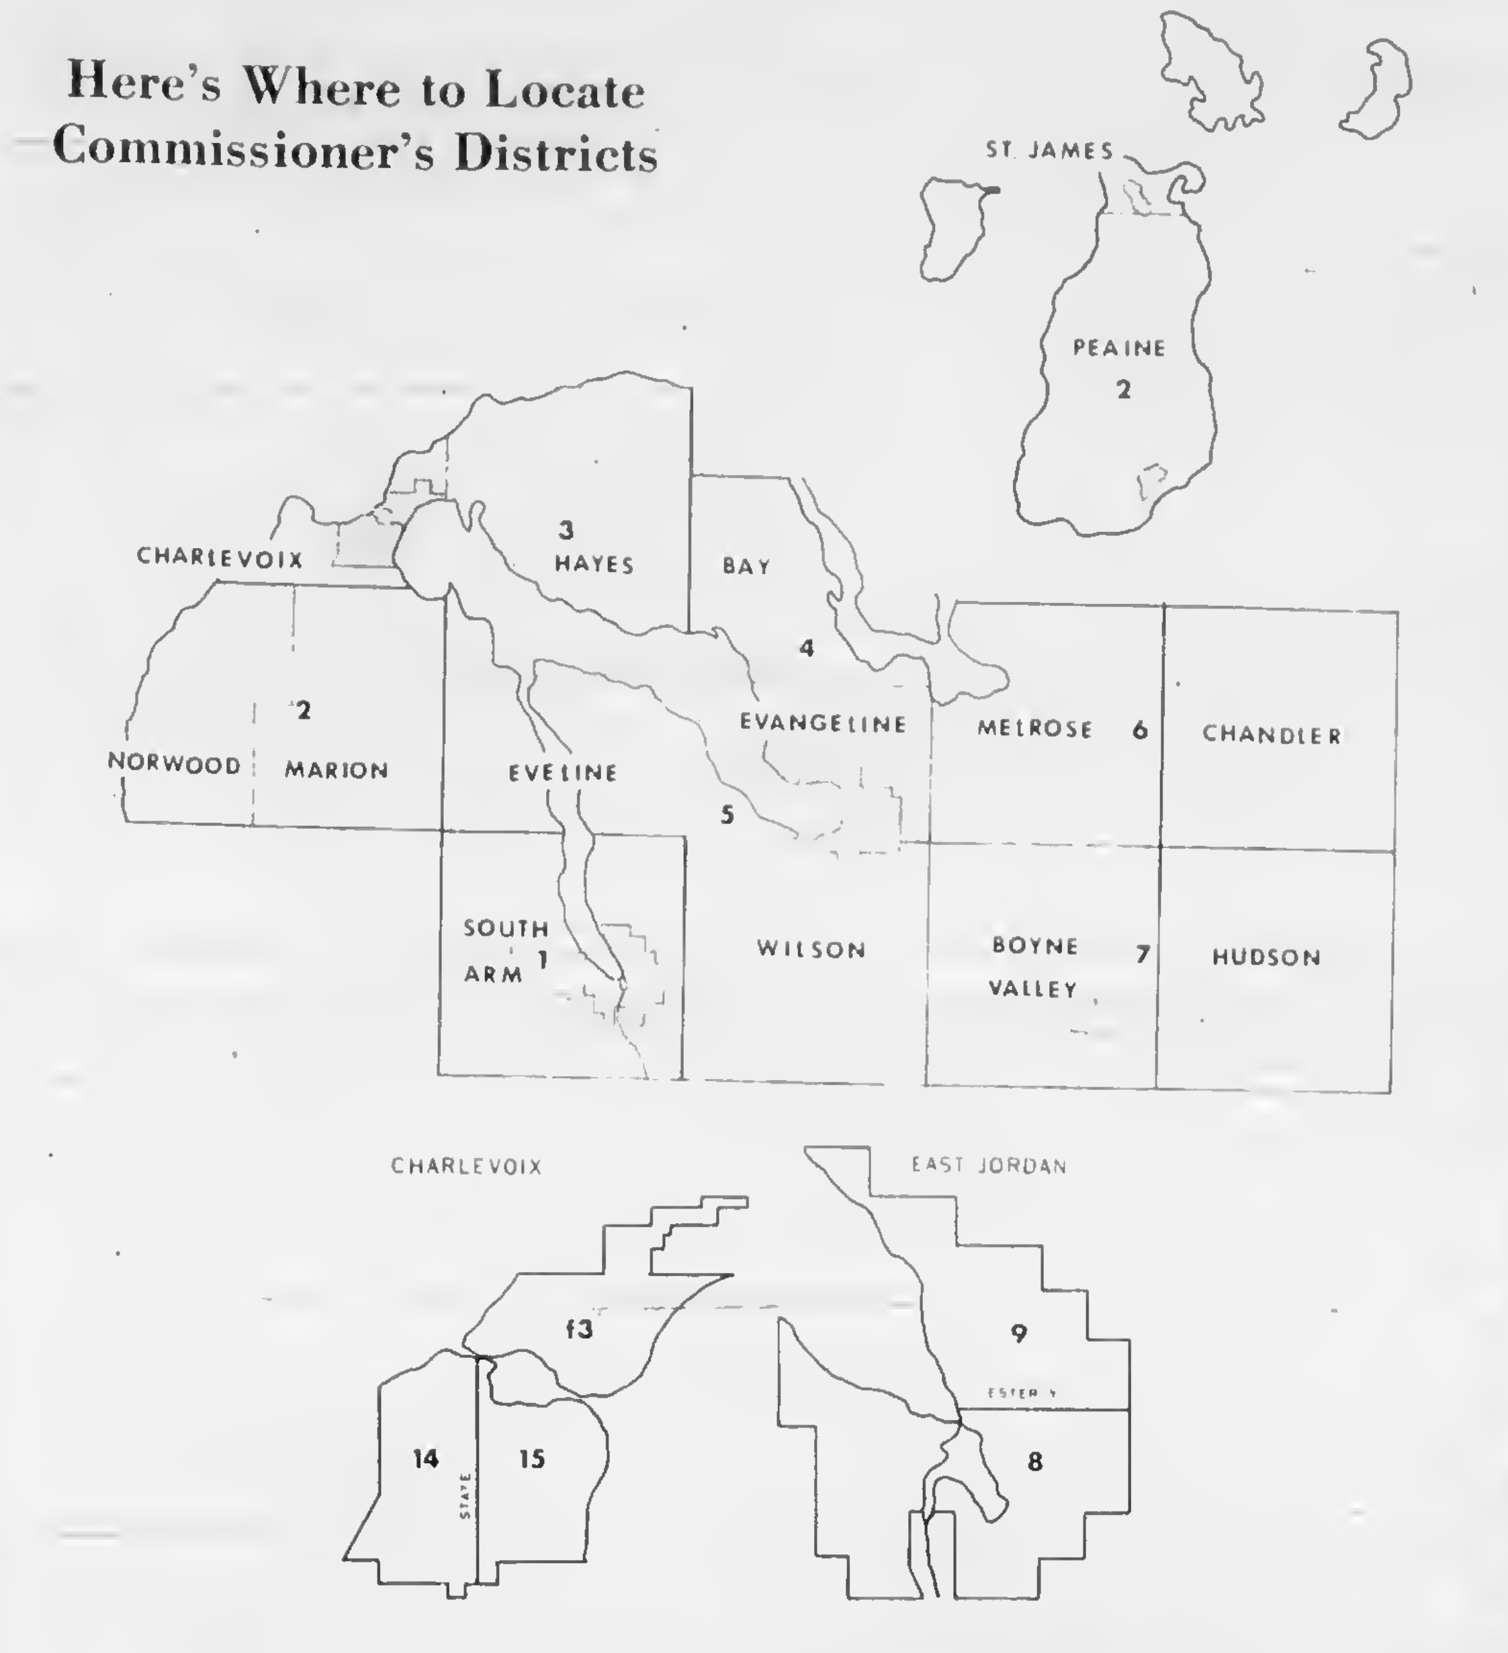
With the August 6 primary just around the corner, the Charlevoix Courier is presenting its readers with the answers to questionnaires recently sent to county commission candidates.

If you don't know what county commission district you live in, look at the map on this page and then locate your district.

Below is the list of questions that were asked the candidates with their responses located under the district heading.

1. What makes you qualified to be a candidate for County Commissioner?
2. What do you propose to do to resolve the dog pound situation?
3. What political offices have you held?
4. What party sticker are you running under? Are you a paid party member?
5. If you are elected, would you recommend any reforms to county government. If so, what?
6. What do you consider the most crucial issues facing the Board of Commissioners presently?
7. Do you think there should be a salaried County Manager?
8. Do you feel the District Court should remain with the County or be under State control as is the Circuit Court?
9. Should the County consider having a voted millage. Why or why not?
10. Should the County explore the feasibility of a bridge across the South Arm of Lake Charlevoix at Ironton?
11. What do you see as a solution to the County Solid Waste (dump) problem?

Here's Where to Locate Commissioner's Districts



District Two

CLYDE CUNNINGHAM (R) is a dairy farmer and life long resident of Charlevoix County. He is an incumbent.

1. Experience as township supervisor and assessor for 7 yrs. and County Commissioner for 6 yrs.

2. There has been consideration by the board of building a pound on the property where the jail is.

3. Township Supervisor and County Commissioner.

4. Republican. Yes.

5. No.

6. The Erosion and Sedimentation Act and solid waste disposal.
7. No, I do not.
8. Under State Control.

9. Because I feel the County has adequate finances through allocation.

10. Yes. Some aspects have already been explored.

11. The board of commissioners asked the Planning Commission 2 yrs. ago to study this problem and give them some figures and plans. This will be presented to the board possibly next month.

ROBERT J. WASOSKI (D) has lived in the county for the last six years after duty in the United States Air Force. He is a county veteran's counselor and is a member of both V.F.W. and American Legion.

1. My deep concern for good County Government. Plus experience on the Township Board of Review, Building Inspector and Chairman of the Township Zoning Board, also Chairman of Charlevoix School District Citizens Advisory Committee.

2. I am open for suggestions, and would consider possible subsidy to the Charlevoix Humane Society to alleviate the major portion of the problems that exist.

3. Have never held a partisan political office. While living in California I held positions in the City but the State of Calif. considers City Officials as non-partisan.

4. I am a paid party member of the Democratic Party and have been for the past 14 years. I have actively supported the Democratic party during that time.

5. I would not recommend any reforms if elected because I do not like the word reform. Although I would recommend changes in policy such as central purchasing for the county, many tax dollars could be saved in this area. There are several other items that can be improved but will need the full cooperation of County employees and the general public. These I feel are too numerous to cover in the space allotted.

6. (1) Property Taxes in the County. (2) Land control and development. (3) Roads and Byways.

8. At the present time I am not committed as to whether it should be under County or State jurisdiction. Although I would give the matter much thought and study before making a decision.

9. This would take a great deal of study in order to make an intelligent decision. Although I would not recommend voted millage at this time.

10. Yes, the County should, possibly in the Ironton area, but I feel that the growth pattern and new highway construction will determine what will have to be done.

11. There are many approaches to disposal of solid waste and the most effective that I have seen are areas that have been purchased by the County and using the land fill method and reclaiming the area for County parks or recreational areas seems to satisfy the solid waste needs.

1. American Citizen? Yes. Registered Voter? Yes. WW II Vet? Yes. Last, but not least, I'm honest. I believe this should be qualifications enough for most local political positions.

2. If the commissioners listen to the humane society like they listened to their consituents about county-wide zoning, then the dogs are in trouble at the pound.

3. The question implies that a previous political office held is a pre-requisite for qualifications. I believe a person can be knowledgeable about his government without holding public office.

4. I am not currently paid up to the local Republican Party and I do not intend to be until they stop their hand-picking of candidates and treat all party candidates with equality. I make reference to ex-state rep. Richard Friske.

5. I don't like the word reform, because it always means more of the same, just achieved in a different manner. One of the many changes I would make, would be a motion to cut all budgets 10 percent across the board, starting with commissioners' salaries.

6. Getting re-elected.

7. Absolutely not. This county government has already perpetuated itself into a costly burden. Their concern should be for a laissez-faire type of government that is guaranteed to us through the constitution.

8. Anyone who knows the basic fundamentals of our government should be aware that no higher governing power should ever be allowed to control an entity of government that is already established. Control should be where the action is, not down state.

9. I believe that voted millage is the only way to support all forms of government. The allocation of tax dollars is too difficult to spread on the four units. Allocation boards consist of just a few. A vote by the people on millage would be better cost control.

10. I cannot believe the county commissioners haven't already studied the feasibility of this project. If they haven't, after all the costly problems with the ferry, it certainly would show ineptness of their duties.

11. I believe you are referring to the East Jordan and Boyne City owned land fills. Our local sanitary land fill, off Brock Rd., is the only one licensed by the D.N.R., in the county. If the East Jordan and Boyne City land fills are as bad as the D.N.R. claim they are, they should be closed until they could correct their problems and use the Brock Rd. land fill for a fair charge. I understand it has been made available, by the owner, to both East Jordan and Boyne City.

District Three

CLAYTON SMITH (R) is an incumbent county commissioner and local farmer who deals in fruit. He has lived in the county 58 years and is a member of the Farm Bureau and Methodist Church.

1. Past experience on Board for two terms and experience in township government.

2. I think the County should cooperate with Humane Society to solve the problem.

3. Township Board of Review and Justice of Peace.
4. Republican. Yes.
5. More equal distribution of appointments on committees.
6. Holding the line on general budget.
7. No we do not have money or available space in our building.
8. Yes, the State is taking over too many areas of local government.

9. This may become necessary in the future.

10. Yes that is one reason we have spent money to keep the ferry in operation so in the future federal and state money may be available.

11. Private enterprise in each local area, encourage.

JOHN E. HAGGARD (R) is a native of Charlevoix and is a local plumbing and heating contractor. He is also a member of the Charlevoix Regional Planning Commission.

1. District and Community interest native of area, married and father of three children, education.
2. Will study with the parties involved to find the right and proper solutions.
3. None.
4. Republican, Yes.
5. See below.
6. Tax evaluations.
7. Would have to look at the pros and cons to see what would be best for the county interest and decide from this.
8. I believe in the three (3) bodies of government, Executive, Legislative and Judicial.
9. No See your present tax statement.
10. Would have to find the feeling of the residents of this area to make a good decision.

11. I believe in private enterprise doing this work, but the state controls are making it harder for them to comply.

DONNA J. DOVE (R) is a freelance court reporter and has lived in the county for 3 years.

1. Being a property owner in Hayes Township. Having two teenage daughters. Twenty years experience as a civil servant for county and state government. Opened minded and not afraid to voice the opinion of the voters of Hayes Twp. and Charl. Twp.
2. I would prefer hearing both sides of the story before making a comment to something I am not fully aware of.

My thoughts at the moment are to encourage a Humane Society and take the burden away from the Sheriff's Department so they may use the time and energy for more important police matters.

3. For the past twenty years I have worked for the County or State Government and unable to hold office.
4. Republican Ticket. Not paid.
5. There is always room for reform but would like to become elected and listen to all crucial points and problems of the property owners before suggesting any changes. I would also be availabe for any suggestions from the property owners on any issues they might feel important to our area.
6. Zoning, increased property taxes, problems related to population growth in the County.
7. Definitely not.
8. Definitely under State Control for uniformity.
9. At the present time there is a small group of people, namely Commissioners, representing the populous. This is called, "taxation without representation" and I am in favor for a voted millage where everyone has a chance to voice their opinion.
10. Without a tremendous tax burden to property owners.
11. I will withhold any statement until I can study the issue further and hear from the voters as to their views.

District One

DELBERT INGALLS (R) is a farmer who has lived in the county for 37 years. He is a member of the Wesleyan Church and Farm Bureau. He is an incumbent.

1. Interested in local and county affairs.
2. Undecided.
3. Commissioner 6 years.
4. Republican. Paid member.
5. No.
6. Undecided.
7. No.
8. Undecided. Need more information.
9. Undecided. Times change.
10. Yes.
11. Undecided.

District Thirteen

DON MEGGISON (R) is running unopposed. He has lived in the county 50 years and is a mechanic at the Charlevoix Oil Company. He belongs to the Lion's Club, V.F.W., American Legion, Rod and Gun Club and Charlevoix Fire Department.

1. I'm a resident of Charlevoix county.
2. Leave it to the committee who is studying it. I don't know any of the facts.
3. District No. 13 Commissioner.
4. Yes, I am a paid up member in the Republican party.
5. In almost every situation there is changes for the better. At present I know of none.
6. Keeping the budget in balance.
7. No.
8. Keep it as it is.
9. The commissioners are elected by the people. Why can't they speak for the people who elected them.
10. Not at the present. The county just spent over $100,000.00 on the ramps and ferry. There should be a long range plan.
11. As far as Charlevoix, the city seems to have everything under control, and we have a good garbage system.

Several Candidates File No Answers

Three candidates did not return the Charlevoix County Commission Questionaire. They included Aaron Brock, a Republican running in District 5; John E. Vrondran, a Democrat running in District 5; and Tuseo Heath, a Democrat listed as a candidate for District 3.

7. I don't like the idea but if the voters wish it then I would do as the people want.
8. I feel the District Court should remain in the county control. The people should have some say so in jurisdiction.
9. If they wish, but if the voters don't want it then don't keep pushing for it.
10. As I recall the county has explored this before, and by doing away with the ferry it would serve no one any good.

PATRICIA BETZ (D) is a housewife and has lived in the county for three years. She was formerly an automatic operator for Western Union.

1. I'm not politician I owe no special interest group anything. I see some wrongs that need correcting.
2. Clean up old buildings, run it efficiently, save the taxpayers money for more essential things.
3. None.
4. Democrat. No.
5. The main reforms needed are communication between government and the people and keeping county government costs down.
6. Communication between Government and the people must be improved. Property tax should and can be lowered, county government costs likewise.
7. Only if county voters want it and at this point there is no outcry for such from the voters.
8. Does it really make any difference?
9. Only if requested and voted on by the voters.
10. The need is not there.
11. We have no "problem". It's the state instance that we use a certain type waste program.

IRA L. DAVIS (R) is a native of Charlevoix County and a right of way coordinator for the Northern Michigan Rural Electric Cooperative. He is presently chairman of the county board of commissioners.

1. Four years as Commissioner and years in private business.
2. See what the people want.
3. Chairman of Board of Commissioners.
4. Republican at present.
7. Yes and no - needs a little more study.
8. County.
9. No, if they cannot operate under millage now you need a new Board of Commissioners.
10. Yes.
11. None - the D.N.R. and Health Department have to get together otherwise there is nothing we can do.

District Nine

BARNEY R. MILSTEIN (R) is an incumbent county commissioner who is retired and has lived in the county 54 years. He has served on the county board for 39 years. He is a past president of the East Jordan Rotary Club.

1. Being on the Board of Commissioners 39 years.
2. I am in favor the county having a dog pound.
3. Past Mayor of East Jordan. Am county supervisor and commissioner.
4. No.
5. Our county government is one of the best in the state but would like to have the taxes lowered.
6. The crucial issues are to keep the county in a good financial condition.
7. I do not, because we can do a better job, and more economical.
8. County control.
9. My answer to this questions is as follows. I want to get the opinion of my voters first.
10. I am in favor in having a bridge, because running the ferry is getting too expensive.
11. My answer is as follows: Our Health department is doing a good job, so I am willing to leave that up to them.

District Eight

THORA KOTOWICH (R) has lived in the county for 29 years and is president of the American Legion Auxiliary. She is a member of the Jordan River Watershed Commission, Elm Point Commission and East Jordan Planning Commission.

MELVIN NISWANDER (D) is a carpenter and has lived in the county for 25 years. He belongs to the American Legion.

1. My interest in local government, plus experience as an Alderman for the city of East Jordan.

2. I would like to see the Charlevoix County Humane Society Organized.

3. Councilwoman for the City of East Jodan.

4. The Republican Party. No, I am not a paid party member.

5. I believe Charlevoix County is one of the best run county's of the state at the present time.

7. No. Until Charlevoix County can afford to pay for the kind of qualified manager it would take, I believe that we should remain as we are.

8. We should try to keep as much local control as possible. Therefore I do not think District Court should be under State control.

9. Undecided.

10. The County has explored the feasibility of a bridge at Ironton. And I for one would be favorable - if it ever becomes possible.

11. A more definite set of plans from the DNR.

1. American citizen and taxpayer.

2. Clean up what we already have and see that the ones paid to keep it that way-do so.

3. None.

4. Democrat.

5. Just to make sure no money is spent foolishly, to make the taxpayers suffer.

6. The high cost of taxes and the high county costs.

7. No.

8. Should remain with county.

9. No, There is already too much millage imposed on the people.

10. No.

11. Leave it as is. It is taking care of itself at least. Till we can get other county expenses down where they belong.

District Five

KARL WALDNER (D) has lived in the county for 19 years and is a laborer. He belongs to the Citizens Information Service.

RALPH RICHARDSON (R) is an incumbent county commissioner, who has lived in Charlevoix County for 12 years as a beet farmer.

1. U.S. citizenship and a registered voter.
2. Clean up the old building - There is no "situation."
3. Chairman, CIS; Wilson Township Zoning Administrator.
4. Democratic. Yes.
5. Increase communication. Cut county govt. costs. Scrap most future spending plans. Lower property taxes.
8. Getting re-elected without saying anything, what can they say about:

–Not having done anything towards keeping property taxes reasonable?

–Not communicating with all the county's people, only the privileged few?

–Spending property tax dollars like drunken sailors and approving it at secret meetings?

–their documented future plans for doubling, possibly tripling, county taxes while physically raping the land?

–The new organized county commissioner candidates; if a majority (8) are elected they will give the county govt. back to, and working for, all the people.

7. If the voters of the county want one.
8. What possible difference would it make?
9. I don't hear any great outcry for it by the voters.
10. This is planned for the future in the county's General Development plan - it's nonsense, of course.
11. We have no "problem". It's Lansing that is insisting we do. Ignore Lansing - no "problem."

1. As a member of the farm community, I have an opportunity to be aware of the thoughts, opinions, and wishes of the persons residing in my district. I also have the time to attend the numerous meetings necessary to stay on the top of the events taking place throughout the district.

2. We need a new animal care facility in a good location within the County. I propose to continue to listen to the presentations by those supporting the humane society as well as considering the possibility of the County building a new pound.

3. County Commissioner.

4. Republican. Yes.

5. Yes. I would like to see us work more effectively with what we have available. This includes remodeling our committee structure, working more closely with particular departments and keeping our budget in line with county needs.

6. The most crucial issue is to provide efficient public service, while, at the same time, keeping the budget at its lowest possible level.

7. This is an item which deserves a great deal of thought. We are witnessing increased demands for services while at the same time we have no means of co-ordinating county departments. A County Manager may be the best answer.

8. The Circuit Court is not under state control, it is a shared item between three counties. The District Court should remain under local control with state structured guidelines.

9. There is no need for voted millage.

10. Yes, the reasons for this study are numerous. We are already evaluating this possibility.

11. Due to State requirements, we must prepare a solid waste plan. Hopefully, this can be coordinated with all of the local units of government, as well as with the private operators.

District Fourteen

KENNETH STALEY (R) is a incumbent county commissioner and owner of a local grocery store.

OSCAR WARD (D) has been a county resident for 45 years and is a self-employed taxi cab operator. He belongs to the American Legion.

1. I have 4 years experience in City Government and 6 years Charlevoix Regional Planning experience as well as County Board member since 1968. I have been Commander of the Charlevoix V.F.W. Post and am in "touch" with many people daily through my business. I have often taken the unwanted jobs, gone on from where we were, accepted decisions of the majority, and sometimes turned what seemed to be an unfortunate loss into what in many ways was a win for the people. I strive to amend things unacceptable yet desirable, to make them acceptable rather than be just a NO voter–in other words recognize a need.

2-A new man has been hired to do the Dog Warden job. At the present time some funds have been budgeted for capital outlay to construct a new pound or improve the old one. Present funds are inadequate for a new building according to our latest information. Investigation is continuing. Final budgets for 1975 will be forthcoming in October. Our county taxes must not all "go to the dogs". We have, we can, and we shall live within our means if I am a County Commissioner. The pound, if operated, will be run efficiently, humanely, according to the law and within our budget.

3.-See Item 1.

4.- I am running on the Republican Party "sticker." I am a paid member of the local Republican party.

5.- The word "Reforms" means to make better and most certainly the potential for better county government is and has always been uppermost in my mind. A commissioner's ability to listen as well as explain things to constituents, the part the Press plays in informing people with the complete "straight dope", and the federal and state law makers cooperation without intervention all have its effect toward making better county government. I frequently recommend changes. See Item 7.

6.-Providing more services, with less taxes and a balanced budget–getting the most for our dollar for all people.

7.-Yes, County Manager not an imported professional, but a grass roots, long time involved, highly talented individual, most of all with a knowledge of our situations and a lot of common sense.

8.-I hate to answer a question by asking another but who would be expected to furnish the capital outlay, under state control of District Courts and for what, and would the people still elect judges, etc. If the balance in government (Judicial, Legislative, Executive) is working, it will work the way it is. There is too much reliance on law school certificate holders to be the "back bone" of government instead of the average interested and involved citizen. The Court system should be only one member of a "team". Local Courts–Local Team. Each with certain checks and balances over each other.

9.-The County should not consider a voted millage. Not at this time or the foreseeable future. We must live within our means–first force the "weeding out the wheat from the chaff." Then, if more is needed, funding will be found. Controlled growth brings valuation increases and more dollar tax revenue with the same millage and should meet the increased costs of county government.

10.-I believe a bridge at Ironton would be a great asset to our transportation, joint city efforts, fire protection, school systems, relief of the Charlevoix bridge and many more things the ferry service cannot provide.

11.-We have some excellent people working on the solid waste disposal questions. Suggestions from outside this group are most welcome. This has not been my committee, from which reports and proposals come to the other Board members. You can be sure the problem will receive my attention as reports or proposals become available to the Board.

1. Well for openers–I was born in the area and have lived here all of my life with the exception of 10 years prior to 1950. I feel I know the area and its problems. I keep informed and have long been a student of history and government. I have often reflected on the qualifications possessed by some who come to office by appointment.

2. I would suggest moving the dog pound closer to the Sheriff's personnel and try working with the Humane Society. It surprises me that the State doesn't have an interest here. The Lansing power structure seems to come up with a statute to cover every line of humane endeavor.

3. I have not held any political office so feel uncontaminated as to political debts. Our Republic was organized well by the founding fathers to provide a government of laws and not of men. I have long felt that an honest representative must have first and final allegiance to the voters that elected him.

4. I think my dues are currently paid up with the Democratic party but I refuse to become fanatical toward any party without hope or promise of better government through the constitutional process.

5. Some way must be found to reduce the cost of ownership, in other lower taxes on homes. One wonders WHY our Board of party in 1972 at which it was agreed to dissociate Richard Friske from the Charlevoix County Republican Party. That year Friske ran for 103rd District Representative on the American Independent Party ticket after losing to Ostling in the Republican primary. Previously he had been elected to a two-year term in the legislature as a Republican.

Wise then asked County Clerk Clarence Rabach what the procedure was to remove him from office. The information was not readily available to Harold G. Harris was appointed parliamentarian and read the by-laws. He found that a vote of one-third of the members of the executive committee was needed to recall the chairman.

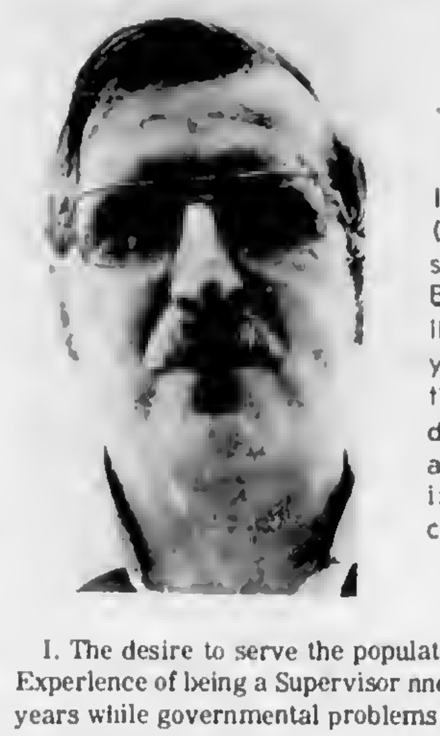
District Fifteen



I. LEE MODERLAND (R) is the assistant secretary of the Belveder Club and has lived in the county for 22 years. He belongs to the fire department and the development corporation. He is an incumbent county commissioner.

THEODORE E. BROWE JR., (R) is an electrician and has lived in the country 31 years. He belongs to the Lions Club and Red Cross.

1. The desire to serve the population of the 15th District. The Experience of being a Supervisor and Commissioner these past 9 years while governmental problems at all levels have exploded, and the ability to listen.

2. The Board has financial plans and awaits Committee study and recommendations to rectify the inequities.

3. City Alderman, Charlevoix 1st Ward 1956-60. County Supervisor Charlevoix 3rd Ward 1965-69. County Commissioner 15th District, Charlevoix County 1969-74.

4. A Paid up Republican.

5. County Government has had great responsiblity placed on it by Federal and State Government and we should position ourselves to be more responsive to programs at all levels and utilize them to best ability.

6. Maintain an honest equilibrium at the County level, creating and generating School, Township, City and Village interest where ever potentially possible and making County Government responsive to demand from Local as well as State and Federal Government.

7. A County Executive under the Board of Commissioners would be highly valuable to all agencies, Townships, Cities, Villages and Schools in research and implementation of various and numerous programs developed by State and Federal Legislation. His economizations and fund developments would far surpass his cost.

8. District Court as Circuit Court is, should remain under County Control, and more local jurisdiction through legislation be developed. Costs should be faced up to at local level and these costs credited from State and Federal monies imput. There is no reason for Courts and Judicial to be in lock step with their compatriats of other governmental entities. If Charlevoix County wants stiffer penalization for law violations, so be it.

9. No, A more equitable distrubtion of the allocated millage based on serious study of governmental and School need would provide adequate financing of Governments.

10. At various levels, this possibility is being reviewed. If in the future, a bridge could well unify County creating tremendous potential for education on strictly County level rather than multi-county development where inequities can develop in financing such as now being experienced with the Charlevoix Emmet Intermediate School District. Charlevoix paying a disaportionnte share of its Capital and Operating costs. All levels of Government woudd benefit.

11. Disposal of all types of refuse is a big item facing Townships, Villages and Cities. The most preferable desire would be that private enterprise be encouraged at these government levels to involve themselves and with this encouragement develop and implement operations to satisfy the need. All residents must face the need to pay greater costs for refuse disposal but private enterprise can provide the lesser expensive route. At the County level, to assist, Land Use Planning now being developed through the Planning Commission will greatly assist, as will Township zoning.

1. A candidate is any person whose name appears on an official ballot I qualify. Experience beneficial to a county commissioner position includes two years of directing a base unit fund. This required control of fixed assets, requisitions and disbursement of government funds and materials, and auditing of records.

2. There have been some emotional expressions made concerning the dog pound. The state has men whose position and training should be used to evaluate the 'situation'. Given an objective viewpoint, and using judgement based on experience and personal observations, I would work to maintain state requirements.

3. I have held no previous political office. Many persons with prior office positions tend to serve the office instead of the electors. Having resolved to represent the people in dedicated, honest work and with realistic attention to their needs and desires, I should not require prior office positions.

4. Republican. At the June Republican party meeting in the county building, the members agreed to fund raising for an incumbent. They also expected this man to speak up for the present commissioners for the primary election. If the party doesn't support the people, the people won't support the party.

5. I do not expect to change major existing programs without an inside view of their operation. Alternatives would require study to insure that the people benefit. Consolidating expenditures as voted by the 'ins' could be more fully utilized to reduce costs. Many frills are possible areas of savings.

6. The present commissioners show overwhelming agreement in many areas where others disagree. During 1972 and 1973, the voting on other than routine matters was over 95 percent yea. This should make the election the most crucial issue facing the commissioners. Excess property taxes, conservative spending and careful planning are necessary.

7. A salaried county manager would remove close relationship between the county administration and the people. If the commissioners would perform their duties properly, the county could enjoy more growth without interference. If a manager were elected and assumed all duties, eliminating the 15 commissioners; then great savings are possible.

8. The district court should definitely remain with the county. State control would be duplication in many ways or would lead to consolidation, and another loss of the peoples co-ordination with local government. Under state control, the county's cost would change in name only; the people would still pay.

9. The county has voted millage in nearly every school district. Subject to a 15 mill limitation, the commissioners levy taxes and the tax allocation board divides it. Would voted millage on property evaluation be distributed as the people need and desire? Millage should be voted and used as necessary.

10. If the present or previous commissioners have not examined this item, they are very remiss. The expense of the ferry work being completed should adequately serve the county for years. A study of the peoples wishes in regard to preserving a historic work or advancing transportation means should be made.

11. The county has several 'problems' in solid waste. If reference is made to the privately owned facility; it meets all stringent requirements. The municipalities needing to improve conditions must do so or explore other means of dumping. We must fight federal restrictions which hamper sensible solutions.

Use Your Zip Codes

Most complaints about slow mail are local, and most of the reasons for the delays are lack of ZIP Codes in addresses, Postmaster Rex. E. Davis said today.

"Letters going across town need ZIP Codes just as much as letters going across the country," he said. "Letters without ZIP Codes are removed from the mail stream and placed in no-ZIP sorting bins for handling. This slows up delivery."

Postmaster Davis noted that there are 4,250,000,000 local letters without ZIP Codes mailed in this country yearly. "Here in Charlevoix about 35 percent of letters are mailed without ZIP Codes," he said.

"You can always find the local ZIP Code in the telephone book," he added. He noted that 90 percent of national mail now carries ZIP Codes, while 84 percent of local mail uses ZIP Codes.

Tennis Talk

By CHUCK WRIGHT

The key to playing doubles is learning to protect the entire court.

In doubles, you have six more feet of court space to cover and it is essential for the two partners to work together.

Basic strategy to the doubles game is simple—a doubles team should be the aggressor. There is a greater percentage of winning shots in doubles than there is in singles, and for this reason, it does not pay to be defensive.

If at all possible, a doubles team should try to gain control of the net. This allows the team to dictate the tempo of the game.

Many beginners are afraid of playing the net. They fear that their opponents will lob the ball over them. This is actually more of a problem in singles.

In doubles, when a lob is going over your head and you cannot reach it, it is the responsiblity of your partner to cut back to return the lob.

Your partner has a much better angle for returning the deep lob.

Obviously, when you and your partner are at the net and a lob is going over your partner's head, it is your job to return the lob.

It is crucial that you and your partner communicate. For instance, if you cannot reach a lob, you should let your partner know as soon as possible. Even if the shot is one you can return, you should call out "mine". The same is true on shots down the middle of the court. This will avoid collisions and lost points due to mix-ups.

If your partner is returning a lob that has gone over your head, do not just stand there and watch him hit it. Your partner has just left half of the court unprotected. It is your responsibility to cover his side of the court. When your partner returns the lob you will still have both sides of the court covered.

It does not hurt to let your partner know what you are doing. A simple "I'm over" or "cross" will suffice. Keep in mind that you have to communicate in order to work together. Doubles is a team sport.

Often I will see one player up at net and the other standing at the baseline. Although your ultimate objective is to get both players at net, you can play effectively this way if you follow one basic rule: the player at net should be on one side of the court and the player at the baseline should be on the other side.

Too often, I see a doubles team in an "I" formation (one player directly behind the other". This line-up leaves both side lines completely open and results in numerous lost points.

The distance you should stand from the net varies according to the particular situation. If you are on the attack you should be up close to the net. If, however, you have just hit a weak short shot, you should back away from the net. This at least gives you a chance to return a strong shot.

When your partner is serving, you should be very close to the net (the serve is an offensive weapon) and protecting the side line. This will enable you to hit a winning shot on a weak return of service.

When your partner is returning a serve, however, you should be standing on the service line (halfway back). If your partner hits a weak return, you can retreat to the baseline. On a strong return, you can still have time to get all the way up to the net.

Your basic singles strategy is also good doubles strategy, but the most important rule is still to keep the ball in play. Without consistency, all the other rules and strategies have little meaning.

CHARLEVOIX LITTLE League pitcher Scott Morgan tried his best against Petoskey last weekend in competition held here. Charlevoix was defeated 6 to 4.

V. Insurance Beats Guards

Village Insurance won a double header last week in men's slow pitch action defeating the Coast Guard 6-2 and Airport 13-5. The wins gave the Insurancemen a 7-3 record and moved them into a tie for fourth with Andy's Tire world.

Beane Archey's five hits and Miller's two home runs, one a grand slam, led the attack.

Village Insurance jumped out to a 4-0 lead in the first inning against Coast Guard. Archey led off the game with a double. Jim Moore tripled him home and Jeff Collins followed with a run scoring single. Don Blalock then walked. After Frank Hackett forced Collins at third, Mike Bartz singled home Blalock. Gary Balch walked and Jim Borths singled home Hackett for the fourth run.

Coast Guard made it a 4-2 ball game in the fourth on the strength of chuck Matter's two run homer, his fifth of the season. But that was the only attack Coast Guard muster all night as Gary Balch pitched a four-hitter.

Village Insurance added some insurance runs in the sixth. Three singles by Hackett, Bartz and Balch scored two runs.

Against Airport, Village Insurance again pounded out an early lead with 5 runs in the first. Miller's grand slam homer was the big blast.

Archey led off with a single. Moore was safe on an error and Blalock was walked. After Hackett single home Archey, Miller hit his grand slam.

Airport made it 5-2 in the top of the second. Ron Seworga singled and with two out, Tom Wanik hit a home run. This was Airport's only scoring until the seventh when the game was a rout.

Village Insurance added two runs in the second on Archey's bases loaded double and three more in the third on Miller's three run blast. That gave Miller seven RBI's in the game.

A single run in the fourth and Collins' two-run homer in the sixth ended the scoring for Village Insurance.

Four singles by Bill Meawin, Ron Seworga, Larry Skippergosh, and Steve McClenhan accounted for Airports three runs in the seventh, but the rally fell fur short.

Slow Pitch notes: The men's league still do not have a first round winner. Topside can clinch the first round with a win in their final make-up game. Should Topside lose the make-up, they would fall into a tie with the Shed and possible American Mold who have two make-up games to go.

Charlevoix Little League Loses To Petoskey, 4-6

The Charlevoix Little League Team, in a valiant try, gave the Petoskey Little Leaguers one of their best games of the area tournament here Saturday before the visitors won by a score of 6-4. Petoskey went on to win the tournament and advance to the district tourney at Indian River on Tuesday.

Jim Wareck was the winning pitcher as Petoskey scored six runs on 10 hits and committed no errors to win their opener Saturday.

However, the local youngsters with Scott Morgan on the mound came back in the third inning to tie the score 3-3 on runs by John Fiedorek, Al Burke and Gary Way.

Petoskey had scored one run in the first and two in the top of the third for a 3-0 lead before Charlevoix came back strong in the bottom of the third to knot the score.

It wasn't until the fifth inning that Petoskey got another run to go ahead. They added two more runs in the top of the sixth for the winning margin after Charlevoix managed only one run in the bottom of the sixth inning.

Charlevoix had four runs on five hits and committed three costly errors as they went down to defeat.

Morgan had two hits and Roxy VanLoo and Benny Shores one hit each for Charlevoix.

Dave Soblesky, Jerry Moore and Pat Robbins had two hits each, Dave Zmikly and Dave Speigl had one each and Wareck furthered his own cause with a home run.

In the final on Sunday Petoskey scored 11 runs on 13 hits and made two errors to defeat North Emmet who had four runs on six hits and no errors.

In the opening game North Emmet defeated East Jordan 11-1 and on Saturday shut out Boyne City 2-0 to advance to the finals.

Swans

"I got those swimming with them and catching them to band."

There are two "color phases" in the Michigan flock, the "Royal" and the "Polish". The "Royal" are characterized by black legs and feet. Their cygnets are brown with gray bills, moulting to white through their first winter. The "Polish" have tan legs and feet. Their cygnets are white with a tan bill. The two interbreed freely.

The Michigan Department of Natural Resources, which protects the swans, sells them to governmental organizations around the country. Current prices are $500 for a pair of "Royal" swans and $300 for a "Polish" pair.

Mr. Geiston catches them. He advises purchasers to pinion the swans–which is to cut the bone at the tip of the wing–lest they fly home.

"Every year some come back to us, because they haven't been pinioned," he says, "most recently from Canton, Illinois, I'm the one who recaptures them."

Elzinga said 80 percent of their fruit crop is disposed of in this manner with the exception of the tart and maruschino type cherries.

They have seven acres in tart cherries and eight leased acres in sweet cherries plus 200 Red Haven peach trees, 100 of which will produce this year, and pear trees that will yield approximately 50 bushels of the yellow, juicy fruit.

In addition to fruit, the Elzingas raise feeder cattle and the crops that supply the feed for them.

Also in the general area of Atwood are orchards owned by John Bascom of Norwood. The orchards all produce cherries and are almost equally divided among the tart and sweet varieties, all of which are sold at the processing plant.

The Shooks brothers farm, consists of 950 acres, a far cry from the 60 acres their father owned in the beginning some 65 years ago. Involved in the operation of the acreage with them are three sons and hired help.

Like the Elzingas, they also raise beef cattle. They have 300 head now and will likely have a total of 500 later this year. They raise all the grains and other feeds for the herd on the 350 acres devoted to this operation.

Cherries are their big crop, however.

Approximately 25 percent are in Gold Stark and Napoleon varieties which are utilized as maraschino cherries. They also have 10 acres of a new variety, the round Napoleon, which Marvin Shooks feels will be better for this use than the ones now favored. Approximately 12 acres are in plums, which, like the cherries, are sold to the processing plant.

The Shooks orchards are open to the "do it yourself" pickers. Mrs. Shooks said they welcome these people and have enjoyed having them in their orchards.

Cherry Shakers

Until the cherry shakers came along, they had as many as 200 migrant pickers. Though costly in the beginning, the shakers have replaced the migrants and have proven successful in the cherry orchards.

Shooks also mentioned not only the cost of fertilizer but the shortage of the nitrogen product, a derivlative of petroleum.

Commissioners isn't FIGHTING the State Tax Commission right along beside the Emmet County Board of Commissioners.

6. This calls for a realignment of priorities–If taxes aren't to be lowered than more funds should be channeled into our road system rather than buying airplanes for political supporters and air-conditioning for slightly used meeting chambers.

7. NO–This implies more concentration of power of which we already have an over-supply.

8. The District Court like most other matters can best be controlled locally.

9. Your question is not clear–Millage for what purpose? I cannot presently see where the County needs more funds unless it be for roads. It would be sensible in the light of sky-rocketing valuations on property to consider a County Wide Vote to lower the present 15 Mill tax bite.

10. Grandiose records in the County Planning Commission literature will reveal that this has already been considered. The present ferry adds quaintness to the locale. I feel natives and tourists alike appreciate it.

11. Who said a problem existed? We are most fortunate in having the only State licensed solid waste disposal in the county. I understand the cities of East Jordan and Boyne City have a problem which could be solved temporarily perhaps by negotiation with the local operator on Brock road.

At Cinema III

'Exorcist' Starts Tonight

Although exorcisms are still performed in the 20th century, modern scientists have sought more "rational" explanations and treatments for the symptoms of supposed possession.

Supporting Jesuit exorcist Father de Tonquedec's belief that most cases of possession reflect "a sick man's subconscious," psychiatrists have led this contemporary hunting expedition.

Charlevoix's Cinema III will be staging a Northern Michigan premiere of "The Exorcist" starting on July 24. Advanced tickets are suggested.

As far back as 1583, the Church has recognized that possession may simply be a form of mental illness. Would-be exorcists of that time were warned in the Acts of the Synod of Rheims that "the too credulous are often deceived, and...lunatics often declare themselves to be possessed and tormented by the devil; and these people nevertheless are far more in need of a doctor than an exorcist." The Rituale Romanorum, first published in 1614 at the order of Pope Paul V, now cautions against believing "too readily that a person is possessed by an evil spirit" rather than "suffering from some illness, especially one of a psychological nature."

In his 1923 essay, "The Neurosis of Demonical Possession in the Seventeenth Century," Sigmund Freud paved the way for much of this psychiatric analysis. In his opinion the Devil is a father substitute for those "who never have any luck...(or are) too poorly gifted, too ineffective to make a living and belong to that well-known type, the eternal suckling..Unable to tear themselves away from the joyous haven of the mother's breast, (they) hold fast all through their lives to their claim to be nourished by someone else."

Before shooting the film version of "The Exorcist," director William Friedkin and novelist-producer William Peter Blatty investigated such recent branches of medicine as psychosurgery, arteriography and pneumoencephalography. None of these methods of diagnosing and treating brain damage existed in 1949, when the actual case fictionalized by Blatty occurred in Mt. Rainier, Maryland. It is quite conceivable, according to both men, that such subsequent medical tools could have obviated that exorcism. Arteriography might have enabled physicians to discover a broken artery within the 14-year-old-boy's brain, and psychosurgery might have successfully treated his "possession."

Dr. Stanley Krioppner, now director of the Miamonedes Dream Laboratory, and Dr. Arthur Hastings, have postulated a theory of "Expectancy Set" that could explain not only cases of possession but other poltergeist phenomena. Summarized as "the readiness of an organism to make a particular response," the theory claims that "ghosts can be created by an expectancy set" if an individual's state of mind is sufficiently heightened to permit the misevaluation, distortion or misperception of natural phenomena. To illustrate the thesis, the doctors propose this simple experiment; "while walking home some dark evening, imagine that you are being followed. You will begin to notice noises behind you, sounds from bushes along your path, and dogs beginning to bark at shadows in back of you. The faster you walk, the worse it gets."

For all these research advances, however, many scientists concede that "unreal" spirits remain a distinct possibility Teilhard de Chardin, the Jesuit philosopher-paleontologist, once proposed that matter and spirit are but differing aspects of something else, some third fundamental reality in which matter and spirit commune. Modern pysicists now seem to lean toward a similar view as they learn more about the perplexing atom. The neutrino, for example, is known to be capable of speeding through a planetary thickness in a flash, yet it has no mass and no electrical charge. Lacking the fundamental properties of matter, the neutrino remains a ghost discovered by modern science.

Friske Dinner Attracts Many

Richard Friske, a candidate for the 103rd legislative seat, says he received nearly a $1,000 from the the dinner recently held in Charlevoix for his benefit.

Friske said they had sold over 200 tickets, with some 160 area residents attending the dinner.

At the fund raising dinner, the former state representotive criticized his opponent for allegedly taking campaign funds from the Michigan Education Association.

Friske also criticized his opponent for sponsoring the Land Use Bill and MEA closed shop bill.

When asked last weekend about the ouster of Charlevoix County Republican Chairman Bob Wise, Friske said that when Wise intiated a drive against him last election he was a hero.

But, now that Wise is trying to be fair, they get rid of him, Friske said.

"There is no fairness what so ever," he said.

"Mr. Wise, I believe, just wanted to be fair with the public."

Boss Urges City-Township Merger

"Why don't we completely abolish the present city and township governments and make a brand new city government?"

DALE BOSS

A Charlevoix businessman urged Charlevoix City Council Monday night to consider merging with Charlevoix Township and forming a new government.

The surprise recommendation from township resident Dale Boss came during discussion on how to control Charlevoix's Mt. McSauba located inside the township.

Even more surprising, the suggestion received a warm reaction from Mayor Ed Hansen and several city councilmen.

When the question was defeated by both township and city residents five years ago, Boss lead a township group opposing the move.

But, now he says if the unification between both the township and city was handled to provide equal representation to all, he will lead a drive to make it become reality.

No Representation

"The guys on the council at that time wanted to take us in and we would have no representation," he told the Charlevoix Courier following City Council.

"And we would still be operating under the antiquated Fourth Class City Act."

Boss claims the council at that time was only interested in stealing away the township's biggest taxpayer--Medusa Cement.

"So, it would have to be the same gang in power with double the valuation and old city power."

However, now with a completely new council, Boss thinks the situation is different.

New Government

"If all present elected officials of the City of Charlevoix and all present elected officials of the Township of Charlevoix were to resign and their offices dissolved, then a brand new charter could be drawn and people from the entire area could elect the officials to serve the new area," he said.

Boss suggests that then a mayor, manager or supervisor could be elected to operate the new area.

"If his performance was good, he would naturally be re-elected by the people at the next election," he continued.

Likewise, if his performance was poor, he would be defeated and someone else would be elected.

Not Annexation

Boss was careful to clarify that he was not supporting annexation of the township into the city, but rather the formation of a new government to convert the existing city and township boundaries.

City Attorney Don Berlage said that he thought it was doubtful legal tools were available to make such a move, rather it could be done through consolidation of the two governmental units.

However, Boss said he wanted neither annexation or consolidation, he wants a new government.

"I believe this would make the largest city in land area north of Grand Rapids with a tax base that could be adequate to do the necessary things that need to be done without duplications like there will be with the present set-up," he continued.

Boss was referring to a situation where the township and city both maintain separate fire departments and water systems, now even maybe sewage systems.

Building Inspectors

"There's going to have to be a building inspector to meet new mandatory state building codes," he said.

"One could do it instead of one for each government."

Boss said as a practical businessman he can see that Charlevoix could very easily become choked like Detroit with no where to grow.

"And Charlevoix Township, would be like Bloomfield Hills and Birmingham with increasing tax base and a lot of growing pains to keep up with the rapid growth transpiring in the township," he said.

"I feel if this marriage is put off very long, the chances of it ever happening are almost impossible."

Laborious Mechanics

While indicating the mechanics would be laborious, Mayor Ed Hansen said there is going to have to be some interconnection especially with water and sewage.

Councilman Ray Wood said that he had been considering the move for a long time and would favor consolidation.

Before Boss had suggested the move, Dick Mitchell presented city council with a petition telling them that recent accusations against dune buggies at Mt. McSauba were unfair.

"Do they go banning snowmobiles because they make noise?" he asked the council.

"No."

Mitchell also said that he doubted there were ever 22 dune buggies ever riding the dunes on the Mt. McSauba property located just north of the city in Charlevoix Township.

No One Run Over

"And I don't think anyone was almost run over," he replied to accusations made two weeks ago that vehicles were running over people lying on the beach.

Mitchell said there has been more problems created from trash being left by those who hold beach parties.

"It's getting to be that there's no place for motorized vehicles," he continued.

"I don't think I'm getting a fair shake."

Mitchell said that after being asked and then giving his city councilwoman some suggestions on how to cope with vehicles nothing was done.

He said for example perhaps a curfew could be enforced in the park area, but first the city should decide what the park is to be used for.

He asked how the city could ban motorized vehicles because he didn't think they were destroying the sand dunes any more than natural elements.

Too Much Money

"I know myself, I don't tie up money in this way to abuse it," he said.

Dwight Boss, who joined Mitchell in addressing the council said much of the problem lies in police protection.

"Our police protection in the county is a joke," he said.

He explained how after calling the county sheriff to stop people from sleeping on his front lawn, he ended up calling the state police.

"The parties I don't mind, it's the drag races at 4 a.m. that I mind," he said.

He suggested that trash barrels also be placed on the property and picked up regularly.

"And if that woman can find 22 dune buggies in this town, I'll buy them all," he said.

In other business, the council:

–Indicated they would issue a cease and desist order to the Dunes Condominiums telling them to take down the partially constructed car ports located in front of the building. It violates the zoning ordinance.

Island Historical Group Offers Reward For Stolen Chase Plaque

By BOB CLOCK

ST. JAMES – The Beaver Island Historical Society has offered a reward of $25 for information leading to the return of a solid copper plaque marking the spot where David Chase was killed in a logging train accident 67 years ago.

A. J. Roy, curator of the Beaver Island Historical Museum, says the plaque had been in place only about a month when it was stolen during the first week of July. The plaque was worth about $75.

The marker was 14 inches long and nine inches high and was affixed to a post next to a wooden cross first erected at the scene of the accident by the late "Dr." Feodor Protar, the island's fabled backwoods medic.

A close friend of the doctor, Chase was killed when a locomotive used to haul logs from the south end of the island to St. James jumped the tracks and overturned.

Chase, the engineer, was the only casualty.

The accident occured Good Friday, April 17, 1907, about five miles southwest of St. James. The tracks have since been pulled up and the railroad right-of-way has become overgrown with wild juniper and hearty stands of hardwoods and pine.

Dr. Protar, who witnessed the derailment from a nearby boulder where he often went to read, marked the spot where his friend died with a cross.

Mrs. Sybil Larsen, a lifelong resident of St. James, recalls that the first year Dr. Protar painted the cross red, symbolic of the tragedy. The following year he painted it black as a sign of mourning. The third year he painted it white as a memorial to his friend.

Dr. Protar repainted and replaced the cross several times before his own death in 1925. Since then, islanders have made it a practice to keep the cross freshly painted and in good repair, although it stands near a little traveled roadway in a sparsely populated section of the island.

However, it wasn't until this year that the plaque was cast, telling the story of Chase's misfortunate accident and Dr. Protar's devotion to the memory of his friend.

The doctor himself is buried across the road from the cross in a fieldstone enclosure painstakingly erected by his former patients.

The doctor's old two-story log home nearby also has been the target of vandals this summer. Two weeks ago, the front door of the ancient structure was forced open and a kitchen chair with a cane seat was stolen.

Built in the 1850's, the home has been preserved virtually as it was when Dr. Protar died almost a half-century ago, thanks to the efforts of island residents. In recent years it was acquired by the Beaver Island Historical Society.

Born in Russia in 1837 of artistocratic parents, Dr. Protar was exiled to Siberia by the czarist government as a young man because of his liberal views. He escaped from prison in the guise of a Catholic priest, studied in Germany and eventually migrated to the United States where he published a German language newspaper in Rock Island, Ill. Although he wasn't a medical doctor, he had a life-long interest in medicine and was an avid reader of medical journals.

Big Venetian Crowd

Tori Alger Selected As Queen

By FRAN MARTIN

Tori Alger, 18, a petite hazel-eyed blonde, was named 1974 Venetian Queen to reign over the weekend festivities and to represent Charlevoix during the coming year. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Alger.

The Queen's Pageant to name a successor to the 1973 Queen, Carole Pence, launched one of the most successful Venetian Festivals in recent years.

Winning places of honor in the Queen's court were Gwyn Durr, 19, who was doubly honored when she was named second runner up and Miss Congeniality, the latter by her peers. Lt. Col. and Mrs. William R. Durr, Jr., are her parents.

Shelly Warner, 17, was selected first runner-up and will serve as queen in the event Queen Tori cannot fill the post. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leland Warner.

Janet Begrow, who was a top favorite with the crowd with her presentation of "All for the Best", a musical routine from the sound track of "Godspell" was the talent winner. She is the daughter of Mrs. Patricia Begrow and Harold Jack Begrow.

Other candidates were Mary Kayner, daughter of the Richard Kayners; Trish Durr, daughter of Lt. Col. and Mrs. Durr; Faith Malpeli, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Malpeli, and Sylva Ruble, daughter of CPO and Mrs. Fred L. Ruble.

Carole Pence, the retiring Venetian Queen, crowned her successor, Queen Tori, a recent Charlevoix high school graduate who plans to enroll at Central Michigan University this fall. She also presented her with a bouquet of red roses. As queen, Tori received a cash scholarship, gift certificates and other prizes donated by 52 local businesses and industries.

Other winners received their ribbons, cash awards and flowers from their counterparts in 1973. Patti Warner was present to pass on the Miss Congeniality honors to Gwyn Durr; Carole Pence to present the talent winner award to Janet Begrow; Maureen Wallace, the second runner-up award to Gwyn Durr and Candy Klooster, the first runner-up award to Shelly Warner.

The Queen's pageant opened with a group presentation of the candidates presenting a song and dance routine, "Consider Yourself" from "Oliver".

Talent choices included the presentation of the poem, "Winnie the Pooh" by Gwyn Durr; an organ solo, "Ebb Tide" by Mary Kayner; a trombone solo featuring a medley of tunes from around the world by Sylvo Ruble; a reading, "Am I ridiculous?" by Queen Tori; an original presentation entitled "Love" which included a reading and vocal selection with guitar accompaniment by Trish Durr; the winning talent presentation, "All for the Best" from the sound track of State Appropriation

Island Becomes A Park

By FRAN MARTIN

The acquisition of the Fisherman's Island tract located south of here along Lake Michigan moved closer to becoming a reality this week with the announcement that the State Legislature had appropriated funds to underwrite the purchase.

The announcement follows more than seven years of work by environmentalists and others who have labored to save one of the remaining pieces of natural Lake Michigan shoreline in the area.

The property includes 475 acres and 1.5 miles of shoreline plus Fisherman's Island which lies a short distance offshore and is an estimated seven to 14 acres in size. Most of the shoreline property is in its natural state with huge sand dunes and a rugged, uncleared wooded areas.

The property extends from the southern boundary of the Bell's Bay State Forest Camp Ground to the Clipperview subdivision to the south.

It is presently owned by Robert Fries of Birmingham and John W. Fitzer, Jr., of Detroit with whom the Department of Natural Resources is presently negotiating.

The former owners were planning to develop the property, had staked out lots and had started construction of a road to the area when the state, through the DNR, began negotiations to acquire the property.

The property acquisition will give the DNR 3.4 miles of Lake Michigan shoreline and 928 acres of undeveloped property north of Clipperview.

The DNR already owns 1,344 acres and 2.9 miles of shoreline that extends from Norwood north to the Clipperview Subdivision.

Final plans for the properties have not been completed, but it is expected to follow a management plan drawn up by Jack Lockwood, area forester here until recently, which calls for both pieces of property to remain in a wilderness-like or rustic state and under the management of the DNR. Access to both pieces of property will be by access roads constructed for this purpose.

The Clipperview property will remain in its present state and will in no way be involved in the developments of the state lands.

The developers who had acquired the property earlier purchased 100 acres plus Fisherman's Island from the late Clark Coulter for $28,000 and the remaining acreage in the tract for $73,000 before selling an 80-acre piece to the Medusa Cement Co.

It has been through the efforts of Glen Sheppard, editor of the conservation publication, Northwood Call, who started the campaign to save the Fisherman's Island tract some seven years ago; Ernest Olney who circulated countless petitions; Kenneth A. Staley, District 14 Commissioner, Sen. Robert Davis, Dr. John Tanton of Petoskey, and countless other environmentalists who stormed Washington and Lansing to save the property for the people.

The Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners will hold their August meeting on Monday, August 12, instead of Wednesday, August 14, their regular meeting date.

Horton Bay Church Dedicated

A white frame Horton Bay church warmed the hearts of many people Sunday as the congregation dedicated its new education wing and sanctuary.

Several hundred members and friends packed the small Horton Bay United Methodist Church Sunday morning.

"This is the moment we have been waiting for for a long time," Rev. Seward Walton said at the beginning of the service.

The stocky minister then recognized those involved in the building program that cost nearly $68,000.

Though a simple dedication ceremony, it brought back fond memories for long-standing members.

While many of the original members were unable to attend, letters were read from persons all over the world who had had contact with the church during its existence.

The Horton Bay Church was organized in 1896 as part of a circuit which included North Bay, Epsilon and Petoskey. The present church was built in 1898 while the congregation was under the direction of the Rev. Warren Brown.

Through the years, the congregation has been affiliated with several church groups, including an evangelical sect, which, through mergers, became the Evangelical United Brethren Church, and finally, the present United Methodist Church.

The North Bay and Horton Bay congregations were served by one pastor for many years. In 1968 the two congregations united to worship in the larger Horton Bay Church.

Names of charter members of the Horton Bay and North Bay churches are among those still familiar in Bay Township: Mr. and Mrs. Hartley White, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Koteskey, Mrs. Ben West, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Coleman, Mrs. Charles (Rede) Koteskey, Mrs. Charles (Mary) Crouterfield, Mr. and Mrs. John Karcher, Mr. and Mrs. John Brecheisen, John Stoody, Conrad Voelker, William Genshaw, Paul Johnecheck and Martin Friend.

Mrs. Crouterfield still lives in Horton Bay and was present at Sunday's services.

Who Will You Select In The August 6 Primaries?

Next Tuesday is Primary Election Day.

Voters will have a chance to cast ballots for their choice of Governor, Representative in Congress, State Senator, Representative in State Legislature, County Commissioner, Township Officers (in out-city areas), Judges of the Court of Appeals, and Judge of the Circuit Court.

In addition, there will be a ballot to nominate Delegates to County Conventions, both Republican and Democratic, and, in some areas, Propositions.

In the light of political unrest throughout the country, it is expected that the vote will be heavier than in the usual off-year primaries.

For the first time in several years, there are Democratic candidates for County Commissioner in most Districts, and even in the townships, more than the usual number of candidates are seeking office.

On the Republican side of the ballot, there are no contests for Governor or Representative in Congress, but there are two-way races for State Senator and Representative in State Legislature, 103rd District.

On the Democratic side, there is a three-way contest for Governor, a two-way contest for Representative in Congress, and a two-way contest for State Senator.

On the judicial ballot, 12 candidates seek a seat on the Court of Appeals, and there are three candidates for the judgeship of the local Circuit Court.

Almost of all the county's 15 district commissioners are being challenged in the primaries this year.

Only Delbert Ingalls of Ellsworth (District 1) and Don Meggison of Charlevoix (District 13) are not involved in contests.

In District 2, incumbent Clyde Cunningham of Charlevoix is being challenged by Republican Willis Peters. Robert Wasoski is the Democratic candidate.

Clayton Smith, Charlevoix's District 3 candidate, is being challenged for his seat by Donna Jane Dove and John Haggard, both Republicans. Primary candidate for the Democrats is Tusco Heath.

Incumbent Republican Ira (Bob) Davis of Horton Bay is running unchallenged, but has Democrat Donna Van Dorn to face after the primaries.

In District 5, Republican Aaron Brock is challenging incumbent Ralph Richardson. Democrats seeking the position include John E. Vrondran and Karl Waldner.

In other races in the Charlevoix Courier circulation area, incumbent Thora Kotowich of East Jordan (District 8) is running unchallenged in the Republican primary, but will face Democrat Melvin Niswander of East Jordan in November.

Incumbent Republican Barney Milstein (District 9) also runs unchallenged in August, but faces Democrat Patricia Betz in November.

In District 14, Ken Staley runs unopposed in the Republican primary, but faces Oscar Ward, a Democrat, in November.

Incumbent Republican Lee Moerland is being challenged by Theodore Browe, Jr. in the Republican primary for the District 15 race.

The polls will be open in each precinct from 7:00 a.m. to 8:00 p.m.

Walloon Lake and Lake Charlevoix Have No Unusaual Boating Problems

By Peg Ohle

There are no unusual boating problems on either Lake Charlevoix or Walloon Lake, according to the State Department of Natural Resources.

This report was made recently to County Clerk Clarence Rabach following a study of mooring and boating problems on the lakes.

Request for the study was made last summer by the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners through the County Planning Commission.

As part of the investigation a public hearing was held in Charlevoix which drew a small attendance and at which very few boating problems were presented.

The D.N.R. also made an on-site evaluation in which two investigators surveyed the lakes by boat during several days of peak activity.

"They found no unusual boating problems," the report states. "There were violations of current laws noted."

Despite the findings of the D.N.R., the Planning Commission has received many complaints from area residents.

Homeowners on and near Oyster Bay on Lake Charlevoix have complained about the number of boats going in and out of the Narrows area.

Ironton residents have expressed concern about the speed of boats in the Narrows and the damage caused by wakes.

The number of boats on Walloon Lake is considered a real problem by home-owners around the lake. Township officials have talked about setting up boating use hours. If this is done, the townships would be responsible for the regulations and they would be enforced either by local constables or by the county Sheriff's Department.

Such regulations might restrict the use of certain types of boats to designated hours, perhaps small fishing boats to the early morning hours and sail boats to the time of day when the winds are best.

Another approach might be to designate certain zones of the lake for certain purposes.

Anthony Barone, president of the Lake Charlevoix Property Owners' Association, says that no such measures have been considered by his group.

Summing up their findings in the report, the D.N.R. states, "Lake Charlevoix and Walloon Lake are broad expanses of water with adequate room for all boating activities to take place without crowded unsafe conditions. There was a complaint made to us regarding the scarcity of law enforcement; this was not in the form of a complaint as to quality, but quantity. Persons interviewed expressed concern over the amount of water to be covered by the people assigned.

"Our principal overall recommendation would be for the people on the lakes to cooperate with the sheriff in bringing violations and unsafe practices to his attention," the report concludes.

On August 6

Marion Considers Road Proposal

Marion Township residents will be considering a two-mill tax levy to improve township roads when they head for the polls on Aug. 6.

The millage, if approved by voters, would be collected over the next three years and support a road program recently developed by a study committee organized by the township board.

The committee, which held four meetings including one with the Charlevoix County Road Commission, has drafted a tenative five-year-plan for improvement after studying the mileage and conditions of existing roads.

Township officials said that present township income cannot cover the cost of road construction and are asking for the millage.

Basic improvements would include cutting some steep grades as well as tar and chipping others and filling others to make a more solid road and to prevent high water problems.

Roads to be improved would include Klooster, Phelps, Vienstra, Warner, Wickersham and Black.

Exercise Your Rights And Vote On August 6

In recent months, people have been loud in denouncing their public officials.

From Washington to state capitals, from county seats to town halls there is an awareness of the public's growing discontent with the work being done by elected public officials.

It is not only what they are doing but how they are doing it. There is a general feeling of mistrust, a feeling that elected public officials are working not for their constituents but for their own financial gains and glory.

Gone are the days when it was considered an honor to be a public servant and one served in that capacity for the good he could do.

Today, government is big business. Those we elect receive substantial salaries, and, unlike any other business, they have the right to raise those salaries.

There seems to be a lack of communication between most elected public officials and the people who elected them. Even in these days of electronic miracles they don't seem to be able to hear or see.

However, there is one thing that public officials do hear and see, even feel, It is the voice of the voter at the polls.

There is a primary election on August 6 for several national, state and county offices.

Every eligible voter who does not cast a ballot that day relinquishes his right to complain about "what the government is doing".

Kelley Praised for Fight Against Project

Attorney General Kelley's announced plans to go to court to stop the federal government from spraying a potent herbicide on timberlands in Ontongan County is good news.

The Forest Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture intends to spray 100 acres by helicopter with the defoliant 2 4-5T.

The Trichloroopenoxyacetic Acid is a potent herbicide capable of destroying wide varieties of vegetation and was used by the Prosecuting Attorney James Jenkins of Ontonagon County is scheduled to proceed on August 1.

The purpose of the project, according to the Forest Service, is to destroy hardwood trees, particularly Maple and Oak, so as to increase the growth rate of the spruce and red pine species which are regarded, by the Forest Service, as being more commercially valuable.

However, the federal government has not filed an environmental impact statement as required by law.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture has already taken the position against use of 2-4-5T, issuing notice of cancellation to take it off the market issued to Dow Chemical.

If this is the case, we agree with Kelley that a more serious look should be made at the project.

The Church Is Still Alive

The Church is still alive.

Or at least it is doing very well in Horton Bay these days.

Last Sunday, the Horton Bay United Methodist Church held a service of celebration and consecration for its new education wing and remodeling of the main structure.

The overflowing crowd brought back memories of what it used to be like, but during recent years the Church has been suffering with low attendance.

However, this certainly hasn't been the case in Horton Bay.

The Church was first organized in 1896 and through the years has been served by 18 ministers.

While the community has been through many economic struggles, the Horton Bay Methodist Church has seemed to survived them.

The congregation seems to consist of a proud people who certainly showed their strength with the addition of a new educational wing and remodeling of their sanctuary.

They've made the impossible become possible.

However, their job has just began.

It takes more than a new building to be a strong Church and we're sure the Horton Bay United Methodist Church realizes it also.

In a time when the Church appears to no longer be the vogue thing to do, we hope churches like the one in Horton Bay stay strong to their commitments.

Charlevoix Register of Deeds Defends Republican Actions

July 25, 1974

Editor
Charlevoix Courier
Charlevoix, Michigan

Dear Editor:

I would like very much to reply to Mr. Peters' letter of last week. I have but one question to ask Mr. Peters. Does he honestly, in his own mind, believe that a man who was elected to the State Legislature for one term as a Republican then ran again as a Republican in the next Primary election and was defeated and then switched to the American Independent Party for the General election and ran against a Republican, can justly be called a good Republican?

In regards to Mr. Wise, I feel that in his actions with Mr. Friske that he was not carrying out the wishes of the County Party from the stand they had taken two years before. That action was that Mr. Friske was written out of the Party. This did not mean just for that one election. Mr. Wise was chairman when this action was taken and should not have, as Chairman, acted as he did.

Mr. Peters states that we are not good Republicans when we will not listen to a man that was disinfranchised by the Party because of his jumping of party lines and other actions. Mr. Friske could not work with either the Republican or Democratic Legislators when he was in Office and I doubt that he has changed that much. Just because a person can, under present State Laws, file as a candidate on any Party does not mean that he is a good and loyal member of that Party.

The instance with Mr. Friske was just one of the reasons that Mr. Wise was removed. I believe that Mr. Peters was present at the meeting and if he was very attentive he knows the rest of the reasons.

Yours truly,
Grover C. Geneit

Clockwise

By Bob Clock

There is a continuing battle at our house over the relative merits of the trappings of civilization.

"Trappings", I think, is a good word for them because they are traps by which we all are caught in this age of gimmicks and gadgets.

As you know, if you survey this corner with any frequency, the Clocks are spending the summer in St. James on Beaver Island. Our home is not a summer cottage but a bonafide year-'round residence that has been occupied winter and summer since the Mormons departed these hallowed shores.

The owners, unfortunately, have been caught in the trap of modern "trappings", although there is mute evidence on all sides that there was a time when life was more simple for the good people who lived within these four walls.

In the backyard, for example, is an outdoor john that was an integral part of the plumbing system until a modern bathroom was installed some years ago. Today the john is abandoned. It lists forelornly to the southwest and the door is slightly ajar as in invitation to itinerant animals seeking shelter from the wind and rain. It is virtually inaccessible to human beings because it is surrounded by a stand of wild raspberry bushes.

I can assure you that this primitive sanitary facility never overflowed because a child deposited a yo-yo in its innards. And it never ceased to function properly because of an insufficient water supply. Furthermore it never had to be scrubbed with cleansers and detergents. A handful of woodash down the hole once or twice a week kept it in perfect operating condition.

In fact, sanitarians have told me that the outdoor john is a well-nigh perfect means of waste disposal since there is slim chance of contaminating nearby waterways or anything else if it is constructed properly on the right type of soil.

In another one of our outbuildings is an electrically operated pump that is supposed to maintain an even pressure of 40 pounds per square inch. At least when the gauge hits 40, the pump shuts off. Though a system of underground pipes, the pump and pressure system feed the house.

Now this seems like a pretty efficient type of waterworks until you realize that during periods of prolonged power failure you are without water completely. You are in the same predicament when the pulley comes loose, the belt slips or any one of a hundred mechanical calamities takes place.

Sometimes when I go into the shed to find out why we don't have any water my eye lights on a small discarded pitcher pump lying on the floor that served former residents in years past. I can assure you they never ran out of water so long as they had strong arms to work the handle. Or unless the well went dry.

I wish I had a pail of water from that pitcher pump right now–and a dipper to drink it from.

Inside the house, an oil space heater has been grafted into the old chimney that once served to vent a wood-burning parlor stove. Only we can't use the space heater because the electric controls caught fire the other day all by themselves and the house filled with blue smoke before I had a chance to pull the plug. We called a repairman in to survey the damage. He says the fire was in the transformer but he doesn't know if he can get another because the company has gone out of business.

In the meantime, we are keeping our fingers crossed that the weather continued warm and balmy. We'd just have to shiver our way through a cold snap.

Judy says I am a nut about the good old days because I was a boy in those ancient times and my recollections are colored by the euphoria of youth. Which, of course, is nonsense. Life was easier and a lot more pleasant when you didn't have so many of the trappings of civilization to keep you in a dither.

And that't the truth, so help me Henry Thoreau.

"Fudgie" Reminds Year 'Round Residents They Pay Taxes

Dear Year-around residents of Charlevoix.

I too am a taxpayer of this lovely city. My taxes are not figured on how much time I spend here but just the same as your taxes are figured - on a year around basis.

Only I do not use your schools, library, park, beaches, playgrounds, roads, and other facilities on a year-round basis - just 2 months out of the year.

I resent being told because my face is not familiar to you (my tax-bill is familiar on your tax-rolls) that I shouldn't be using your facilities because you are a taxpayer and I am not. My home here is maintained by spending my dollars year around to painters, plumbers, gardeners, carpenters, masons and storekeepers whose children embarrass my children by shouting out "Fudgie's" to them on the beaches and streets.

Your "Fudgie" Taxpayer

Stumping the Woods

...With Ollie O. Stump jr.

Neighboring cattle drivers would organize a pool to share this obligation; gaining additional 'liberty' for each member by rotating their duty days like a division aboard ship. This instantaneous grasp of a problem and its solution by children requires detailed explanation to adults who outgrow this trait by higher education.

Six cows (6) divided by nine (9) children equal three! This simple formula gave each child the duty every third day. Impossible, say the slide rule and computer; to these mathematical wonders perhaps but not to those kids who drove two cows home, their own and that of a neighbor.

Family pastures were generally adjoining. The first cow would be led out and driven to the next stop where it would be tied to a fence post while the second one would be rounded up. Both would plod homeward instinctively, to be met at the alley by the master or mistress on lookout.

The herder always carried a stout businesslike stick to drive off the occasional dog bent on harassment and it was odd to witness a pigtailed lass, who would be frightened by a mouse, put flight to a hostile hound which outweighed her.

This loosely knit local MMPA was a far cry from the gleaming tank trucks and modern dairy farms of today and may prompt murmurs of sympathy for those hardy souls out of the past, but if you question any still living their only complaint will be about far greater difficulties now in 1974.

Drawing milk while sitting on a stool in the barn was far less exhausting than trying to tap these newfangled waxed cartons with arthritic fingers.

Parents tend to become exasperated at the snails pace with which teenagers carry out an errand, getting milk from the store three blocks away for example. If they walk, they poke along thru Cronkite's newscast. If they bike, they pedal thru the news and Mission Impossible. If you hand over the car keys to speed delivery, the milk arrives during the second commercial of the nine o'clock movie.

Grandmothers, particularly those from rural and small town origins, tend to be more empathetic as they recall their childhood. When they went on the same errand, their mothers could 'wait till the cows came home' as the saying so aptly puts it. There is one notable difference to be considered; in those earlier times the milk was brought home in the original container

Bessie, with bell tinkling and tail swishing off flies, carried the milk with leisurely gait from the outlying pasture to the barn in town from early Spring to late Fall, chaperoned in rotation by each child in the family upon reaching the age of ten.

Each morning, before school when it was in session, the youngster would escort the cow to pasture, to be fetched back late in the afternoon to be milked and kept in the barn overnite. Like present day newsboys, neighborhood youngsters swapped this chore when conflicting activities required. Bargaining within the family added further flexibility to the system which, incidentally, imposed equal rights upon the fair sex.

This lunch felt different

The public relations director of a local bank took me to lunch, which is not an unusual thing. Businesses frequently seek favors from newspapers through the time-honored custom of buying the editor some food and booze. As a completely corruptible freeloader, I love it.

But this lunch was different. This public relations director is named Judy. She is a doll–but I probably shouldn't say that.

What I mean is, the president of the same bank also buys my lunch upon occasion–at the A & W Root Beer stand. Rod is a presentable fellow, decently groomed and well shod. But it would never occur to me to describe him as a doll.

Likewise, if I had a luncheon date with Rod, I wouldn't have to explain it to my wife. She would never ask, "What were you doing with Rod at the A & W yesterday?

But somehow I felt it was necessary to tell her beforehand that Judy had invited me to a business lunch and we'd probably eat it in a local restaurant because I'd never seen Judy carrying a lunch pail.

All of which proves I must make some adjustments before I'll feel comfortable in this new world of Women's Lib.

Don't get me wrong. I think women suffer from shameful discrimination, especially in the business world. To get a "man's job," a woman usually must work twice as hard as a man for half the pay. Too often you hear the expression: "That's good pay for a woman." Which sounds like a plantation owner explaining his employee has it pretty good for a slave.

But old habits are hard to shed. For instance, Judy paid the luncheon tab. Geez. She stood in line, waiting to pay the cashier, while I waited at the door with several women who were also waiting–for their husbands. I felt like a cheapskate. "Listen," I explained to one woman, "That's really my money she's using. I'm not paying the bill myself because I'm afraid the girl running the cash register will ask me where I've been all her life. It was bad enough when the waitress pinched me."

And what about car doors? My mother brought me up to open them for women. But Judy was driving. She picked me up at my office, she chose the restaurant and she paid the bill. She had done everything Rod would have done. Would I open the door for him? How do I know? He always takes me to a drive-in. Life sure does get tedious.

I finally compromised. I opened her door but I let her slam it. Kissinger would have been proud.

One last but extremely important point: It is not only men who must adjust to an equal world where it is stupid to blink when she asks him to dinner. Some women have a lot to learn, too....

Four females who work in my office were in that restaurant when Judy and I walked in. They fell out of their chairs looking for my wife and Judy's husband. When the search proved fruitless, the intensity of their conversation increased noticeably as their sandwiches turned stale. Later, back in the office, one of them demanded an explanation. (I told her Judy had lost an election bet.)

You get the point. If I'd been lunching with Rod, those women would hardly have looked up from their mashed potatoes–unless Rod had run over them.

Moral: In an equal society, sex should be irrelevant when you are having public relations with a public relations director.

Huh?

Meet Charlevoix

Meet Jim Fitzgerald

Charlevoix Courier columnist Jim Fitzgerald was interviewed recently by Dearborn Heights reporter Mike Miller. They discussed Lapeer, where Fitz is the editor, Terrible Jean and race relations. The interview was published in the Dearborn Heights Leader and Ledger newspapers. It follows here.

MILLER: Where do you get the ideas for your column?

FITZ: Everywhere. Every so often it happens that I haven't got an idea and I thumb through newspapers until something strikes me. They call me Jack the Ripper because as I read the papers if something strikes me I tear it out and stick it in my shirt pocket. When I get to the office it goes into a file that's five inches fat. When it's time to write the column I'll go through the file until something strikes me. It's either that or something that happens at home, family stuff.

MILLER: Do you relly have a sister, Terrible Jean?

FITZ: Oh sure, she lives in Southfield. I've got lots of sisters and one that lives fairly near Dearborn and Dearborn Heights, in Garden City. I've got four sisters scattered all over. There is a Terrible Jean, you can bet on it.

I got a letter from the Pontiac paper. They had received a letter for me that was addressed simply to Terrible Jean's brother on the envelope. The postal service delivered it. I told her that I'm making her famous.

MILLER: We received a letter at Leader Publications in reference to one of your columns a few months back. The letter said something to the effect that you preach on race relations from a northern, rural, small town, all-white stronghold without having to deal with blacks. How would you react to that?

FITZ: That's a commonplace reaction. Their point is I don't live there so I don't know what I'm talking about.

I've been in downtown Detroit more often than a lot of people living in suburbs of Detroit. My four sisters all live in Detroit suburbs and they don't go to Detroit half as much as I do. I go to Detroit all the time.

But, that's not really a good answer because I really don't live there.

I used to live in bigger cities and work in factories and know all sorts of people and it's true we don't have even a handful of blacks in Lapeer but this is where I live and this is where I work.

MILLER: I know a number of people myself, young adults, who haved lived in Detroit suburbs all their lives and have never seen downtown Detroit.

FITZ: It's a great town for barflying, going to shows, ball games and crap like that. Detroit is where it's at.

I think I got going on the racial deal a long time ago when I was in the Army. I personally became aware of the terrible discrimination that was worse then than it is now.

They had separate everything. I was an assistant chaplain and they even had separate churches. I thought that was very Christian-like. It's true. They had a church for the blacks on the back of the post. It really bugged me so when I finally got around to writing, I did write about it. And still do pretty regularly. I try not to get preachy about it, but every once in a while something will bug me.

I think criticism of my racial attitudes in the column is the most common bitch I get from the Detroit area.

MILLER: When do you do your best writing?

FITZ: It's always at the same time because it's just a sideline with me. I'm just the editor here and I work 50 to 60 hours a week, sometimes.

I never work more than two hours on a column. I told myself years ago and I tell the people who work for me that if you can't write a column in two hours, forget it. And that two hours always comes on Wednesday morning. It usually stretches more than that because I never can write a column without being interrupted about 16 times.

MILLER: How much of what you write in your column is the honest-to-goodness truth?

FITZ: Everything I write in the column is based on fact. My style is obviously exaggerated. Terrible Jean really isn't terrible. But there's always a basis in fact. I'm always trying to make a point.

There are a lot of goofy things that happen. I remember a long time ago I mentioned in a column that my wife was a wicker-wacky and said that we even had a wicker chair in the shower and friends would say, "Well, that can't be the truth." So I'd take them to the shower and show them. It's not as far-fetched as you'd think.

MILLER: Why are you locked away in a little town like Lapeer?

FITZ: Years ago the opportunity was at big city daily newspapers. I went down for an interview in the editorial offices at the Free Press for a position writing editorials and I got lost between Hudson's and the Free Press. I joke that that's not why I'm working for a daily but the truth is that money talks.

I came to the Lapeer County Press in 1951, straight from Michigan State College. I had a uncle who's dead now, who was an Associated Press writer and later a p.r. man for Michgan Bell. So I had an offer from AP and one from here at the same time. They both paid a resounding $50 a week and I would've probably taken the AP offer but my uncle advised me to come here because I would eventually make more and learn more.

And I did. I was ad manager here for 10 years. I sold advertising. Once I started here, of course I liked it or I would've gone somewhere else.

Through the years I got offers from the Free Press and other places but I preferred to use them as wedges to get raises here.

Now I participate in the paper's ownership. I've been here for 24 years. I wouldn't make enough money anywhere else.

MILLER: How did you start syndicating your column?

FITTZ: It's like topsy, it just grew. My column was started to help me to sell ads. If I wrote about the merchants, they might be more inclined to my advertising so I named it Along The Main Stem. Great name. The idea was that after making the advertising rounds I would come back to the office and write sweet things about the merchants and then when I went back they would buy ads. I think I wrote about two columns along those lines and they made me throw-up, they were so bad. So I started throwing little funnies in and opinions and saying what I wanted to say and pretty soon it wasn't that type of column at all. That started in

VOTERS OF CHARLEVOIX COUNTY:

I need your support if you are going to elect a Charlevoix County resident CIRCUIT JUDGE for the FIRST TIME in over FIFTY YEARS. You probably won't get a second chance for another generation!!!

What do YOU want to know beyond my need for your vote? I was born and raised in Michigan. I worked my way through college with a 40 hour per week night job. My law school degree was earned by attending nights while working 44 hours a week. Since opening my office in Charlevoix County in 1961, hard work has built a successful practice and, if elected, I will work just as hard as your Circuit Judge.

As a resident of Charlevoix County, I have given freely of my time to community efforts, my earnings to community projects and my blood (over a gallon of it) to our blood drives. I hope you will agree my track record is one of performance--not promise.

Even though endorsed by Charlevoix County, the Governor did not favor me with an appointment when the Emmet County Judge retired so the designation of Judge or incumbent with its vote gathering benefit will not appear beneath my name on the ballot or in connection with radio or newspaper advertising--not even in the free publicity that has filled our newsprint and airways since the June appointment. In the past, I have been endorsed for a Judgeship by both Democrats and Republicans. That's about as NON-PARTISAN as a candidate could be when seeking a non-partisan Judgeship.

No individual or association, fraternal or religious organization or group of lawyers has contributed a dime to my campaign or confederated to assure my election. This advertisement and all others you read or hear between now and the Primary on August 6th will be paid for out of my savings. If Charlevoix County is going to elect their man--I am their only candidate for Circuit Judge. Only a UNITED EFFORT by all Charlevoix County Voters will give us the Judgeship you should want as much as I do.

Exercise Your Rights And Vote On August 6

In recent months, people have been loud in denouncing their public officials.

From Washington to state capitals, from county seats to town halls there is an awareness of the public's growing discontent with the work being done by elected public officials.

It is not only what they are doing but how they are doing it. There is a general feeling of mistrust, a feeling that elected public officials are working not for their constituents but for their own financial gains and glory.

Gone are the days when it was considered an honor to be a public servant and one served in that capacity for the good he could do.

Today, government is big business. Those we elect receive substantial salaries, and, unlike any other business, they have the right to raise those salaries.

There seems to be a lack of communication between most elected public officials and the people who elected them. Even in these days of electronic miracles they don't seem to be able to hear or see.

However, there is one thing that public officials do hear and see, even feel, It is the voice of the voter at the polls.

There is a primary election on August 6 for several national, state and county offices.

Every eligible voter who does not cast a ballot that day relinquishes his right to complain about "what the government is doing".

Kelley Praised for Fight Against Project

Attorney General Kelley's announced plans to go to court to stop the federal government from spraying a potent herbicide on timberlands in Ontongan County is good news.

The Forest Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture intends to spray 100 acres by helicopter with the defoliant 2 4-5T.

The Trichloroopenoxyacetic Acid is a potent herbicide capable of destroying wide varieties of vegetation and was used by the Prosecuting Attorney James Jenkins of Ontonagon County is scheduled to proceed on August 1.

The purpose of the project, according to the Forest Service, is to destroy hardwood trees, particularly Maple and Oak, so as to increase the growth rate of the spruce and red pine species which are regarded, by the Forest Service, as being more commercially valuable.

However, the federal government has not filed an environmental impact statement as required by law.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture has already taken the position against use of 2-4-5T, issuing notice of cancellation to take it off the market issued to Dow Chemical.

If this is the case, we agree with Kelley that a more serious look should be made at the project.

The Church Is Still Alive

The Church is still alive.

Or at least it is doing very well in Horton Bay these days.

Last Sunday, the Horton Bay United Methodist Church held a service of celebration and consecration for its new education wing and remodeling of the main structure.

The overflowing crowd brought back memories of what it used to be like, but during recent years the Church has been suffering with low attendance.

However, this certainly hasn't been the case in Horton Bay.

The Church was first organized in 1896 and through the years has been served by 18 ministers.

While the community has been through many economic struggles, the Horton Bay Methodist Church has seemed to survived them.

The congregation seems to consist of a proud people who certainly showed their strength with the addition of a new educational wing and remodeling of their sanctuary.

They've made the impossible become possible.

However, their job has just began.

It takes more than a new building to be a strong Church and we're sure the Horton Bay United Methodist Church realizes it also.

In a time when the Church appears to no longer be the vogue thing to do, we hope churches like the one in Horton Bay stay strong to their commitments.

Six cows (6) divided by nine (9) children equal three! This simple formula gave each child the duty every third day. Impossible, say the slide rule and computer; to these mathematical wonders perhaps but not to those kids who drove two cows home, their own and that of a neighbor.

Family pastures were generally adjoining. The first cow would be led out and driven to the next stop where it would be tied to a fence post while the second one would be rounded up. Both would plod homeward instinctively, to be met at the alley by the master or mistress on lookout.

The herder always carried a stout businesslike stick to drive off the occasional dog bent on harassment and it was odd to witness a pigtailed lass, who would be frightened by a mouse, put flight to a hostile hound which outweighed her.

This loosely knit local MMPA was a far cry from the gleaming tank trucks and modern dairy farms of today and may prompt murmurs of sympathy for those hardy souls out of the past, but if you question any still living their only complaint will be about far greater difficulties now in 1974.

Drawing milk while sitting on a stool in the barn was far less exhausting than trying to tap these newfangled waxed cartons with arthritic fingers.

Parents tend to become exasperated at the snails pace with which teenagers carry out an errand, getting milk from the store three blocks away for example. If they walk, they poke along thru Cronkite's newscast. If they bike, they pedal thru the news and Mission Impossible. If you hand over the car keys to speed delivery, the milk arrives during the second commercial of the nine o'clock movie.

Grandmothers, particularly those from rural and small town origins, tend to be more empathetic as they recall their childhood. When they went on the same errand, their mothers could 'wait till the cows came home' as the saying so aptly puts it. There is one notable difference to be considered; in those earlier times the milk was brought home in the original container

Bessie, with bell tinkling and tail swishing off flies, carried the milk with leisurely gait from the outlying pasture to the barn in town from early Spring to late Fall, chaperoned in rotation by each child in the family upon reaching the age of ten.

Each morning, before school when it was in session, the youngster would escort the cow to pasture, to be fetched back late in the afternoon to be milked and kept in the barn overnite. Like present day newsboys, neighborhood youngsters swapped this chore when conflicting activities required. Bargaining within the family added further flexibility to the system which, incidentally, imposed equal rights upon the fair sex.

This lunch felt different

The public relations director of a local bank took me to lunch, which is not an unusual thing. Businesses frequently seek favors from newspapers through the time-honored custom of buying the editor some food and booze. As a completely corruptiblo freeloader, I love it.

But this lunch was different. This public relations director is named Judy. She is a doll—but I probably shouldn't say that.

What I mean is, the president of the same bank also buys my lunch upon occasion—at the A & W Root Beer stand. Rod is a presentable fellow, decently groomed and well shod. But it would never occur to me to describe him as a doll.

Likewise, if I had a luncheon date with Rod, I wouldn't have to explain it to my wife. She would never ask, "What were you doing with Rod at the A & W yesterday?

But somehow I felt it was necessary to tell her beforehand that Judy had invited me to a business lunch and we'd probably eat it in a local restaurant because I'd never seen Judy carrying a lunch pail.

All of which proves I must make some adjustments before I'll feel comfortable in this new world of Women's Lib.

Don't get me wrong. I think women suffer from shameful discrimination, especially in the business world. To get a "man's job," a woman usually must work twice as hard as a man for half the pay. Too often you hear the expression: "That's good pay for a woman." Which sounds like a plantation owner explaining his employee has it pretty good for a slave.

But old habits are hard to shed. For instance, Judy paid the luncheon tab. Geez. She stood in line, waiting to pay the cashier, while I waited at the door with several women who were also waiting—for their husbands. I felt like a cheapskate. "Listen," I explained to one woman, "That's really my money she's using. I'm not paying the bill myself because I'm afraid the girl running the cash register will ask me where I've been all her life. It was bad enough when the waitress pinched me."

And what about car doors? My mother brought me up to open them for women. But Judy was driving. She picked me up at my office, she chose the restaurant and she paid the bill. She had done everything Rod would have done. Would I open the door for him? How do I know? He always takes me to a drive-in. Life sure does get tedious.

I finally compromised. I opened her door but I let her slam it. Kissinger would have been proud.

One last but extremely important point: It is not only men who must adjust to an equal world where it is stupid to blink when she asks him to dinner. Some women have a lot to learn, too....

Four females who work in my office were in that restaurant when Judy and I walked in. They fell out of their chairs looking for my wife and Judy's husband. When the search proved fruitless, the intensity of their conversation increased noticeably as their sandwiches turned stale. Later, back in the office, one of them demanded an explanation. (I told her Judy had lost an election bet.)

You get the point. If I'd been lunching with Rod, those women would hardly have looked up from their mashed potatoes—unless Rod had run over them.

Moral: In an equal society, sex should be irrelevant when you are having public relations with a public relations director.

Huh?

Meet Charlevoix

Meet Jim Fitzgerald

Charlevoix Courier columnist Jim Fitzgerald was interviewed recently by Dearborn Heights reporter Mike Miller. They discussed Lapeer, where Fitz is the editor, Terrible Jean and race relations. The interview was published in the Dearborn Heights Leader and Ledger newspapers. It follows here.

MILLER: Where do you get the ideas for your column?

FITZ: Everywhere. Every so often it happens that I haven't got an idea and I thumb through newspapers until something strikes me. They call me Jack the Ripper because as I read the papers if something strikes me I tear it out and stick it in my shirt pocket. When I get to the office it goes into a file that's five inches fat. When it's time to write the column I'll go through the file until something strikes me. It's either that or something that happens at home, family stuff.

MILLER: Do you relly have a sister, Terrible Jean?

FITZ: Oh sure, she lives in Southfield. I've got lots of sisters and one that lives fairly near Dearborn and Dearborn Heights, in Garden City. I've got four sisters scattered all over. There is a Terrible Jean, you can bet on it.

I got a letter from the Pontiac paper. They had received a letter for me that was addressed simply to Terrible Jean's brother on the envelope. The postal service delivered it. I told her that I'm making her famous.

MILLER: We received a letter at Leader Publications in reference to one of your columns a few months back. The letter said something to the effect that you preach on race relations from a northern, rural, small town, all-white stronghold without having to deal with blacks. How would you react to that?

FITZ: That's a commonplace reaction. Their point is I don't live there so I don't know what I'm talking about.

I've been in downtown Detroit more often than a lot of people living in suburbs of Detroit. My four sisters all live in Detroit suburbs and they don't go to Detroit half as much as I do. I go to Detroit all the time.

But, that's not really a good answer because I really don't live there.

I used to live in bigger cities and work in factories and know all sorts of people and it's true we don't have even a handful of blacks in Lapeer but this is where I live and this is where I work.

MILLER: I know a number of people myself, young adults, who haved lived in Detroit suburbs all their lives and have never seen downtown Detroit.

FITZ: It's a great town for barflying, going to shows, ball games and crap like that. Detroit is where it's at.

I think I got going on the racial deal a long time ago when I was in the Army. I personally became aware of the terrible discrimination that was worse then than it is now.

They had separate everything. I was an assistant chaplain and they even had separate churches. I thought that was very Christian-like. It's true. They had a church for the blacks on the back of the post. It really bugged me so when I finally got around to writing, I did write about it. And still do pretty regularly. I try not to get preachy about it, but every once in a while something will bug me.

I think criticism of my racial attitudes in the column is the most common bitch I get from the Detroit area.

MILLER: When do you do your best writing?

FITZ: It's always at the same time because it's just a sideline with me. I'm just the editor here and I work 50 to 60 hours a week, sometimes.

I never work more than two hours on a column. I told myself years ago and I tell the people who work for me that if you can't write a column in two hours, forget it. And that two hours always comes on Wednesday morning. It usually stretches more than that because I never can write a column without being interrupted about 16 times.

MILLER: How much of what you write in your column is the honest-to-goodness truth?

FITZ: Everything I write in the column is based on fact. My style is obviously exaggerated. Terrible Jean really isn't terrible. But there's always a basis in fact. I'm always trying to make a point.

There are a lot of goofy things that happen. I remember a long time ago I mentioned in a column that my wife was a wicker-wacky and said that we even had a wicker chair in the shower and friends would say, "Well, that can't be the truth." So I'd take them to the shower and show them. It's not as far-fetched as you'd think.

MILLER: Why are you locked away in a little town like Lapeer?

FITZ: Years ago the opportunity was at big city daily newspapers. I went down for an interview in the editorial offices at the Free Press for a position writing editorials and I got lost between Hudson's and the Free Press. I joke that that's not why I'm working for a daily but the truth is that money talks.

I came to the Lapeer County Press in 1951, straight from Michigan State College. I had a uncle who's dead now, who was an Associated Press writer and later a p.r. man for Michgan Bell. So I had an offer from AP and one from here at the same time. They both paid a resounding $50 a week and I would've probably taken the AP offer but my uncle advised me to come here because I would eventually make more and learn more.

And I did. I was ad manager here for 10 years. I sold advertising. Once I started here, of course I liked it or I would've gone somewhere else.

Through the years I got offers from the Free Press and other places but I preferred to use them as wedges to get raises here.

Now I participate in the paper's ownership. I've been here for 24 years. I wouldn't make enough money anywhere else.

MILLER: How did you start syndicating your column?

FITTZ: It's like topsy, it just grew. My column was started to help me to sell ads. If I wrote about the merchants, they might be more inclined to my advertising so I named it Along The Main Stem. Great name. The idea was that after making the advertising rounds I would come back to the office and write sweet things about the merchants and then when I went back they would buy ads. I think I wrote about two columns along those lines and they made me throw-up, they were so bad. So I started throwing little funnies in and opinions and saying what I wanted to say and pretty soon it wasn't that type of column at all. That started in

INDEPENDENT NON-PARTISAN FOR CIRCUIT JUDGE

ATTORNEY AT LAW

TELEPHONE 582-7911
AREA CODE 616

VOTERS OF CHARLEVOIX COUNTY:

I need your support if you are going to elect a Charlevoix County resident CIRCUIT JUDGE for the FIRST TIME in over FIFTY YEARS. You probably won't get a second chance for another generation!!!

What do YOU want to know beyond my need for your vote? I was born and raised in Michigan. I worked my way through college with a 40 hour per week night job. My law school degree was earned by attending nights while working 44 hours a week. Since opening my office in Charlevoix County in 1961, hard work has built a successful practice and, if elected, I will work just as hard as your Circuit Judge.

As a resident of Charlevoix County, I have given freely of my time to community efforts, my earnings to community projects and my blood (over a gallon of it) to our blood drives. I hope you will agree my track record is one of performance--not promise.

Even though endorsed by Charlevoix County, the Governor did not favor me with an appointment when the Emmet County Judge retired so the designation of Judge or incumbent with its vote gathering benefit will not appear beneath my name on the ballot or in connection with radio or newspaper advertising--not even in the free publicity that has filled our newsprint and airways since the June appointment. In the past, I have been endorsed for a Judgeship by both Democrats and Republicans. That's about as NON-PARTISAN as a candidate could be when seeking a non-partisan Judgeship.

No individual or association, fraternal or religious organization or group of lawyers has contributed a dime to my campaign or confederated to assure my election. This advertisement and all others you read or hear between now and the Primary on August 6th will be paid for out of my savings. I have no conflicts adverse to your interests because of present positions of influence--either appointive, elective, social or financial.

If the 33rd Circuit wants a Judge who still believes in Justice, Law and Order--believes the system can be made to work--I need and want your Vote. If Charlevoix County is going to elect their man--I am their only candidate for Circuit Judge. Only a UNITED EFFORT by all Charlevoix County Voters will give us the Judgeship you should want as much as I do.

FDR Started Social Services

Back in 1935, when Franklin Delano Roosevelt was president, Congress passed the Social Security Act.

That act was the enabling legislation under which the Charlevoix County Department of Social Services operates.

Working under the guidance and supervision of the federal Department of Health, Education and Welfare and the State Department of Social Services, the County Department of Social Services dispenses help to those in need.

The organizational chart of the Department is complex and its duties many. Its budget, funded by federal, state and local agencies, is large.

There is a County Social Services Board which formulates county policies, a Director, a Casework Supervisor, a Special Services Coordinator, four Service Workers, three Assistance Payments Workers, four full time clerical workers, and one part time clerical worker.

One branch of the Social Services Department provides General assistance, which includes direct relief. These are usually short term emergency cases and money for them is provided on a 60 percent county and 40 percent state basis. There were 65 requests for Financial Assistance in April.

Aid to Dependent Children is one of the most active branches in the Department. Each month it pays out aid money in an average amount of $35,000 for between 170 and 180 families from federal and state funds.

Within the last six years the number of families receiving Aid to Dependent Children has been as few as 14, but more lenient requirements for eligibility have caused a constant increase in this case load.

Medical Assistance, which includes Medicaid, is also a busy branch. There were 410 persons in Charlevoix County receiving Medicaid in April. These funds come from federal and state sources. There is no total figure for the cost of Medicaid in the county, but the bill at Grandvue Medical Facility amounts to about $32,000 a month.

Other services of the County Department of Social Services are broken down into "Family", "Adult", "Child Care", "Children's", "Special", and "Information Referral".

For the family, Social Services provides help in budgeting income, family planning, work training, health screenings, and similar programs.

In the adult category, services include foster home care for the elderly, release planning (for persons being discharged from mental hospitals), and housekeeping help for the infirm.

In the field of child care, Social Services licenses day care centers, certifies day care aides, and pays for day care of children of working mothers in certain instances.

The children's department is concerned with the welfare of delinquent and dependent children, licenses and uses foster homes for children, arranges for the adoption of state wards, and handles some child abuse complaints.

The on-going services caseload for April amounted to 115 persons, broken down into 16 protective services cases, 45 day care home cases, 11 children's foster home cases, two adoptive home cases, and 41 children's services cases.

Of the children's services cases, five children were permanent wards of the state, four were temporary wards of the state, 17 were in a boys' training school, eight were in a girls' training school, and seven were under court supervision.

All of the above services are paid for through federal, state and county funds.

The Special Services Coordinator works with volunteers to provide transportation for those needing it, arranges for group meetings at which problems of mutual interest are discussed, helps with training the handicapped, and in general handles special services. Her salary is funded 25 percent by the county and 75 percent by the federal government.

The Information Referral Service makes available an extensive file of information on where to seek help for various problems.

The Grandvue Medical Care Facility is under the jurisdiction of the County Social Services Board.

Food stamps, which are certified and distributed by the Department of Social Services, originate with the U.S. Department of Agriculture. They are available to persons with certain minimum incomes, and to all persons on Aid to Dependent Children.

In April of this year, the Department distributed coupons valued at $24,728 which cost the recipients $12,492.

There is no way to tell how much money comes into the county to pay for all these services. It is broken down into many federal and state grants. However, the county's share is relatively small. The Department of Social Services has requested $80,000 from the county in their 1975 budget.

Members of the Social Services Board are Mrs. Jewel Bryan, Boyne City; the Rev. Hewitt Johnston, Charlevoix; and Vern Whiteford, East Jordan. Mrs. Bryan and Whiteford were appointed by the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners. Johnston is a state appointee. They will each serve a three year term.

Richard Tillen is Director of the County Department of Social Services. He is assisted by George Duncan, Casework Supervisor; Mrs. Florence Wojan, Special Services Coordinator; Robert Allyn, Service Worker; Orville Hansen, Service Worker; Vasco Zucchiatti, Service Worker; and Michael Coughlin, Service Worker.

Other members of the staff are three Assistance Payments Workers: Mrs. Paige Allyn, Dale Terryberry, and Robert O'Brien. The clerical staff is made up of Agnes Lombard, Mary Juday, Mary Ann Smith, Mary Ann Kelly, and Catherine Tillen.

RICHARD TILLEN of Charlevoix heads up Charlevoix's County Social Services Department that provides a variety of services to those who are in need.

Medusa Earnings Drop 1st Quarter

Net earnings per common share dropped from $1 to 55 cents for the quarter ending June 30, Medusa Corp. has reported to shareholders.

Robert W. Fort, Medusa president and chief executive officer, called the second quarter earnings "disappointing" and blamed three factors for the drop.

–Tons of cement shipped dropped 14 percent and reduced earnings by 16 cents a share. The decline was blamed on strikes against Medusa's customers, a drop in demand due to fewer housing starts and a withdrawal from low-priced markets.

–A cost-price squeeze that reduced earmings by 23 cents per share. Fuel costs rose 69 percent and power 36 percent. Production volume was the same as for the second quarter of 1973. Furthermore, price increases were restricted by commitments made to the government when the cement industry was decontrolled in November, 1973.

–Thirdly, corporate interest expense was nine cents per share higher than last year, reflecting the higher prime rate and heavier borrowings to finance plant additions and expanded inventories.

Although sales less discounts were up 10 percent in the last quarter ($38,013,000 to $41,631,000), earnings before taxes dropped 45 percent ($4,211,000 to $2,331,000) and net earnings dropped 45 percent ($2,524,000 to $1,412,000).

For the 12 months ended June 30, the picture was somewhat brighter. Sales less discounts were up 11 percent, with earnings before taxes, net earnings and earnings per common share down only 10 per cent.

Dancers Leaping In Local Program

By KAREN BERRY

A battle cry of 'leap-2-3, leap-2-3.'

People moving gracefully across a smooth white floor.

Young and old, dressed in anything from full leotards and tights, to jeans and a t-shirt.

Although there are many interesting things to look at in the modern dance classroom, the first thing anyone would notice is that everybody seemed to be really enjoying themselves.

One student, Patty Gunn, said: "I danced through high school and college, and then I picked it up again two years ago, and I'm enjoying it now as much as I ever did.

"I think Mrs. Karff is really great!

"I find that she is a demanding and precise teacher.

"I find it challenging."

Another student, Lorraine Pond, said she had never danced (modern dance) before, but she was having a lot of fun although at times she did feel awkward.

There were many beginning students at the lessons.

Among them were Gail Ager who said, "I'm enjoying the class very much. "I decided to take it mainly for the exercise, grace and enjoyment.

"At first I found it difficult to do, but I guess you have to keep working at it."

Another new student, Madeline Taylor, says that she thinks the lessons are fun, but she finds some parts very difficult.

Katherine Neff who has taken from Mrs. Karff in past summers said, "it tones my body.

Mrs. Karf is an excellent teacher and I highly recommend her.

Alternative Energy

Students Take A Look At New Fuels

By Tom Dammann

MACKINAW CITY -- Fundamental changes in social and governmental structures, as well as public attitudes, are required before the world as a whole – or even small neighborhoods - can utilize such free energy sources as the sun and the wind.

This is the consenses of a group of students, teachers and technicians who spent the past 10 days in a seminar devoted to exploring the use of these alternative energy sources and the effects of their use upon present social, governmental and economic structures.

The unusual meeting stemmed from the frustration Mr. and Mrs. David Dwyer of East Lansing encountered while trying to provide electric power for a cabin they have been building on the shore of Lake Huron hear here.

Dwyer, an anthropologist who is a teacher of linguistics at Michigan State University, and his wife Annabella, a student of anthropology and drafting, decided there must be means of obtaining power other than buying it from the local REA Co.

They began reading about solar energy as a source of heat, and windmills to generate electricity.

Last winter, they had a number of conferences with a group of architectural students in Ann Arbor who have recently formed Sun-structures, Inc., a firm specializing in designing houses with solar heating.

They talked with their sister-in-law, Mrs. Margaret Dwyer, a psychology teacher at Monteith College (a satellite of Detroit's Wayne State University). She suggested the seminar.

Some 20 adults of ages 19 to 34 – students, teachers and technicians – together with eight children from two to 12 years old, made up the final group. Three academic disciplines were represented: anthropology, psychology and architecture.

Meetings were held in the Dwyers' cabin. Most participants slept in tents pitched on a site loaned by a friendly motel owner.

The meeting was run on a communal basis. All but the teachers contributed $25 each for food. Everyone was assigned the responsibilities of cooking, housekeeping and child care on a shift basis.

A schedule of daily talk and work sessions was rigidly adhered to.

The group quickly learned that the technology is relatively easy to understand and master.

They used split beer and soft drink cans left on the beach by careless fishermen to construct conduits to carry water through a suntrap. They made the sun trap of a wooden frame and covered it with

County Planning Department Tackles Solid Waste Study

The solid waste problem in Charlevoix County is receiving attention from the County Planning Commission, Bill Mercer, county planner, reports.

He has contacted all haulers of garbage and other waste in the county to find out the monthly tonnage they carry, number of customers they serve, and what routes they take.

A study is also being made to determine the tonnage of solid waste taken by individuals to county landfills and other dumps.

An up-date revision of population figures is being undertaken through the use of automobile registrations, septic tank permits, and birth and death certificates in an attempt to obtain an accurate population county.

The topographical map of Charlevoix County is being studied to help decide on locations for the three or four landfills which will be necessary to handle the county's solid waste.

At the present time, there are three sanitary landfills in the county. One is operated by the city of Boyne City, one by the city of East Jordan, and one by the Charlevoix Garbage Service in Eveline Township.

There are modified dumps in Boyne Valley and Melrose Townships and one on Beaver Island.

The Department of Natural Resources has taken over regulation of sanitary landfills throughout the state and all facilities must meet their standards. To date, only the Charlevoix Garbage Service landfill has been approved.

It is the responsibility of the county to plan for and provide sanitary landfills which meet D.N.R. standards. The Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners has asked the Planning Commission to draw up a plan which would meet those standards.

Originally, the D.N.R. had set a deadline of July 1, 1974 for all counties to have approved landfills. However, most counties found they could not meet this deadline and the D.N.R. has tacitly agreed that as long as plans are "in the works", the counties will not be cited for violation.

Lion's Club Project

Dog Brings A New Life

Somewhere, someplace in the United States, a Charlevoix German Shepherd named "Ziggy" is bringing new meaning to life for a blind person.

The silver, gray dog once belonged to the Hans Wiemer family of Charlevoix, but after recently graduating from Leader Dog School in Rochester is now guiding someone through his dark life.

No one is really sure where Ziggy now lives because once he graduated from the Leader Dog School he was never permitted to see the family who raised him again.

"He seemed like such an intelligent dog," said Wiemer, who decided to donate their dog to the Lion's blind program after reading about it earlier this year in the newspaper.

Wiemer had read about how a Danish musician went home last November with a Labrador retriever named Caesor, who until he was a year-old was raised by Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Juday of Boyne City.

Lions International, along with private donors, paid for Dane's 28-day training program.

The Leader Dog School is one of the major schools in the country for the training of Seeing Eye dogs.

Through the efforts of local Lions Clubs, the Boyne City couple have been pre-training dogs for three years.

Last year alone, they had taken 13 dogs that area people, like the Wiemers, have donated to Rochester following a one-year program where the dogs are taught obedience and made accustomed to traffic and people.

According to the Judays, a dog must be friendly and not shy away from people at all.

Once the dog is a year old, they then take it to Rochester where it is trained for four months.

Then a blind person comes to the school, where he and the dog spend four weeks together before they become permanent companions.

Judays says the best dogs for the program are labradors, retrievers and German Shepherds.

"ZIGGY" now has a new companion and will never be able to see his original owner because of Leader Dog School regulations.

Public Health Nurse Helps Area Residents Get Well

"If You Have Your Health You Have Everything"

By PEG OHLE

There is an advertising slogan which goes, "If you have your health you have everything."

An opposite slogan might say that if you don't have your health you don't have much.

It is the job of the District Health Department to help area citizens keep their good health and to provide medical care for those with health problems.

The Public Health Nurses, who work within the Health Department, have the actual contacts with persons in need of health care. It was this reporter's privilege to spend a day with nurse Jeanne Miles while she traveled throughout Charlevoix and Antrim counties calling on her patients.

Some of the patients were old friends whom Mrs. Miles has been counseling for some time. Others were new cases whose needs had recently come to the attention of the Health Department.

The welcome Mrs. Miles received was always a warm one. The problems she discussed were many and varied.

There was the family of four school-age children where the father has cancer and each of the children suffers from at least one malady. It is almost more than the anxious thirty-year old mother can handle but Jeanne Miles carefully went over each problem, offering advice and making arrangements for continuing medical care.

The children with a congenital eye disease were urged to wear their glasses and use their eye drops. Medication prescribed by a physician for one of the children's hyper activity was discussed, as was progress in treatment for another child's malfunctioning legs. Arrangements were made for one child to have further tests for possible diabetes and thyroid scans, as well as treatment for eneurises.

Payment for some of this medical care is provided for by the Crippled Children's fund, for which help this family qualifies. Mrs. Miles went over past statements from several physicians with the mother and assured her they would be paid.

Among other sources of funds is Health Care Services for Children, Easter Seals, and Family Planning Services.

The final bit of advice Mrs. Miles offered this family was to the children, who were eating candy. "That's not good for your teeth," she said pleasantly, "you'd better go brush them now."

Another call was made on a family of four children where the year-and-a-half old has a malformed head and shows no desire to walk, and where an older boy has behavioral problems. Mrs. Miles checked on the results of a physical examination she had arranged for the little girl and discussed the progress of the boy.

A first contact was made with the mother of a new baby to find out how both the mother and child, who were ill after birth, were getting along. Mrs. Miles explained how and where necessary immunizations were available for the baby and urged that such immunizations be taken.

Mrs. Miles then stopped to chat with a grandmother who suffers from multiple sclerosis. She first met this woman several years ago when she returned from the hospital a total invalid and the Health Department was asked to help with her care. Today, through great determination and self-help, the woman can do almost everything an unafflicted person can do.

There was no one home at the residence of a family whose small child had been placed in school for the handicapped through Mrs. Miles' efforts. She explained to this reporter that she wanted to be sure the parents would not become discouraged by seeing the more severely handicapped children in the school.

Often a call by the Public Health Nurse is for the purpose of making sure that prescribed treatments are being taken. Such was the case of the four-year old boy who had been born with a cleft palate and had undergone surgery for the defect. An appointment for speech therapy had been made but not kept by the mother. Mrs. Miles explained the necessity for such treatment to the mother and received her promise that the child would receive it.

Another call was made on the mother of a new-born baby and two year old boy. Mrs. Miles checked the baby's eating and sleeping habits, told the mother about the nearest immunization clinic, and suggested a hearing and sight screening for the boy. At the mother's request she also arranged for help in family planning.

There was a stop at the day care center for children of migrant workers in Elk Rapids to check on the progress of children that Mrs. Miles had placed there. She and the director showed the reporter around the facility which provides day care for 130 children during the summer months as a combined project of the Department of Social Services and Board of Education.

One of the children, a four-year-old boy who cannot walk because of a birth defect, was not at the day care center and the director said that the previous day he had had some lesions on his legs resembling impetigo.

Mrs. Miles called at the home, checked the lesions, and told the mother to keep using the medication which had been prescribed. She also told the mother that her little girl, who had an ear infection, should receive immediate medical attention to prevent further loss of hearing.

There was another stop at the local school superintendent's office to make an appointment to talk over health care and health education plans for the coming year.

The Public Health Nurse acts as school nurse in those school districts where a regular school nurse is not employed. It is her job to arrange for immunizations, tuberculosis tests, and slight and hearing tests.

It is also her job to provide educational films on such subjects as veneral disease, alcoholism, drug abuse "girl to woman", "boy to man", and general health care.

Many of the Public Health Nurse's home visits are school related–to follow up on the treatment of problems discovered in school, emotional as well as physical.

Services of the Public Health Nurse are available free of charge, to all who need them.

It is through her that ways and means are found to provide necessary health care for everyone, and to teach how to keep good health.

Ostling Calls For Land Use Planning

ST. JAMES – Proper land use is one of the most pressing problems facing the rural areas of the state, Rep. Ralph Ostling (R-Roscommon) told his constituents at an informal meeting at the Beaver Island school July 22.

Ostling, who is a candidate for re-election to the state Legislature from the 103rd district, told the voters he was not on the island "to get votes" but rather to learn about their unique problems as Island residents.

Ostling said he would like to see the state set up an agency of experts who would be farmed out to rural communities to help them resolve their land use problems.

A former township official in the Higgins Lake area, Ostling believes that firm decisions governing proper land use are imperative to rural areas such as Beaver Island in order to save the land from the chaotic development characteristic of more popoulus areas of the state.

The islanders told Ostling that one of their most pressing problems is securing drivers' licenses. Bud McDonough pointed out that new drivers not only must transport a car to Charlevoix to take their initial driving test, but that young drivers also must be accompanied to Charlevoix by a parent.

The minimum transportation cost alone comes to $46 for the car, driver and parent. Often times it is necessary to make arrangements for overnight housing.

Mrs. William Wagner said it cost her son $68 for a driver's license because he had to make two other trips back to Charlevoix, some of them by air, because the driver's license camera failed to function because of clerical mistakes by the Secretary of State's office.

Ostling said he is confident a system can be worked out whereby a representative of the Secretary of State's office will visit the island periodically to test new drivers and issue licenses.

Mrs. Vera Wojan asked if any public funds had ever been invested in a private airport on Beaver Island. Ostling assured her that public funds are invested only in public airports.

Ostling also discussed a proposal (P.A. 125) which would grant Michigan families with an annual income of less than $15,000 approximately $35 million in sales tax relief on food and prescription drugs. Under the plan, a family earning less than $5,000 a year would be given an income tax credit of $10 per person. Families earning between $5,000 and $7,000 would receive $9 per person; between $7,000 and $9,000, $8 per person; between $9,000 and $11,000, $7 per person and between $11,000 and $15,000, $6 per person.

The plan is Republicans' answer to a Democratic proposal that sales tax on food and drugs are eliminated entirely.

Ostling also discussed the burden of state social welfare programs which cost a whopping $862 million annually.

CHARLEVOIX COUNTY EXTENSION Agent Ed Rebman received a plaque last week for his years of service as secretary to the Charlevoix County Soil Conservation District from Clayton Healey (right). Both Healey and William Korthase were elected to the board at the annual meeting held in Whiting's Park.

Tennis Talk

Since the public tennis courts have now been in Charlevoix for just over a year, I think it is a good time to reflect upon the tremendous job the city has done setting up a solid tennis program and running the courts themselves.

Last August, Kurt Kipke, Charlevoix's recreation director, established the first annual Charlevoix Open tennis tournament. The tournament was a successful one. There was a good number of participants in all age groups ranging from 12 and under boys and girls to the adult divisions for men and women. Doubles was also quite popular.

Encouraged by this overwhelming response to tennis, Kipke decided to stage three tennis events this summer. The first, the Charlevoix Closed, was held in late June and was restricted to residents of Charlevoix. More people participated than in the open tournament last year.

This weekend the first annual mixed doubles tournament will be held and the advanced interest has been terrific. Kipke decided to hold this event because he was flooded with requests for a mixed doubles event.

Finally, later in August (probably August 10 and 11) the second annual Charlevoix Open tournament will be held. Applications for the event have already come in.

But there is more to a community program than tennis tournaments. Last summer, Gale Shelden conducted instructional clinics for all ages. Demand for clinics this summer was great, so Kipke hired Drew Walkler from the University of Michigan. Walkler is currently doing an excellent job conducting these clinics.

Also, the Charlevoix school system initiated a tennis club this spring. using the public courts, the team had a 2-3 inter-school record, and finished fifth in the regionals. Prospects for a winning season next season appear to be excellent.

The tennis program is in full force. It is possibly important to remember, however, that these are public courts. While the public wants a solid program, it also wants time to use the courts.

The city is aware of the problem. How should the courts be used? How much should the clinics, tournaments, and teams interfere with public playing time? Possibly the only satisfactory solution is to build more public courts.

The city has dealt with other tennis court problems effectively. The clock system and the signs describing court policies have been very successful.

Defeats Them 3-2

Community Reform Nips Huffords

Community Reform Church scored two runs in the bottom of the seventh inning to nip Huffords 3-2 in women's Slow Pitch action last week. Both umpires and scorers agreed it was one of the best played games of the season.

Solid defense and superb pitching by Betty Bergman of Community Reform Church and Cindy Kitely of Huffords dominated throughout the game. Winning pitcher Bergman only allowed five hits.

Ironically, errors led to the first two runs of the game. Huffords scored first in the top of the second.

Billie Falting led off with a single and Julie Wimmier followed with another single sending Falting to third. With two outs Nannete Christ hit a fly ball which should have ended the inning. The ball was dropped, however, allowing Falting to score the first run of the game.

Community Reform Church knotted the score in their half of the third. Cindy Manson and Debby Klooster both singled. Again with two outs, Christy Potter hit a ground ball which should have ended the threat. But the ball was bobbled and Manson came in to score.

The score did not stay tied for long. Huffords went ahead in the top of the fourth 2-1. Kay Curry and Wimmier singled and with one out Curry scored on a long sacrifice fly.

For the next three innings, neither team could get a rally started. In the bottom of the seventh, Community Reform Church came up for their last at bats.

Susie Potter, who came into the game in the fifth inning, led off with a sharp single. Betty Bergman helped her own cause with another single sending Potter to third. Manson flied to right field, but Potter came in to score to tie the game 2-2. Bergman went to second on the play.

With one out, Paula Potter reached first on a fielder's choice and on the play Bergman rounded third and scored the winning run.

The win allowed Community Reform Church to stay in the battle for first place in the second half of the season.

Topside Cocktail Clinches First Half of Tournament

Topside Cocktail Lounge clinched the first half in the men's slow pitch league by bombarding the Coast Guard 17-1. The win gave Topside a one game advantage over the Shed and American Mold.

The Coast Guard never knew what hit them as Topside exploded for five runs in the first inning. After Bernie DeVries and Kraag Lieberman walked, Curt Currey hit a two out single scoring DeVries and the rout was on.

Tim Carey and Ralph Doan then followed with consecutive singles. These hits coupled with two wild throws by the Coast Guard allowed Lieberman, Currey, Carey, and Doan to score.

Topside added single runs in the second and third while all the Coast Guard could manage was a single run in the third. Mike Webb's pitching and Topside's superb defense (Topside had three double plays in the game) stopped Coast Guards offense completely.

With the score 7-1, Topside turned on its power in the fourth. Little Dan McKenzie scampered around the bases with an inside-the-park home run to lead off the fourth. Mike Webb and Al Currey, Curt's brother, followed with singles.

Coast Guard almost got out of the inning when DeVries' long fly ball was caught and Webb was thrown out trying to go to third. But Stu Coleman blasted a two-run homer which was just out of the reach of the Coast Guard's left fielder.

Lieberman and Curt Currey then singled and Tim Carey hit the third Topside home run of the inning.

Topside then wrapped up the scoring with five more runs in the fifth. Al Currey slammed a three-run homer with Bobby Crain and Webb on board. DeVries and Coleman then singled and pinch hitter Terry Blissett hit another Topside homer to end the game.

Coast Guard Says Check Your Boat

Personnel from the Ludington boating safety department were working in the Charlevoix area last weekend.

A spokesman for the Coast Guard said the men were patroling the lake on the water activities of the Venetian Festival and using the Coast Guard's new boat check program at the municipal launch ramp.

All boaters are reminded of the new requirements for personal flotation devices (PFD) for recreational boats.

Basically this law, which went into effect October 1, 1973, require, all boats less than 16 feet in length and all canoes and kayaks to have at least one Coast Guard approved personal flotation device (PFD) of any type in good and serviceable condition for each person on board.

For boats 16 feet and over the law requires that there be at least one Coast Guard approved type I, II, or III wearable PFD in good and serviceable condition for each person on board.

In addition, there must be one type Coast Guard approved throwable PFD in good and serviceable condition immediately available in case of man overboard.

A basic rundown on what the types of PFD's are; type I is a wearable device commonly known as life preserver or life jacket. A type II device is commonly known as a buoyant vest while a type II PFD is a special purpose device. These 3 type devices are wearable. The type IV PFD is throwable. The two examples of this type are buoyant cushions and ring buoys.

The Coast Guard boat check program is designed to award a decal to boaters that are in compliance with federal law without penalizing those who do not meet the requirements.

This decal shows other law enforcement agencies that the boat has been checked and found to meet or exceed all federal requirements. Having the decal will not insure a boat that it will not be stopped for an unsafe practice or by the state or local authorities for a license check. The decal only shows compliance with federal laws.

Further information on boating safety, including a more specific rundown of all requirements for your boat, may be obtained by calling Coast Guard Station Charlevoix 547-2541.

Windmill Campgrounds Offers 'Old Style'

WINDMILL CAMPGROUNDS has opened this year for its first fuel season and is getting a favorable reaction from campers who are tired of staying in overcrowded public campgrounds around the area. The camp encourages tent camping over trailers.

When Chicago industrialist Stewy Boal sold his metal working plant and retired, he still wanted something to do.

So, he and his wife, Suzie, decided to open Charlevoix County's only private campground five miles southeast of Charlevoix on the Boyne City Road.

In fact, Windmill Campgrounds is the site of a farm that has been in the family since the late 1800's.

Until ten years ago, the engineer had about 600 sheep grazing on the property.

"It just didn't pay, so we quit the farm," he said while sitting behind his desk located inside the old barn.

Times have changed since the old farm days, but there are still reminiscences of the past when you look around the property.

Boal stresses that he wants to keep his 500-acre farm as undeveloped as possible and reflects this philosphy in his campground operations.

He has only 25 camping sites and is not interested in expanding to more than 50.

"It's different mostly because we have bigger sites," he says about his campground compared to public sites.

"And we don't allow motorcycles and other vehicles to travel in the camp other than to go to the site."

He said they're not really interested in having large commercial-type trailers either.

"We try to encourage camping type people."

Once a person registers, he has his choice of three different camping areas.

The first area is called the East Valley, which is a flat area for larger vehicles, while the second area, called the Hill Top, is for tent campers and people who like to be away.

The third and newest development of the year-old campground is called West Woods.

"This is strictly for tenters, there are no campers there," he said.

"It's like the old days when you camped out in the woods."

Boal says this is the first full season they have been open and that he has been surprised by the large turnout of people in light of the energy crisis.

He said the campgrounds seem to attract many people who need a place to stay near Charlevoix before moving on the next morning to Beaver Island.

Organized groups are also finding Windmill Campgrounds a popular spot, as well as those wanting to stay away from overcrowded public areas.

"We're looking more and more to people who will stav a few days or a week," he said.

It's such a popular spot, Boal said, a seasonal ranger working at Young State Park prefers to camp at Windmill instead of at his state park.

Besides the actual camping area, visitors have the use of a 40-feet diameter round swimming pool.

Boal says that they'll continue to improve the camp facilities with time, but they always want to remain small.

"We're never going to be a KAO," he said.

Last year 3,100 people stayed at the beach.
Permanently.

Of course they all drowned.

But then, another 55,600 Americans were killed in motor-vehicle accidents. And 17,600 died from falling. Fire claimed another 6,300 lives.

The figures go on and on. But maybe you get the point.

Don't let us hear about you by accident.

MR. & MRS. MICHAEL SMITH

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Paddy E. Patrick of RR3, Charlevoix, and Mr. and Mrs. Henry F. Smith of Pontiac.

1951 and in 1960 when I became editor I changed the name of If It Fitz. I thought that was real clever.

In the last eight years people I've known who own their own newspaper read it. I'd tell them, "H—, yes." Then another publisher would read it in that paper and call me and ask me if he could run it and it just grew.

It's in most of the newspapers in Michigan's larger cities except the two Detroit newspapers and they can't have it. They have asked for it, but it wouldn't be fair because the Detroit papers go into most of the areas where the column is already carried in other newspapers and it wouldn't be fair to them.

MILLER: Is it syndicated in newspapers outside of Michigan?

FITZ: Yeah. It's in a newspaper in England and one in Brussels, Belgium, also California, New York, Indiana, Illinois, Oregon. Christ, I sold one the other day to a place you've probably never heard of, Deveil's Bridge, North Dakota. I'm in Paradise, Calif. and Solaqua, Ala.

I can't imagine some small Alabama town newspaper having run that column for three or four years now.

MILLER: Is there any stock response you get to your columns in the way of approval or criticism?

FITZ: I hear more why a person doesn't like my column than why they do. It's usually criticism on the individual column like the one you mentioned on the race deal. People disagree with me on that.

You never know what's going to turn people on but I can usually guess. I wrote a column years ago on why I don't go to church and it really turned people on. I received full page letters, most of them trying to save my soul.

MILLER: I heard a story on how your column was first picked up for use in another newspaper other than yours.

An editor or publisher has seen you column in the Lapeer County Press and asked if it was possible to buy it for use in his paper and how much it would cost.

In a joking mood you answered, "A fifth of whiskey a week."

That's the story and it might be second hand, third hand or fourth hand but supposedly the man said, "It's a deal," and that's how your column was syndicated.

FITZ: (Laughter) Yeah, that's about it. It was Jim Sherman who runs a paper in Oxford. He has three papers now, so I get more whiskey out of him. Yea, that's close. The guy in Belgium sent me wine. He sends money too..

plastic.

They built a small windmill to drive a pump to move the heated water from the trap to a storage tank, a discarded oil can.

They proved to themselves that they could do these things individually, and the sun and wind came free of charge.

In their discussions they agreed that such knowledge would free people of their dependence on oil, coal and nuclear energy and that this would change radically the existing economic and technocratic structures now based on the exploitation, delivery and consumption of dwindling fuel supplies.

It would also change the physical profile of buildings and cities, as well as the manner in which they would be arranged.

They concluded that while individuals and even small communities could use the sun and wind with relative east, the possibilities for people crowded into large cities are far less--especially for apartment dwellers.

They broke camp Saturday determined to try their knowledge out in a small way on small neighborhoods in a continued effort to obtain answers to share with each other – and to continue their studies.

Art Fair Saturday

"Vittles" and music will accompany arts and crafts in the presentation of the 12th annual Portside Arts Fair at East Jordan, Saturday and Sunday, August 3 and 4.

Women of the Evangelical Lutheran Church are preparing a huge variety of homemade pies and other eatables.

Bandmaster Kauffman of the East Jordan High School Band is rounding up members to play some jazz on Sunday afternoon, and professional drummer Tim Kotowich and his trio are planning a little musical offering too.

Besides touring the 100 exhibits of arts and crafts to be set up on the city owned Elm Point estate on Lake Charlevoix's south arm, visitors can meet Carol Wald at the Portside Arts Center where she is in-studio as artist-in-residence.

ATTENTION

ALL REPUBLICAN VOTERS

Once again our Party ballot has been infiltrated by candidates who are not true Republicans. People who belong to other organizations such as The John Birch Society and The American Independent Party. So when you mark your ballot be very certain that you are voting for a REPUBLICAN.

These people are on the ballots for Party Delegates, Township Officers, County Commissioners and State Offices.

Therefore I urge you to use extreme care when you make your selection. We do not want to lose our Party to either of these organizations.

Just because a person can, under our present State Laws, file as a Candidate on any Party ticket, does not mean that he is a good and loyal member of that party.

Please Beware,

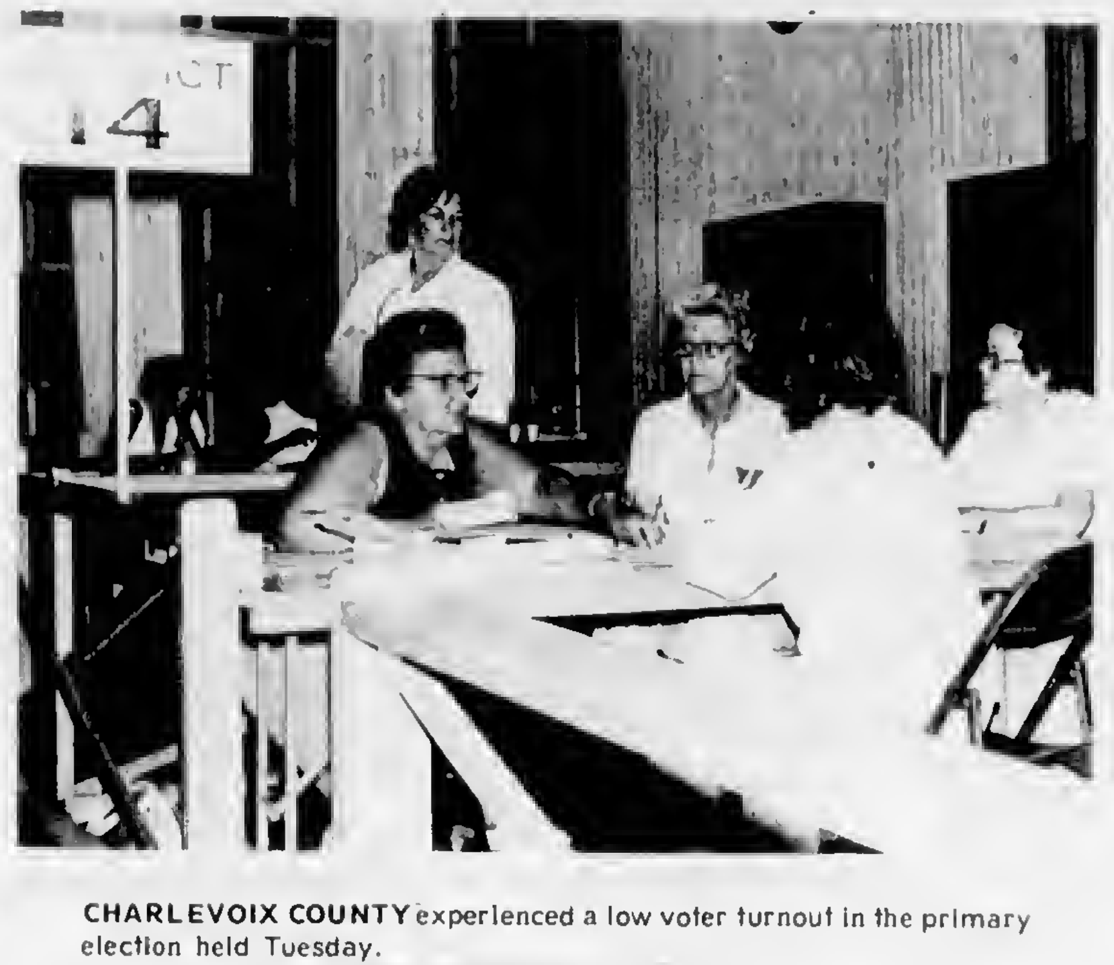
Ostling Defeats Friske in Primary

Incumbent Commissioners Win



CHARLEVOIX COUNTY experienced a low voter turnout in the primary election held Tuesday.

By FRAN MARTIN

Incumbent commissioners won nominations throughout Charlevoix County as a comparatively light vote went to the polls in Tuesday's election.

In District 2, where veteran Clyde Cunningham was being challenged by Willis Peters on the Republican ballot, Cunningham came through with a total of 156 to 73 for Peters while Democratic candidate Robert Wasoski polled 117.

Clayton A. Smith of District 3 who was having opposition from John Haggard and Donna Dove on the Republican ballot received a total of 132 votes to 82 for Haggard and 41 for Dove. Tusco Heath, a Democratic candidate, polled 60 votes.

DISTRICT FIVE

Contests on both ballots were in evidence in District 5 with Ralph Richardson polling 121 votes to 101 for Aaron Brock to win the nomination on the Republican ballot and John Vrondran defeating Karl Waldner by a total of 48-40 on the Democratic ticket.

District 10 gave the nomination to incumbent Charles Kessler who tallied 38 votes to 25 for Arthur K. Rouse.

In Charlevoix where Lee Moerland was being opposed by Theodore Browe, Moerland received 97 votes to 37 for Browe.

Delbert Ingalls, unopposed in South Arm township, polled 125 ballots; Ira L. Davis, 109 votes in District 4; Donald B. Meggison, 181 in District 13 and Kenneth A. Staley, 102 in District 14.

In November, Staley will face Democrat Oscar Ward who received 44 votes and in District 4, Davis will be opposed by Donna VanDorn on the Democratic ballot.

HOUSE SEATS

In the race for the House seat in the 103rd District, Richard Friske polled 981 votes to 737 for incumbent Ralph Ostling in Charlevoix County but Ostling recaptured his seat.

In the 106th District which includes eight of the county's 28 precincts, Stevens received 136 votes; Graye 135; Lance 90 and Gamble 26 on the Republican ballot and Lee 206 votes, Barnett 158 and Conboy 55 on the Democratic ticket.

Contests on a township level revealed some upsets.

In St. James township, John W. Gillispie won over incumbent James Janda 61-51 for the office of supervisor on the Democratic ballot; Vivian Visscher, clerk, received 57 votes to 33 for Clara Jean LaFreniere who was a write-in candidate; Donald Cole defeated Annabelle Hayhoe for the nomination for treasurer and Vera Wojan polled 88 votes to win over challenger John Gallagher.

In the only contest in Peaine township, Betty J. Welke, incumbent clerk, won the nomination over Joseph B. Martin by a margin of 24-21 on the Republican ticket.

EVELINE TOWNSHIP

In contests in Eveline township Linda Hildebrant polled 69 votes to defeat three others for the nomination for township treasurer. Margaret Donaldson received 45; Margaret J. Arnott, 35, and Jacklin M. Hawkins, 25 votes. William Gnunt, Jr. received 111 votes and N.C. Christensen 78 votes to win the nominations for trustees over Chester Nietapski who received 26 votes.

In the only contest in Hayes township, Lloyd Kuebler won the nomination for trustee for four years over Marla Stoneham by a margin of 89-26.

In Marion township, Allan Towsley polled 85 votes to 38 for Edwin C. Mann for the nomination for trustee for four years.

Helen Cherry polled 89 votes to 72 for Jane Mayhew for clerk in South Arm township.

In Wilson township Harvey Crozier, Jr. with 35 votes won the nomination for supervisor over Janet Waldner who received 15 votes and John C. Oliver received 35 to 18 for Helen E. Richards for treasurer on the Democratic ballot.

MILLAGE ISSUES

On the township level, three millage issues were defeated while two were successful in Boyne Valley township.

In Charlevoix township a 2.7 mill tax issue was voted down after voters had approved Proposition 1 to raise the tax limitation by a vote of 92-83 and then vetoed Proposition 2 to levy the millage by a vote of 92-79.

Residents of Marion township voted down a two mill levy for three years for road construction by a vote of 107-90 and in Melrose township a two mill levy for five years for road construction was turned down by a vote of 66-41.

Boyne Valley township, however, approved two millage issues including a .5 mill levy for two years to operate the village landfill and another .5 mill levy for four years to underwrite the cost of fire equipment. The first issue won by a vote of 17-4 and the second by a margin of 14-7.

Reibel Establishes Methods To Examine Court Documents

By TOM DAMMANN

Ninetieth District Court Judge Arthur R. Reibel reached a cease-fire agreement last week with The Charlevoix Courier and Petoskey News-Review, establishing the methods which the news media must use to examine court records.

The understanding was hammered out by representatives of the two newspapers and the jurist, directed by a representative of Michigan's Supreme Court Chief Justice Thomas M. Kavanagh.

The conference came on the heels of a complaint signed by Courier Editor Ken Winter and filed with Charlevoix County prosecutor's office.

The complaint charged Reibel with violating state laws by restricting the accessibility of court records, which under law is public information, Winter contends.

Complaint Signed

Winter signed the complaint two weeks ago when Reibel informed him that he could no longer obtain news from the court unless he asked for a specific case and furnished the case's number.

Acting on advice of an attorney, Winter presented Reibel with a formally written request for the records of case number 3400 and subsequent numbers.

Reibel said the request was insufficient and refused, whereupon Winter signed the complaint.

Reibel's policy was issued following publication in several newspapers of a report that the State Supreme Court Administrator had advised him to divest himself of all commercial properties, including the tug boat, an oil tanker barge, and Castle Farms, a complex of art shops south of town.

Conflicting Interests

Judge Reibel was the principal source of this news. He told this reporter that the Supreme Court Administrator advised him that ownership of these properties opened him to charges of conflicting interests.

The stated rationale for the court's restrictive policy was a shortage of office personnel and space.

Following the complaint of Judge Reibel, Winter called the Office of Chief Justice Kavanagh and a representative, Donald Riggs was sent to Charlevoix and Petoskey last week.

"The misunderstandings between the press and Judge Reibel seem to be growing and growing so we thought it time to sit down with both parties and talk matters out," Chief Justice Kavanagh's Executive Assistant Mrs. Doris Jarrell said in a telephone interview Monday.

Mrs. Jarrell said an understanding was reached Wednesday July 30 which Judge Reibel agreed to post in District Court and Magistrate's Offices in both Charlevoix and Petoskey, and will apply to both Charlevoix and Emmet Counties.

Posted Notice

Although she stated the agreement was not reached until July 30th the posted notice is dated July 15.

Mrs. Jarrell said the major provisions of the agreement are that: "in person requests for traffic tickets will be honored while telephoned requests will not, particularly in summer; no information about court records will be given over the phone other than the dates for scheduled hearings if the case in question is properly identified.

Six Points

There are six points in the "press policy" posted by Judge Reibel:

"1. All court records are public records and will be open to inspection by anyone during regular business hours, when so requested by case name, case number or other specific means of identification.

"2. Michigan statutes require the suppression of certain court records regarding grand jury proceedings, where the defendants have not yet been arrested and arraigned on the indictment.

"3. Michigan statutes permit the suppression of certain Court files by judicial discretion for good cause.

"4. All court employees will refrain from disseminating Court information via telephone and written reports.

"5. All Court files during the time of inspection by anyone will remain in the proper Court office or filing room.

"6. All Court employees will refrain from commenting on any and all Court cases, both pending and closed files."

More News

Speaking for the Petoskey News-Review, Kirk Schaller, Secretary of Northern Michigan Review Inc., owner of the two papers, said "We are getting more out of the Court than we have for some time, but the new policy will have to be tested for a while before we can be certain the public is getting the information it is due."

Judge Reibel himself has not been available for comment, despite repeated attempts to reach him.

Will Railroads Die?

"The question is, what do we do?"--John Hodge

CADILLAC -- Area government and business representatives don't appear to know how they will combat proposed abandonment of Northern Michigan's rail service.

Meeting in Cadillac Tuesday, some 60 representatives seemed, to still be in only preliminary planning stages of blocking the elimination of 2,272 miles of Michigan trackage with only 10 weeks left.

In fact, some representatives walked out of the all-day rail workshop early in disgust.

Possible Abandonment

Possible abandonment of all service in the upper half of the lower peninsula became a reality when a report issued by the U.S. Transportation Department claimed that virtually all of the present rail service and right-of-way in the northwest region is "excess" and therefore expendable.

County officials and businessmen from the entire northwest region gathered for the workshop sponsored by Michigan State University Extension Service to be briefed on the railroad plan.

"The importance of rail in the region depends on how you use it," John Hodge, MSU cooperative extension supervisor, told the group.

"I used to think the rails were kind of a declining thing."

Recent Data

But, he said after reading some recent data, he changed his opinion.

For example, Hodge said that in 1972, more than 780 billion ton miles were covered by rails. Then in 1973, the figure jumped to 847 billion.

"The question is, what do we do?"

Bernie Ferres, Public Affairs Specialist for MSU, said the Rail Reorganization Act signed into law early this year created two non-profit rail corporations under the Interstate Commerce Commission.

New Association

The first organization, U.S. Railway Association, was responsible to take eight bankrupt railroads and determine which line could be taken and remain profitable.

After making a study and issuing a report on October 28, the second organization, Consolidated Rail Association, would take the recommended lines and operate a profitable system.

Under present plans, she said about 2,272 miles of Michigan track has been declared as potential access. This would mean approximately one-third of the state trackage.

Michael Davidson of the Rail Service's Office of Public Counsel told the group that subsequent to the May rail abondonment hearings, several developments have taken place.

Entirely Legal?

Primarily, the attorney said there seems to be some question whether or not the Act that allows rail abandonment is entirely consititational.

In addition, Davidson said Penn Central is appealing to the Supreme Court on the grounds they are not receiving due process in property being taken from them.

Another legal action that could delay rail abandonment, Davidson said, is a House bill to extend the time for holding public hearings on rail reorganization.

"The railroad problem will be here tomorrow, but perhaps we can get closer to the problem," said Regional

Rev. E. Francis Denay of St. Mary's Church Has Transferred to Manistee after 21 Years

By FRAN MARTIN

The Rev. E. Francis Denay, pastor of St. Mary's Church here for the past 21 years, has been transferred to St. Mary's church at Manistee, effective Aug. 13.

His successor will be the Rev. R. Dale Magoon, pastor of St. Mary's of the Woods at Kalkaska and the mission of St. Aloysius at Fife Lake.

Among the other transfers announced at the same time, the Rev. Msgr. Victor P. Gallagher, a native of Beaver Island, has been transferred to St. Bernard's church at Alpena from the Immaculate Conception parish in Traverse City.

The Rev. Father Denay will be guest of honor at a reception to be held at St. Mary's school hall at 2 p.m. Sunday under the direction of the Legion of Mary.

The Little Flower Guild and St. Mary's Rosary Altar Society will be in charge of refreshments and the dining room, while Mr. and Mrs. Edward Baday will head the program committee.

During his last 21 years in Charlevoix, he initiated an extensive building program that has resulted in a new school to replace the two-story frame building that had been in use since the turn of the century.

In addition, he saw the construction of a new church and rectory besides relocation of the Convent and acquisition of property for a school playground.

Earlier this year he was named vicar of this area of the Gaylord Diocese.

A native of Pinconning, the Rev. Fr. Denay was ordained Feb. 12, 1933, at SS Peter and Paul church in Grand Rapids after completing his studies at St. Joseph's Seminary in Grand Rapids and Kendrick Seminary in St. Louis, Mo.

Council Approves Lease

Nearly six months of arguing over Charlevoix's new lease for commercial docks ended Monday when Charlevoix City Council signed a three-year agreement with the Beaver Island Boat Company.

In approving the lease, the council stipulated it would restrict commercial boats, other than those belonging to the Beaver Island Boat Company, from loading and unloading passengers and automobiles.

However, the council did indicate it would allow commercial vessels to use the two city berths for transporting freight as long as it did not interfere with the Beaver Island Boat Company's scheduled trips.

Council plans to adopt a freight dock usage fee schedule in the near future for those boats not included in the lease agreement that goes into effect Aug. 6.

New Rescue Group Formed

Beaver Island will soon have a Coast Guard Auxiliary.

There has been no organized search and rescue group on the Island since the Coast Guard Station was closed some time ago.

Beaver Islanders sought help from the Charlevoix Coast Guard Auxiliary in organizing the group, and Donald Luedke, retired Coastguardsman of Charlevoix, attended a preliminary meeting there recently.

The Beaver Island Auxiliary has a nucleus of eight members, including six pilots, four boats and three airplanes. Among the members is another retired Coastguardsman, John Gallagher.

People who live surrounded by water, as Beaver Islanders do, know the need of rescue facilities, as well as water safety training, Luedke says.

The Coast Guard Auxiliary is a voluntary branch of the Coast Guard. Members are trained by the Coast Guard, which passes along its expertise.

Horton Bay Announces Old Country Fair Time

Parents who would like to show their children what it was like back in "the good old days on the farm" and others who never had the experience will have a chance to attend an old-fashioned country fair next Saturday on the church grounds in Horton Bay.

According to Raymond McCraney, president of the Boyne Valley Organic Gardening Club which is sponsoring the event, there will be a bee hive exhibit showing how honey is made, a demonstration of maple sugar production, and a showing of old home utensils and farm tools.

Horse-drawn farm equipment will be on display, as will small animals such as rabbits, chickens, lambs, and a calf. Some of these will be for sale.

Also for sale will be home grown produce, homemade jams and jellies, bread and butter, as well as handmade aprons and other useful articles.

There will be games for the children and amusement for all.

The fair will open at ten in the morning and close about three in the afternoon. Admission is free.

THERE SEEMS to be some question over what is going to happen to the Jordan River Valley in the future. The Department of Natural Resources' Forestry Division is attempting to develop a plan that would protect the natural qualities of both the valley and river from civilization. However, some people insist that the area be left open for vehicles to travel through.

DEADMAN'S HILL

Jordan River--Is it Dead?

Charlevoix County's placid Jordan River Valley is being flooded with a deluge of environmental threats.

With the future of the valley now resting in a delicate balance, the Department of Natural Resources is attempting to keep the 18,000 miles of state forest lands tipped toward a natural state.

But there seems to be some question whether the state agency can prevent man from overtaking the natural habitat.

Concern about random camping and motor vehicle misuse prompted the DNR to call a public hearing last week to discuss protection of the forest area through a rigid recreational use plan.

In essence, the plan would establish hiking, bicycle and cross country trails along the designation of specific camping sites.

Another chief aim of the plan would be controlling car traffic through the park by closing some roads that wind along the 15 miles of the Jordan River.

The DNR proposes to close Penny Bridge Road (Forest Drive) eastward to the Jordan Road and terminate the Alba Road west of Penny Bridge.

The other alternative would be removing that section of Forest Drive and also closing Harvey, State and two other unnamed roads.

Local residents object to the move because they say it will deny access to some of the better hunting and fishing areas in the state forest.

But the DNR claims it is the only alternative to maintaining the integrity of the valley.

Increased traffic along river roads has caused erosion and litter problems.

In addition, the number of campers in the area has grown from 75 in 1967 to 3,000 last year.

While the state proposes to increase nonvehicular uses (hiking, cross-country skiing), officials are without state funds for a complete program.

Camping areas, for example, cost between $40,000 and $50,000 per site to develop.

"We want to do something," Dennis Vitton, forestry division landscape architect, says.

"We want to take some positive steps."

Since they lack adequate funding, the DNR architect says his department is discussing more immediate steps to preserve the forest.

First, they will attempt to get a director's order allowing them to force motorcycles and trail bikes to travel only on county roads.

Secondly, department officials said they hope to eliminate random camping throughout the forest area.

Vitton said his department was pleased with response at the public hearing last week in Bellaire.

"I was very much impressed," he said.

"I was happy with the responses we got."

Red Rayders Marching Into Shape With Season Opening Band Camp

Some 140 Charlevoix youngsters swing into action this week when the Charlevoix High School Red Rayder Marching Band begins its fifth year under the direction of Gary Stutzman.

During the past four years, the band has gained prominence throughout Northern Michigan.

The band begins its season this week with five days of concentrated practice to bring the band up on all the latest routines, music and styles.

This year's camp will include the Peshtigo High School Bulldog Marching Band, who arrived August 4.

The Peshtigo band, under the direction of Bruce Kroken, is a 50-piece group headed by a total of 18 girls in its colorguard and majorette units.

Kroken has been instrumental music director for the past six years and is a 1964 graduate of Charlevoix High School and graduated from Northern Michigan University in 1968.

Both bands will be getting instruction from Tim Lautzenheiser, band director at the University of Missouri-Columbia.

Assisting Lautzenheiser will be brass, woodwind, percussion and choreographer specialists.

During the week, the bands will produce a marching show using drills, dance steps, animated formations and featured selections they learn at the camp.

Old Coast Guard Station

St. James Gets A New Home

ST. JAMES — The former Coast Guard lifeboat station and dormitory at the entrance to Paradise Bay has been leased by the St. James Township Board from the Department of Natural Resources for use as a township hall.

The building also will be used as the meeting place of the Beaver Island Coast Guard Auxiliary, which is presently being organized.

Township Supervisor James Janda said the property actually was sub-let from the DNR, which leases it from the 9th Coast Guard District. He said the lease was negotiated with the full approval of the Coast Guard, which phased out its lifeboat station on Beaver Island in September of 1972.

The one-year lease is renewable every June 18, the same time as the DNR renews its lease of the property from the Coast Guard.

The township is leasing the property without cost, but it will maintain the building and grounds in addition to providing quarters for the Coast Guard Auxiliary, which held its first meeting two weeks ago.

Until now, the St. James Township Board has met in the basement of the medical center.

The new building includes a large room formerly used as a dormitory, kitchen, day room and office.

Janda said the building will be furnished with federal government surplus from the Civil Defense warehouse in Cadillac. He estimates the cost of furnishings at about $100.

The building has an oil-hot water heating system, which will make it feasible to use even during the winter.

Janda said the Coast Guard left the interior of the building in immaculate condition. The exterior of the building will be given a fresh coat of white paint.

The newly organized Coast Guard Auxiliary unit will assist CG regulars in search and rescue missions, conduct courtesy boat inspections, offer instruction in safe boating techniques and assist the Coast Guard wherever and whenever help is needed.

BEAVER ISLAND

ST. JAMES Township has leased the former lifeboat station at the entrance to Paradise Bay as the township hall, according to Supervisor James Janda. The township board formerly met in the Beaver Island Medical Center. Nearby stands the harbor lighthouse which welcomes mariners to St. James.

Chx. Residents Urged To Consider Merging

Residents in both Charlevoix Township and the City of Charlevoix should consider Dale Boss' recommendation that the two governmental units merge into one.

At last week's city council meeting, Mr. Boss suggested the two communities merge because of a growing number of duplicated services by the two units.

Mr. Boss points out that both units now maintain separate fire departments and water systems.

Eventually, he says, it will be necessary to consider joint sewage facilities and police protection.

Boss along with others emphasize that the time to make a move is now before too many of the utilities become firmly established.

To go through with a program as Boss suggests would require present elected officials to give up their positions.

In addition, it would require both township and city residents to psychologically change a frame of mind that they are either township or city residents.

We agree with Boss that now is the time to consider making a merger move.

The advantages and disadvantages should be explored and perhaps presented in a public forum for residents to consider.

Dog Pound Break-ins Pose Serious Threat

Recent break-ins and release of animals from the Charlevoix County dog shelter create a potentially dangerous situation.

Dogs are picked up not only because they are strays but because they have bitten a person or are acting in a strange manner.

Both the "biters" and those with suspicious actions are kept under observation in the shelter to watch for signs of rabies. Two of the dogs released last week were in such a category.

If those dogs are rabid and if they bite another person or animal, the disease could spread. In fact, a whole epidemic could result.

The suspicion that the dogs are being released by persons who "can't bear to have them in that awful place" may or may not be with foundation.

If would-be animal lovers are responsible, they should look beyond their sympathy for the impounded dogs and consider the pain, sickness and possible death their actions could cause.

Charlevoix County is responsible, in part, for the break-ins. The building has not been secure and it is not under surveillance except for a very short time each day.

The Board of Commissioners must soon come up with plans for some kind of an animal shelter that not only will be secure, but which will meet State standards for such facilities.

Congrats Sheppard

Congratulations to Glen Sheppard of Charlevoix, publisher of "The Northwoods Call", a newspaper devoted to environmental matters, who will receive an award from the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency next week in Lansing.

Sheppard, who is a former editor of the Charlevoix Courier, has been cited for his work in the field of environmental education through the printed word.

In all, 13 Michigan persons and institutions will be given awards for their "endeavers in the struggle for environmental improvement."

Television station WWTV in Cadillac will receive an award in the field of environmental education by electronics.

We are more than happy to have you in our community. For the right to live here, enjoy the beauty, and the facilities of the area, you pay taxes.

This does not give you the right to double park, make improper turns, ignore emergency vehicles, firemen, ambulances, etc.

No one here has the time or the inclination to cater to a group who stay here 60 days or less and expect to do as they please.

I disagree entirely with your attitude and I will not remain anonymous as you are.

Clockwise

By BOB CLOCK

It is a pity Vice President Gerald Ford wasn't endowed with common sense along with his rugged good-looks and football physique. He's always saying something that makes me wish he had never left sports.

A case in point was his inane charge that the House Judiciary Committee was playing politics by voting 27 to 11 in favor of the first article of impeachment against President Nixon.

After the vote was tallied, newsmen pressed Mr. Ford for a comment. The best he could do was assert that the vote was politically motivated because all 21 Democratic members of the committee agreed that the President probably was involved in the Watergate cover-up. He refused to acknowledge that six of his former Republican colleagues in House also voted in favor of impeachment – more than one-third of the GOP membership of the committee.

As an editor-in-exile, I had an opportunity to watch a good deal of the televised impeachment debate. And if members of the U.S. Congress ever rose above party politics it was during those awesome deliberations. I felt awfully proud that we, the American people, have had the good sense to send such fine, sensitive men to Congress.

There was deep pain on the face of most committee members – political friend and foe of the President alike – as they told why they were voting for impeachment. Their voices would often catch in mid-sentence, eyes would moisten and several speakers appeared at the point of emotional collapse.

Watching from my sanctuary on Beaver Island, I had to keep running to the kitchen for a glass of water or a shamrock sandwich just to keep my own emotions in check.

Certainly the impeachment of the President is not a matter to be taken lightly. It is an act which, by its very nature, must be above the petty quarrels, the political maneuvering and party back-scratching which, unfortunately, are behind so many governmental actions.

The fact that the House Judiciary Committee has voted for impeachment is no more titillating to Democrats than it is to Republicans. The only person who seems to be thoroughly enjoying the impeachment process is Walter Kronkite. The rest of us feel as bad about what is happening as members of Richard M.'s own family.

Unfortunately, Vice President Ford apparently lacks the sensitivity to view Watergate and attendant scandals as anything more than traditional political hi-jinks. He did a grave disservice not only to the Judiciary Committee but also to the house as a whole when he belittled the painstaking efforts committee members have given to the Watergate investigation and ather shady dealings by President Nixon and his cronies.

It is hard to imagine what – if anything – Mr. Ford has in mind.

Is it possible that he is attempting to ingratiate himself to President Nixon in return for having been appointed as successor to the ill-starred Spiro Agnew.

Is it possible that Mr. Ford did not listen to the impeachment debates or read the transcripts from the Oval Office revealing a revolting parade of covert, illegal and downright immoral acts by the President and his cohorts?

Can it be that the vice president condones the manner in which Mr. Nixon has conducted himself in the office of president?

These are some of the questions I am going to be pondering in the weeks ahead as the impeachment of Richard Nixon moves to its inevitable conclusion.

It is too much to hope that Mr. Ford will gain in wisdom, intellect or sensitivity before he becomes president this fall. But we can hope that he will have sufficient compassion for the American people to surround himself with astute and knowledgeable advisors from both parties – men and women of sufficient moral rectitude to lead us out of the morass of deceit and self-serving politics that has been our legacy from Mr. Nixon.

Blind Man Asks For Help From Charlevoix Residents

There are over 275 people in Michigan that are blind or are progressively going blind. The sad fact about this is that these people can regain 100 percent of their sight. I hope to impress people with the need, the importance, the meaning and the know-how in donating one's eyes or someone's close to them (husband's, son's, daughter's etc).

I have been legally blind for 3½ years and have been waiting for 20 months–over 1½ years–for a call from the opthalmologist saying he has received a donor eye suitable for a corneal transplant: the grafting of the clear part of the eye from a donor to a person with a deformed cornea. I have heard about a woman in Grand Rapids who has been waiting well over two years and three people in the Port Huron vicinity who have been waiting a year each. There are also 250 more spread throughout the rest of Michigan in Detroit, the Tri-Cities, Lansing and other cities.

Eyes can be donated even if somebody wears glasses. This does not affect the use of the clear corneal tissue. Even some totally blind people's eyes can be used.

Does removal of the eyes mar the appearance of the Body? No. Enucleation (removal) of eyes is carefully done and modern morticians close the eyes so skillfully that they appear normal.

Eyes for transplants have to be removed within 2 to 4 hours after death. They are good for corneal transplants for approximately 24 to 48 hours. Any eye from a person between 1 and 50 years of age can be used even those who have had certain types of operations. In the event a patient is not available within the time limit needed to use fresh tissue, the eyes are shipped to Eye-Banks to allow for redistribution else where.

If a donated eye is diseased or cannot be used for grafting it is carefully studied in research to help find causes and cures for blindness. If there is any doubt as to whether the eye is suitable or not, I suggest this judgment be left to the eye surgeon.

It certainly takes a lot of courage and self-restraint to think and help someone else when a close member of the family suddenly dies. It is obviously a very traumatic situation and that is why one must think about it now and ready himself before the shock of death happens.

It is extremely difficult to approach the father and mother whose son has just died and ask for his eyes. It seems callous and crude to disturb the people but the fact is the son is dead; nothing will bring him back; and what could be a better eulogy than to have part of this person "live" and be used to complete and help fulfill another humans' life instead of rotting away in a grave.

It takes an enormous amount of sagacity and courage to comprehend the resulting good of donating eyes at death at a time when most people fall into shock or dispair. I cannot help but think how the 22 year old donor of a transplant of mine felt. I was told he was suffering from multiple sclerosis and wasn't expected to live to be a teenager; and yet when he entered the hospital for the last time he knew he might be helping a blind person to have the one thing he never had–a normal healthy life.

Stumping the Woods

...With Ollie O. Stump jr.

Uncle Charlie was kindly in a gruff way, little given to sentiment. Though he labored sunup to sunset on his small farm he was never too busy to answer my incessant questions. Being unable to read, his answers and explanations were the simple logic of a simple man.

Before any college grad dismiss him too lightly let him answer the question I posed at the age of six and see if he can satisfy the curiosity of one that young as clearly as did Uncle Charlie.

"What makes a whistle whistle?"

While he researches the library lets give Uncle Charlie a listen. Uncle Charlie was mending a harness at the time; one of the many routine farm chores which left the mind free for thought. Laying aside his awl, he rumpled my hair and suggested,

"Lets take a walk down to the spring."

Leisurely, he searched among the poplar growing there until he found a straight branch the diameter of his gnarled thumb. From it, he cut an eight inch length with his pocketknife. With a gesture he invited me to a grassy seat beside him on a sunny knoll.

Slowly, deliberately he alternately wet the bark with his tongue and tapped it all around with the handle of his knife until it slipped off with a gentle twist. He cut a slight notch into the naked branch about two inches from one end and shaved off a sliver to give a flattened surface from the notch to near the end of the stick.

After slipping the bark back to its original position he cut a slightly smaller mating notch into it. With an indulgent smile he handed it to me saying,

"Blow on it."

It gave out a melodious note. Painstakingly he showed me how to turn the bark slightly to produce tones of varying pitch. He demonstrated that by enlarging the notchs the range of the notes could be changed.

It is surprising how these childhood experiences come to life fifty years later when time forces us to slow down and mend a bit of harness, so to speak. Now we are provoked to deeper thought by what was merely a childish marvel at the time.

We wonder if some primitive man, clad in the animal skins of a past millenium, fashioned such a flute for the crude beginnings of our timeless symphonics as well as our modern rock. There might not be musical instruments had he not wasted time indulging an idle curiosity.

Perhaps, even yet in our more hurried times, we might discover new worlds through the inquisitiveness of a child if we forego the use of three words in answer to their questions. I'm too busy!

If it Fitz — Don't Pray Too Much

By JIM FITZGERALD

A bunch of sincere people wearing sandwich boards recently spent 3 days on the U.S. Capitol steps, praying for President Nixon. They call themselves the National Prayer and Fast Committee, which naturally reminds me of my old basketball team.

I was brought up to believe God answered all prayers. I didn't begin to have doubts until I went out for 8th grade basketball. The coach was a priest and the first thing he told us was to make the sign of the cross before shooting each free shot.

What about field goals?

The coach explained about the 2-handed set shot, which was the only way to make field goals in those days. In the action of the game, a player had to keep both hands ready to shoot at all times. There simply wasn't time to make a decent sign of the cross which (for all you heathens) requires that the crosser touch his forehead, chest and both shoulders with his right hand while saying "In the name of the Father and the Son and the Holy Ghost, Amen." This was pretty hard to do while dribbling.

However, it was different at the free throw line. A player had plenty of time for prayer before shooting. And coach would tolerate no sloppiness. A kid had to pause plainly at all 4 stops–forehead, chest, left shoulder and right shoulder–and his lips had be be seen moving. If a kid made a careless circle instead of a cross, with no stops, he risked immediate benching.

The awful thing was, I made the slowest cross on the team, and my words were louder then cheers-but I still missed most of my free shots. God wasn't paying attention. My faith began to leak.

I took my troubles to the coach. He explained God knows best. If my shots weren't going in, it was God's will and I should accept it. And when I prayed for God to put my ball through the hoop, I should always add, just before the Amen, "That is, if it is OK with You, God."

Which made my sign of the cross take even longer. And still the free throws wouldn't go in. God's will was against me. Finally I asked the coach for permission to kneel before shooting but he said no, it wouldn't be fair to rest of the players for me to hog all of God's attention.

Toward the end of a miserable season, cynicism began to take hold. "Are you sure God really cares whether I make my free shots?" I asked the coach.

He looked both ways before answering. "Don't tell the Bishop, but I'm not even sure God comes to all our games," he admitted. "If I were you, I'd quit asking God to make your free shots. There are more important things than scoring. You should ask Him to at least let you hit the backboard."

From that day on, my life with God was easier. I finally realized it was wrong and foolish to ask for too much. And that is the advice I would give to the National Prayer and Fast Committee.

They shouldn't pray that God will smite the impeachers and enshrine Richard Nixon as our King forever. Rather, they should ask God to at least let Julie Nixon Eisenhower keep her job as an editor at the Ladies Home Journal.

Meet Charlevoix

Meet Dr. Ranger

One major question facing Charlevoix area residents is what to do with waste.

While Charlevoix has its own waste water treatment facility, many neighboring townships do not.

As a solution, some residents are pushing for a joint sewer and authority between Charlevoix and Charlevoix Township.

The Charlevoix Courier probes the possibilities with engineer Dr. Arthur Alvin Ranger of Charlevoix Abstract and Engineering.

Dr. Ranger was educated at the University of Michigan where he received his bachelor's, master's and doctor's degrees.

He served in the U.S. Air Force as Captain and has been employed at Continental Aviation, the University of Michigan, Purdue University and the Office of Naval Research in their London, England branch offices.

Born in Charlevoix, he is the son of the late Arthur Ranger and Mrs. Ralph Wade.

He and his wife, Patricia, have four children.

COURIER: What is a sewer and water authority?

RANGER: It's a mechanism which can be developed or created to allow communities and townships to share water services and sewer services.

COURIER: Are there any towns in the area right now which presently have an authority?

RANGER: The one that we know best is the Harbor Springs. The technical name is the Harbor Springs Area Sewage Disposal Authority and this doesn't incorporate the provision and distribution for water but simply for the collection of sewage and sewage treatment.

COURIER: What appears to be the present situation with Charlevoix Township, Charlevoix and surrounding areas?

RANGER: Well of course Charlevoix has an operating and relatively new treatment plant and although the city has some special problems concerning separation of sanitary sewer and storm sewers, they have a system which is operating and approved by the state whereas the Charlevoix Township which is in the most pressing need of services, is completely without any type of sewage collection or sewage treatment facility and would like very much to take advantage of the Charlevoix system.

COURIER: Has there been any other interest expressed by other townships?

RANGER: I can't really say as a matter of fact that I know of other interest, but I think there is some interest there.

COURIER: What kind of authority or arrangement could be made between Charlevoix and Charlevoix Township?

RANGER: Well, if the people in the city of Charlevoix, particularly the city council and the city mayor and the township board of Charlevoix Township choose to enter into an arrangement they would simply have to resolve to incorporate or adopt articles of incorporation which would create a sewer authority or water authority, or an authority which had the power to handle both sewer and water problems.

COURIER: What would be the cost involved for each of these participating units of government?

RANGER: Well I have discussed this point with Alden Wanger from Harbor Springs who is presently involved in the Harbor Springs Area Sewer authority and he claims that the cost to the individual will go down as the service area goes up, or in otherwords the larger number of individuals involved the lower the cost per individual user on the system. So the residents of the City of Charlevoix would stand to gain financially from what it cost them say on a monthly basis to have their sewage collected and treated and the people in the township would benefit because they would have the advantage of using the system.

COURIER: Well, isn't it necessarily true then that the City of Charlevoix would be assuming all the burden for what they would put into the facility they presently have?

RANGER: Absolutely not. As a matter of fact this would all be worked out at the time the authority was created. The City of Charlevoix, it's residents, the people who have invested in the system that already exist would be reimbursed on an equitable basis for the tax dollars they have already invested in their own system so it shouldn't be looked at as if it is a give away to Charlevoix township or any other unit that might join with the authority. I sincerely believe there is an economic benefit to all by creating an authority.

COURIER: How does one go about establishing an authority such as the one that we have been discussing between Charlevoix and Charlevoix Township?

RANGER: Well it would simply be a matter of the Council, mayor of Charlevaix and the Township Board resolving and approving to adopt articles of incorporation which would bring an authority into being and then the authority would have to be staffed with representatives from the city and from the township who would then in turn hire individuals to actually run the authority for them.

COURIER: How long would it be before an authority could be formed between the two governments saying that most of the people here express an interest?

RANGER: Oh, I think it would be a fairly straight forward matter may be a month or two at the most, simply a process of education of the people of the township an education of people in the city as to what they would become involved in should they chose to join in such an arrangement once people are convinced that there are advantages to the formation and the creation and use of such an authority, I believe with sufficent public approval it could be adopted within a short period of time.

COURIER: Do you care to speculate what would happen to the surrounding area if an authority isn't formed?

RANGER: There is a remote chance that some townships if they are unable to join the the City of Charlevoix for example would be forced some time in the future to join together by themselves and create their own sewage collection and treatment and facility. In some instances that may make economic sense because they might have to run lines that would be too long for the City of Charlevoix. But certainly for Charlevoix Township it makes a great deal of sense to join with the City of Charlevoix in solving their problems.

Letters to the editor

Dear Mr. Winter,

I want to compliment the Charlevoix Garden Club with their offering of flowers for the Venetian Queen. They were very beautiful and most appropriate.

As I belong to the Federated Garden Club of Michigan and know that the Charlevoix Garden Club is a non-profit organization and must operate on a limited budget, it is a gracious expression of beauty from them, to add to your Venetian Night Celebration with flowers for the band stand.

In these troubled times it is enlightening to for a while to be able to forget our problems and enjoy our stay in the wonderful city of "Charlevoix, the Beautiful." Thank you.

Yours truly,
Mrs. Herbert Calfield

Classes Ease Childbirth Pains

Childbirth can be difficult if you don't understand what is taking place.

For both the mother and father, it can be a lot of unnecessary emotional stress.

To relieve some uncertainty, the Women's Guild of the Charlevoix Area Hospital is sponsoring a childbirth program that starts September 17.

The seven-week program, under registered nurse Janet Ready of Charlevoix, will include everything from instruction on basic nutritional needs to caring for the newborn infant.

"Usually, these programs are given by the State Health Department," says Jane Kipke of Charlevoix, who will assist with the program.

But, she explained that since Petoskey offers the program the state feels they can't justify a neighboring program in Charlevoix.

"But, we felt it was worthwhile because we have a hospital here," she continued.

Earlier this summer, Mrs. Kipke said Mrs. Jan Ready presented the childbirth program idea to the hospital guild.

"They inspected it and will give their financial support, as well as guidance on how to work it out," she said.

Charlevoix doctors have also given their support to the program.

"Most people have the idea it is for a married woman having her first baby, but we also want to stress it is for unwed mothers or for those having their second and third child."

Two seven-week series are planned–the fall series, starting September 17; and the spring series, starting March 18.

Classes will be held at the Charlevoix Area Hospital's Physical Therapy Room for seven consecutive Tuesdays beginning at 7 p.m.

After the first introduction session and explanation of nutrition and exercising, the class will review female anatomy and physiology in the second session.

The third session will deal with the effects of pregnancy, both emotional and physical, while the fourth session includes normal labor and delivery followed by a tour of both the labor and delivery rooms.

In the fifth session, a doctor will lecture and answer questions.

The last two sessions examine infant care as well as social, sexual, financial and emotional adjustment to the new member of the family.

To register for the program call Millie Brown 547-9829.

County Planning Commission Postpones Deliberations On Special Zoning Concept for Dr. Hoffman's Land

By BOB CLOCK

ST. JAMES---The Charlevoix County Planning Commission postponed in-depth deliberations of Planned Unit Development (PUD) of Dr. Walter Hoffmann's 52-acre tract at the junction of U.S. 31 and Boyne City-rd. when it became apparent that members need more time to bone up on the relatively new zoning concept.

Under PUD, the property will be zoned to include a variety of widely different uses, ranging from commercial establishments, single and multiple family dwelling units, a motel, and a quasi-medical care facility.

The commission agreed to meet to discuss the development at 5 p.m. Aug. 15 and break for dinner before meeting jointly with the Charlevoix Township Board and the Township Zoning Board at 8 p.m.

Commission member Donald Berlage of Charlevoix was frankly critical of PUD zoning of the Hoffmann property.

"Do people in this sparsely populated area have to be crammed into this sort of thing?" he asked County Planning Director William Mercer.

–PUD Concept

Mercer said the PUD concept, which developed in Kalamazoo, seems to be the answer to providing multiple facilities and services in rapidly urbanizing areas such as Charlevoix Township. He pointed out that all phases of the development are included in the original plan, "roads, curb and gutter, water, sewage, etc."

Mercer also stressed that the commission was discussing the PUD concept in general, as proposed by Charlevoix Township, and not the Hoffmann Development in particular.

He added that one alternative could be development "hither and nigh" throughout the township.

Beaver Island

The commission held its first August meeting on Beaver Island last Thursday at the invitation of commission member Ed Wojan. The group traveled from Charlevoix to St. James on Berlage's boat and had supper at the Circle M before convening at the Beaver Island School.

Making the trip with Berlage were Bill Ohle of Horton's Bay, Dennis Jason of East Jordan, Arthur Steinbrecher of Boyne City, Tom Wieland of Charlevoix, Ed Rebman of Boyne City, Mercer of Bay Shore and Chairman Walt Thorsen of East Jordan.

Accompanying the group were Mrs. Barbara Feis of Charlevoix, secretary of the Planning Department, and Ralph Richardson, a member of the County Board of Commissioners who works closely with the planning body.

Other Business

In other business the commission:

---Endorsed zoning proposals submitted by Bay and Melrose townships. The two ordinances differ from the proposed county zoning ordinance in several respects. For example, both townships have dropped the minimum square footage of homes in agricultural areas to 720 square feet, which will permit the use of 12 by 60 foot mobile homes. Melrose also has made provision for 500-square foot homes, provided they are not occupied more than three months a year. In addition, Melrose will permit nonconforming use structures to be rebuilt, even if they are destroyed completely.

–Approved without comment a zoning ordinance submitted by Hudson Township.

–Approved minor wording changes in the Charlevoix Township Zoning Ordinance.

Michigan Shores Residents Query Quarry

By PEG OHLE

The Zoning Ordinance passed by Hayes Township last month is still under fire from property owners in the Michigan Shores subdivision.

Basis of their complaint is the Industrial zone classification given to a piece of property owned by Hodgkiss & Douma, adjoining Michigan Shores.

Previously, this property had been zoned Agricultural.

This would create considerable nuisance of noise, traffic and dust, and could also affect the quality of well water and use of septic systems, Michigan Shores residents say.

Query Alternatives

Thomas D. Smith, Toledo attorney who has a home in the subdivision, was queried by the Courier last week about the complaint Michigan Shores property owners have lodged with Hayes Township.

"Needless to say, we are greatly disturbed with what appears to be a total disregard by the Hayes Township Trustees of the property rights and values of our subdivision," he said.

"At the time of this writing, the exact course and direction of our continued fight to protect our property rights is being considered in several alternatives."

"I think it is in the best interest of the entire community that they be informed about our problem," he added.

A possible solution to the problem has been suggested by Bill Mercer of the Charlevoix County Planning Commission.

Possible Solution

Mercer's idea is that Michigan Shores Property owners and Hodgkiss & Douma should get together and have a survey made at the top of the ridge between the two pieces of land, and that a buffer strip be created and measured from the survey line.

This would create an area about 200 feet wide, and the 40 to 50 feet trees in the area would give further protection to the homeowners.

Some problems relating to water wells and septic tank systems in the subdivision mining in the disputed area have been set forth by F. Dean Mikulski, Director of Environmental Health with the District Health Department.

Ground Water Threat

"The mining of sand and gravel up stream from existing or proposed water wells may affect the ground water aquafer...Depending upon the depth of the extraction process, the need for dewatering may take place, lowering the upper aquafer to a depth which may make existing or proposed wells inoperative in the subdivision," Mikulski stated.

"The use of gasoline, oils, phenols, or other compound used for dust control on industrial sites may degrade the physical quality of the upper aquafer down stream, rendering it unsafe for domestic usage."

"There is the possibility that merely moving earth or constructing service roads on the industrial site would affect the ground water table. The removal of large areas of vegetation up stream presently demanding ground water also may alter the ground water table downstream, causing a rise in ground water table elevations."

The concerns noted above cannot be evaluated on a short term basis, according to Milukski. "The potential problems may not be created until the total Michigan Shores subdivision is developed. Irregardless, this ultimate impact on the development could be the responsibility of the governing municipality (Hayes Township)."

Mikulski also noted that if problems of individual sewage disposal systems arise after development takes place, the Michigan Water Pollution Control Act holds the municipality responsible for the pollution of ground or surface waters.

John Ferguson, Zoning Administrator for Hayes Township, and Leo G. Burnett, Sr., Township Clerk, were sent copies of Mikulski's report before the Zoning Ordinance was passed by the Township Board of Trustees.

Area Churches Begin Bible School Classes

Five local churches are again presenting a Community Vacation Bible School for children between the ages of 3 years through the sixth grade.

This is the second year that the Baptist, Congregational, Episcopal, Lutheran and Methodist Churches have combined staffs to make a Christian educational available to area children, regardless of denomination.

August 19 through 23 the children will meet at the Congregational church, 8:45 to 11 a.m., for bible studies, music and crafts. On Friday morning, Aug. 23, parents will be invited to attend an informal program and view the completed craft work.

Mrs. Frances Tollas will be in charge of music for the VBS and Mrs. Kay Smith is general coordinator.

Charlevoix Music Fest To Rock City's Timbers

A "Rock-A-Thon"? You bet. On Saturday, August 17th the Community Reformed Church Youth Group will host their first annual "Rock-A-Thon". This rock-a-thon is to help support the Bergman Center (workshop).

The money raised will be used to buy the much needed supplies that are necessary to it's function.

If you're wondering just exactly what a rock-a-thon is, it's not a rock concert. It's a day when a group of kids will get out their rocking chairs and rock away for hours on end.

Members of the youth group will be going around and asking for money pledges by the hour. In other words, for every hour that a particular person rocks, the amount of money will be increased, by multiplying it by the number of hours rocked. The rock-a-thon will be held in the Community Reformed Church parking lot on August 17th from early in the morning to late night. Your help is needed to make this rock-a-thon successful. For more information or if you would like to donate please contact Jan Boss-547-2157 or Heidi Dove - 547-2117.

Railroad

Planning Director Bill Rowden.

Oppose Pot

He said his 10-county region was working closely with the state government in railroad planning and opposing the Department of Transportation Railroad abandonment plan.

"The interest of our commission has developed a high percentage at this time," he continued.

He said that his commission insists that before abandonment takes place, a viable study be made.

"We first received some negative responses from some of our Chamber of Commerces and some department heads of our state agencies," he said.

"But, this attitude has changed."

Discuss Alternatives

After finally getting a hold of the federal plan, Rowden said his commission held several public meetings to discuss alternatives.

In fact, on August 19, the commission will again focus on railroads by discussing the problem with key local legislators, Rowden said.

"We want to have this first hand," he said.

"The future is already up to us."

However after Rowden spoke and another MSU specialist discussed possible rail service alternatives, several people indicated they were tired of discussing alternatives and wanted to organize a plan of attack.

"We don't want any more talk," one member said.

"We want action."

Blasts 15 Homers

Topside Leads League

By CHUCK WRIGHT

Topside, already the first round champions, continued its dominance of the men's slow pitch league by routing American Mold 14-5 and Andy's Tire World 19-6.

In the two games, Topside blasted 15 home runs, collected 48 hits, and only gave up 15 hits. Al Currey had three home runs and was nine for ten while Kraag Lieberman cracked four home runs in leading the offensive attack.

Against American Mold, Topside built up a 14-0 lead before American Mold could get on the scoreboard with five runs in the sixth. Bob Crain and Mike Webb combined their pitching talents to hold American Mold to only 8 hits.

Home runs by Roger Crain and Randy Faust were American Mold's only real offensive thrust.

Lieberman hit his first home run with Currey on board in the very first inning. After a single run in the second inning on singles by Stu Coleman, Bill Joy, and Currey, Lieberman then hit his second homer of the game in the third, a solo blast.

Topside really started rolling in the fourth. Ralph Doan led off with a home run and with one down, Currey followed with another home run. Then three straight singles by Bernie DeVries, Terry Blissett, and Lieberman set the stage for Tim Carey's first home run of the game.

In the fifth, Topside belted three more homers. Doan got his second of the night with Crain aboard. Curry hit another solo shot, and Carey followed with another one with DeVries, Dan McKenzie, and Kirk Currey on base.

Tennis Talk

By CHUCK WRIGHT

Nobody can be a complete tennis player without a solid net game. This includes the volley and the overhead smash.

While the ground strokes in tennis provide the basis for any good tennis game, the net game is the ultimate in attack. When a player goes to the net, he should do it with one purpose in mind--to win the point outright. There is no place for defensive tennis when you are at the net.

Any individual player who fears the net or is timid while at the net, should stay away altogether. But if you are going to develop your talents to the fullest you should learn to play the net well.

Even great players like Chris Evert and Jimmy Connors, the champions at Wimbledon this year, had to develop their net games before they could become true champions.

Playing net is not difficult once a little confidence is developed. The key is to remember that you are on the attack.

The basic backhand (or Continental) grip should be used for both the forehand and backhand volley. When the ball approaches you, you should automatically step toward the ball with the foot on the opposite side of the ball. Therefore, if the ball is coming to your right (the forehand side for right handed players), you should step into the ball with your left foot.

This footwork will make you turn your body sideways to the net. This is the same movement you use when you hit a ground stroke (forehand or backhand).

As you are stepping into the ball, your racquet should be taken slightly back. You do not take a full backswing because you are not trying to stroke the ball. You are trying to block the ball in an aggressive manner.

The head of the racquet should be above your wrist. This allows you to block the ball effectively. If the racquet head is below the wrist, you will discover that you will be constantly hitting up on the ball. This results in a weak, defensive shot.

With a stiff wrist, you should make contact with the ball six to ten inches closer to the net than any part of your body. This makes you attack the ball. As you make contact with the ball, block it in the desired direction. Do not follow through on the shot.

The volley is designed to be a winning shot. You are attacking the ball as it crosses the net, and you should be able to block it in any direction you desire. Even if your opponent manages to get your well-placed shot, he should be so out of position that he will be at your mercy for the next shot.

The volley gains its power from the momentum of your body going into the shot with a stiff wrist combined with the velocity of your opponent's shot. It does not gain its power from a big swing.

Remind yourself to keep your racquet in a high ready position. This makes it much easier for you to convert from a backhand to a forehand volley. You do not have much time at the net for adjustments and the shorter distance you have to move your racquet the better.

You are in command at the net. There is no place for weak volleys when you are trying to be the aggressor. Attack!

Attorneys Hear Kelley At Mackinac Meeting

The public's right to know what its government is doing and the necessity for open public records were discussed by Michigan Attorney General Frank J. Kelley last week at the annual meeting of the Prosecuting Attorneys Association on Mackinac Island.

Some excerpts from Kelley's talk follow:

"There is a basic contradiction between the idea of a democratic government and the practice of governmental secrecy. Such secrecy undermines the ability of the people to make intelligent and informed decisions about their leaders."

"In the....case of Burton v. Tuite, 78 Mich 363 (1889), Justice Morse spoke for our Supreme Court and affirmed the common law right of a member of the public to examine public records. 'I do not think that any common law ever obtained in this free government that would deny to the people thereof the right of free access to and public inspection of such records.' "

+ + +

"This position was repeated in a 1928 case which involved a convention here on Mackinac Island. A newspaper publisher sought to obtain records from the Auditor General regarding the expenses for a Governors' convention hosted by the state of Michigan. The request was refused. The case went to the Michigan Supreme Court, which held: 'If there be any rule of the English common law that denies the public the right of access to public records, it is repugnant to the spirit of our democratic institutions. Ours is a government of the people. Every citizen rules+++. 'Undoubtedly, it would be a great surprise to the citizens and taxpayers of Michigan to learn that the law denied them access to their own books for the prupose of seeing how their money was being expended and how their business was being conducted. There is no such law and never was either in this country or in England+++.' "

+ + +

"This position was affirmed by the Court of Appeals in 1968 and restrictions on access were discussed. (Booth Newspapers, Inc. v. Cavanagh, 15 Mich App 203 (1968).) In that case the court held that such restrictions must rest on legislative or judicial determinations that access will result in harm to the public interest."

+ + +

"Based on these cases, I have in numerous opinions addressed to state agencies and public officials, insisted upon the release of information to the media and the public.

"I have, for example, advised the Civil Service Commission that the class book detailing the rate of pay for each classified state employee must be released to other employee organizations.

"I have advised the legislature that the names and salaries of officers and employees of institutions of higher learning must be made public; and that if the public interest requres that such information be withheld, the burden of justifying the confidentiality of the record is on the custodian of the record.

"In 1969 I stated in an opinion to a county prosecutor that the criminal records of convicted individuals are not confidential with the exception of sexually motivated crimes. I have also said that investigative reports compiled by the Department of Licensing and Regulation relating to licensees must be disclosed to the public when investigation is completed."

Westenbroek-Reus Exchange Vows

Mr. and Mrs. James Reus

After a wedding trip to Colorado, Mr. and Mrs. James Leonard Reus will make their home in Ann Arbor where the bridegroom is enrolled in the University of Michigan School of Medicine.

The couple was married July 27 at the Community Reformed church here.

The bride is the former Sherry Lee Westenbroek, daughter of Mr. and Mrs Roger Westenbroek. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Leonard Reus of Walloon Lake and the late Dr. Reus.

Arrangements of white gladioli and daisies and lighted candelabra formed a setting for the double ring service performed by the Rev. Albert F. Mansen in the presence of 300 guests. Mrs. John L. Boss, at the organ, played a program of music by Beethoven and Bach and accompanied Dr. Roy Davis of Big Rapids, uncle of the bridegroom, who sang "Bless this House" and "The Lord's Prayer".

The bride was escorted to the altar by her father. She had chosen for her wedding a gown of cluny lace fashioned with an empire bodice with double rows of narrow venise lace, bishop sleeves and a slightly gathered skirt accented at the waist with a wide velvet ribbon. Complimenting the gown was a cluny lace headpiece and a three-tiered chapel length veil of imported illusion edged with cluny lace. She carried a spray of bouquet of garden flowers.

Susan Westenbroek was her sister's maid of honor and Shelly Hansen, Susan Reus of Walloon Lake, sister of the bridegroom Janet Dinwiddie, and Jean Carey were bridesmaids. Sally Westenbrock served as junior bridesmaid. Styled with high necklines, fitted midriffs and short puffed sleeves, their gowns, made by the bride's mother, were in rainbow colors of blue, yellow, pink, green and peach polyester crepe with ivory Mexican rope. All carried sprays of garden flowers.

William Sisson of Three Rivers assisted the bridegroom as best man and groomsmen and ushers were Michael Westenbroek and Mark Westenbroek, brothers of the bride, Paul Van Perls of Oak Park, Ill., brother-in-law of the bridegroom, and Warren Winters of Ann Arbor.

Mrs. Westenbroek chose a gown of blue mistique for her daughter's wedding. Her corsage was of pink roses. Mrs. Reus, mother of the bridegroom, wore a gown of beige and white and a yellow rose corsage.

A garden reception followed at the home of the bride's parents. Assisting were Darcy McCandless and Cari Westenbroek, cousin of the bride, Jan Boss, Judy Potter, Laura Staublin and Ellie Carey. Janet Reus served as hostess and Mary Reus and Kathleen Reus, sisters of the bridegroom, attended the guest book.

Wedding guests were present from Michigan, Illinois, Colorado, Ohio, and New Jersey.

Mrs. Reus, Mother of the bridegroom, hosted a rehearsal dinner at Stafford's Bay View Inn Friday evening.

Library notes

There are new books on the Library shelves and the following titles are all highly recommended.

The Dogs of War was written by Frederick Forsythe who also authored The Odessa File and The Day of the Jackal, two of the most popular adventures and intrigue stories we're had for a long time.

Knocking off a bank or an armored truck is one thing, but knocking off an entire republic requires a certain style, and in this new book, Forsythe comes up with a sinister venture that has to be considered a new classic of terror and enthrallment.

Paul Gallicó has been around for a long time. The Snow Goose, which was published in 1944, is still considered one of the most perfect short stories in modern literature. The Poseidon Adventure became an immediate best seller. Now Mr. Gallico has given us The Boy Who Invented the Bubble Gun. It involves a nationwide search for a run-away boy, and a psychopath who holds the lives of a busload of people in his grenade-filled hand.

The boy, Julian West, is a headstrong young prodigy who decides to travel from San Diego to Washington, D.C. in order to patent his invention. Armed with tuna fish sandwiches, two changes of underwear and socks, and a toothbrush (but no toothpaste), his adventure has repercussions in the Kremlin and the Pentagon, and he ends up becoming the nation's most unlikely hero. A delightful and highly entertaining novel which is suitable for everyone.

A book by John Creasey never stays on the shelves very long, and we predict that The Masters of Bow Street will be as popular as all of this author's other highly successful books have been.

The date is 1739, the place, London. A notorous highwayman is to be hanged, and among the screaming mob of pickpockets and thieves, are three people whose lives are joined because of their special personal interest in the execution, and their descendants, from generation to generation will be caught up in the struggle between justice and crime, law and order, peace and violence.

This outstanding novel tells about the creation of Scotland Yard and the London police, as seen through the lives of two familes.

Return Journey, a haunting and memorable novel by R. F. Delderfield, tells of a young man growing up in a small English seaside resort town in the 1920's, engaged to a pretty, sensible local girl, but momentarily dazzled by the possibility of higher things.

He becomes involved wth the local doctor's wife, whom he thinks he is rescuing from a bad marriage.

Gradually he discovers that their love affair is destroying the lives and peace of the people around them, and that life is more dangerous and complicated than it seems, even in small towns.

Like all of Delderfield's fiction, the book is brilliantly readable, the work of a master storyteller whom the N.Y. Times has compared to such giants as Galsworthy and Trollope.

Fritzgo is one of the most charming books we've ever read. Written by Paul Wilkes, it is the story of a wild dog in Central Park.

Many people saw Fitzgo running after yellow cabs, rummaging through garbage pails, finding warmth under parked cars, and keeping a careful distance from everyone. He was just another dog, a nuisance – a wild animal to be feared.

This is the story of the taming of Fitzgo, the taming of an old man, and the taming of a young couple (the author and his wife). It's a tale of trust, of patience, of cruelty – and love.

Wimmer-Lindgreen Married July 27

Miss Joanne Carol Wimmer and Dale T. Lindgren were married July 27th in Our Lady Queen of Peace Catholic Church in Madison, Wisconsin. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Wimmer, 508 May St. Charlevoix, Michigan. His parents are Mr. and Mrs. Tennis Lindgren of Axtell, Nebraska.

Following a reception and supper at the Ivy Inn, Madison, the couple departed on a wedding trip to Nebraska and Canada.

Venise lace edged the neckline and bodice of the floor length gown, styled by the bride. The lace was repeated on the train and camelot headpiece which held her three tiered veil. White carnations and aqua daisy pomps were accented by baby's breath in the bridal bouquet.

Mrs. Kenneth Alt, Oregon, Wis, was matron of honor for her sister. The aqua gown worn by the bride's attendant was designed with a scoop neckline and elbow length puff sleeves. She carried a bouquet of aqua and white daisy pomps and baby's breath.

Joseph Britton, Minnesota, was best man. Edward Wimmer the bride's brother, of McFarland, Wisc., and Nick Breitbach, Madison, served as ushers.

The bride is employed as a Licensed Practical Nurse at St. Mary's Hospital Medical Center in Madison. Her husband attends the University of Wisconsin College of Agriculture.

The couple will make their home in Madison.

Sewage Treatment Facilities Helping

Lake Charlevoix Has Clean Bill of Health

The health of Lake Charlevoix is good.

That is the report from District Health Department Number 3, of which Charlevoix County is a part.

F. Dean Mikulski, registered sanitarian who is Director of Environmental Health for the Department, says that the updating of sewage treatment facilities in Boyne City, Charlevoix and East Jordan has helped promote the good health.

So also have legislation requiring holding facilities on water craft and stringent enforcement of septic tank regulations on waterfront properties.

Demolition of the tannery in Boyne City eliminated some pollution problems, and the cooperation of the East Jordan Iron Works with the Water Resources Commission in overseeing discharges has also been a factor in keeping Lake Charlevoix clean.

Home Pollution

The major pollution problem on Lake Charlevoix now is with homes, mostly summer dwellings, which have inadequate septic tanks and drain fields. High lake water has made some facilities, which once met Health Department standards, polluters.

Some septic tanks which in 1968 were 100-feet from the lake's high water mark are now within 35 or 40 feet of the lake.

Last week Mikulski and other members of the Department viewed discharges of sewage from two summer homes directly into Lake Charlevoix. In one case the owner was ordered to construct a new sewage system, and in the other case it was directed that the premises not be occupied until a new sewage system is installed.

Not Enough Room

Unfortunately, in some instances there is not enough room on the property to install proper septic tanks and drain fields. The fact that there has been an operable septic tank and drain field on a piece of property for several years does not mean that it will be good forever. Drain fields do wear out and must be relocated.

In this connection, Mikulski suggested that anyone contemplating purchase of property, developed or undeveloped, not only on the lake but anywhere in Charlevoix County, secure a "Property Evaluation" report from the Health Department.

Such a survey report costs $25, but it will detail the limitations and possible problems of any piece of property as far as sewage disposal and well water is concerned.

Even away from the lake there may be problems with bubbling springs, and clay soil is not conducive to good percolation.

Warns Property Buyers

"Those who are buying a piece of property because it has a nice stand of cedar trees may be in for trouble", Mikulski points out, "because cedar trees usually grow in swampy land."

It is usually not local people who get caught up in sewage disposal problems. They know the regulations and why they must be enforced.

City people who have summer homes here often do not realize there is a difference between a septic tank system and the sewer system that are used to at home. "If a toilet flushes, they think everything is all right," Mikulski says.

Disposal Regulations

Those coming from other parts of Michigan and from other states, even from rural areas, find Charlevoix County's sewage disposal regulations more stringent than what they have been used to. The number of lakes and streams in the county makes such regulations necessary.

"Most of the property on Lake Charlevoix suitable for development has already been developed", Mikulski says. "That doesn't mean that a single-family dwelling can't be built here and there, but large developers will find it increasingly hard to meet sanitary disposal and well water requirements."

Larry Levengood, environmentalist for the Health Department, reports that this year the Department has made about 85 Land Evaluation reports in the county. The number of septic tank permits issued is down slightly from last year, indicating some slow-down in building. However, the number of septic tank repair permits is up, showing that many of the old systems are wearing out.

"We have come a long way in water pollution control," Mikulski says, "but we still have a long way to go!"

Dogs Let Loose At Dog Facility

Vandals have broken into the Charlevoix County dog shelter in Boyne City twice within the last ten days and released the animals that were being detained.

The first entry was gained by throwing a cement block through the window of a door, and the second break-in was accomplished by tearing another door off its hinges.

There were nine dogs in the shelter at the time of the second break-in, according to Roger Moses, animal control officer who works out of the County Sheriff's office.

The dogs that were let out were described as a black and tan hound pup, a Walker, an Irish setter, a beagle pup, a short hair collie mixture, a Siberian husky, two Labrador pups, and a German shepherd.

The husky and shepherd were found shortly after release, but the others were still being sought.

Moses said that he replaced the broken door with a new one and is now locking the doors of individual cages.

The Charlevoix County dog shelter has been under fire from the local Humane Society and others for some time. Lack of security in the isolated building is one of the complaints.

Mrs. Anthony Wojan, Jr. of Charlevoix who is president of the County Humane Society said, "We must have a shelter that is guarded and one which can provide clean surroundings for the dogs."

The shelter has been broken into several times in the past, and some suspect it was done simply to release the animals from the inadequate building.

Damage caused by dogs running loose can become costly to the county. Last month the Board of Commissioners authorized the payment of $290 to a farmer whose cow had been killed by a stray dog.

It's Green Around

Charlevoix County is a "green" county. Approximately 19 percent of the land in the county is owned by the State of Michigan, and most of these 50,174 acres is designated as State Forest land.

Tax on these lands, commonly called a "swamp tax", is paid at the rate of 50 cents an acre.

A breakdown of state-owned land by townships reveals that Evangeline has the least, 17 acres, and Chandler the most, 16,718 acres.

Other townships and the number of acres of state-owned land in each are: Bay, 238; Boyne Valley, 3,378; Charlevoix, 454; Eveline, 49; Hayes, 151; Hudson, 3,305,

DOWNTOWN CHARLEVOIX, CADILLAC AND TWO LOCATIONS IN TRAVERSE CITY

Officials Quietly Scrutinize City-Township Merger Stand

Local officials are talking cautiously these days about the potential for a merger between Charlevoix and Charlevoix Township.

No one is ready to take a position.

However, there are indications that some are scrutinizing the possibilities.

A recommendation that the two communities consider merging into one governmental unit came several weeks ago from a Charlevoix Township resident.

Should Reconsider

Dale Boss, who opposed annexation of Charlevoix Township by Charlevoix, urged city council to reconsider the possibilities even though township residents soundly opposed the move five years ago.

According to Boss, the township was against annexation because they would have no representation on council.

However, Boss says the times have changed and if the township were guaranteed equal representation they might buy the merger.

Since his presentation to council two weeks ago, city officials have been quietly mulling over possible alternatives.

Delicate Matter

Charlevoix Mayor Ed Hansen says the proposal is a delicate matter to handle when having to consider the different viewpoints involved.

So, he says the best thing to do is to find an acceptable format and get people involved with evaluating it.

Hansen said the move didn't seem impractical at all.

"There's been quite a lot of pressure for a new charter," he said.

He suggested the best thing to do would be to appoint a commission, who would have to do their homework.

"Inherent in our government is the ability to change if it is in the best interest of our government welfare," Hansen continued.

Examine Carefully

But, Hansen emphasized that the situation would have to be carefully examined and the people would have to be educated before such a move could take place.

"I think it's going to have to be a must and I'm all for it," said Councilwoman Jeannine Wallace.

"There doesn't seem to be any other way than to merge with the township."

She said the duplication of services, such as fire and water, is not only stupid, it is expensive.

"It's just sheer stupidity to duplicate all the services," she said.

"We would all benefit."

Benefit All

But, Mrs. Wallace said she disagreed with Boss' proposed dissolving of governments to form a new one and suggested it would have to be done through a charter commission.

Mrs. Wallace also called for a joint meeting between the township and city.

Charlevoix Township Supervisor Oscar Stroud said that four or five years ago the entire township voted against it under the conditions at that time.

So from that minute on, Stroud said he ran the township as township government.

"Until the township residents change their thinking and they have spoken, I'm personally not going to initiate anything to change it," he said.

Products to Sell

He said that as far as water, sewage treatment and electricity, the city has a product to sell if they want to.

"This shouldn't have anything to do as far as merging," he said.

"The merger, I believe is feasible, but I don't think it would be possible at this time."

Charlevoix County Commissioner Ken Stnley said basically merger is a good idea.

"It has great potential," he said.

"The city and township are dependent upon one another.

"What helps one, helps the other."

Sees No Problems

The Charlevoix resident said he didn't see any problems other than it would take someone to start it and do a lot of work.

"They have found out they can do more together than they can alone," he continued

Developer Seeks Variances For Condominium Carport

> "It's going to be a murderous problem that ought to be taken care of now."
> --Gordon Freedman.

Residents objecting to the Dunes' newly constructed carports will be able to confront the condominium developers August 26.

Charlevoix City Council agreed Monday to hold a special board of appeals session to consider a variance for the carports now partially constructed.

The move came after objections from neighboring property owners that the developer did not have a permit to construct the structure located in front of the Charlevoix condominiums.

Potential Hazard

Primary concern was over the potential safety hazard the carport, located only three feet from city sidewalks, would cause during the winter when attempting to plow snow.

Some say after the snow had accumulated, it would force school children to walk in a very dangerous stretch of highway.

"We really didn't come up with any conclusions," said Councilman George Plumm about an earlier meeting held with the contractor at the site location.

Councilman Ray Wood said he had received many negative telephone calls about the construction.

"I too have had alot of calls–all questioning the legality of it," added Councilwoman Jeannine Wallace.

Dangerous Sidewalk

Mrs. Wallace said that while she could sympathize with the developer's position, she was worried about children being able to walk the sidewalk during the winter.

"I think it is too close to the sidewalk," she continued about the carport's proximity to the sidewalk.

Charlevoix resident Gordon Freedman asked if a carport was permissible and was told it was not under the old city zoning ordinance.

Two weeks ago, Charlevoix City Council ordered its city administrator to issue a cease and desist order because the carports were in violation of the zoning ordinance.

"It is definitely in violation," interjected Mrs. Wallace.

No Carport

While Councilman Plumm said he didn't like the developer not being told about it earlier, Mayor Ed Hansen said the original plans submitted with the application for a building permit did not include a carport.

"It doesn't belong there," Wood said.

Mayor Hansen said he has had about 10 calls, but most of them were objections to the carport hiding the beautiful new condominiums.

Freedman, who indicated he was representing citizens from the entire city and not just the north side, said he was concerned about people walking safely up and down the street with the carport standing where it is now located.

Variance Appeal

Developer Ron Steffes said at this point he wanted to know if he could appeal for a variance and explain his problems.

After informing the council that they could not act affirmatively at last night's meeting, City Attorney Don Berlage said he was concerned about the number of condominiums and the possible sale of guest rooms, which would push the original number of units above the number allowed in the original building permit.

"There's some problem here as to what is going to happen to those units physically," he said.

He suggested that the council may have to consider several variances.

While Steffes said he was concerned about safety, he wanted to know why nothing had ever been said about the neighboring condominium's carport location to the sidewalk.

New Sidewalk

The developer also offered to put in a new sidewalk at his own expense.

He added that he was wrong about putting in a covered parking area without a proper permit.

Freeman suggested the council look into the possibilities of constructing a

Among 17 Coaches

Kipke Named to Hall of Fame

By FRAN MARTIN

Ray L. 'Stub' Kipke, retired Charlevoix high school football and basketball coach, will be among 17 coaches to be inducted into the Michigan High School Coaches' Association Hall of Fame at Central Michigan University on Sept. 7.

Coach Kipke was officially named to receive the honor during the State High School basketball championships in March, 1973. The MHSCA, however, inducts new members into the Hall of Fame only every three years.

The installation dinner honoring the inductees will be held at the University Center Ballroom at CMU at 5:30 p.m. on Sept. 7.

Coach Kipke spent more than 20 of his coaching years in Charlevoix, where he was head coach of not only the Varsity but the Junior Varsity squad.

He came here in 1928 from southern Michigan and, with the exception of one year, coached until he decided to retire in June, 1950.

However, he continued to teach mathematics until 1964.

Under his tutelage, Charlevoix teams gained state-wide recognition. In the late 1930's his basketball teams first gained great prominence and during the last years of the 1940's his football teams held a record of 39 consecutive wins in league play with only two ties, both with East Jordan when the team was coached by Dan Devine, present head coach of the Green Bay Packers

His cage teams held comparable records during the same period when they lost only seven games in four years, four of these in tournament play.

These were his successful years.

"People seem to remember only the good years," Coach Kipke said recently when discussing his most recent honor.

He went on to recall the slim years in the '30's when his football teams didn't do too well and the 1940-41 basketball season when Charlevoix never won a game.

"Records mean little over a long period of time," he concluded. "If you have the material you have good teams. If you don't, well, there are the slim years and we knew plenty of those".

Long before Coach Kipke began setting records, Charlevoix high school paid tribute to him by naming its teams the "Rayders", spelled with a 'y' instead of the conventional 'i' for his given name.

Later, at the time of his retirement, the athletic field was named in his honor.

As a coach, Kipke has known the distinction of having one of his prep

Prepare For Fall

School Board Sizes Up Staff

By FRAN MARTIN

The Charlevoix Board of Education approved the employment of two high school counselors Monday night.

Mrs. Gayle Kaczynski and Charles A. Bentley were engaged as counselors in the high school.

Both are graduates of Eastern Michigan University.

Mrs. Kaczynski has a B.A. degree in Art and an M.A. in Counseling. She taught at Spencer Elementary School at Whitmore Lake from 1971-73 before coming here.

Bentley comes here from South Meriden, Conn. His B.A. major was in math and his minor in psychology. He received his M.A. degree in counseling and has 32 semester hours beyond his master's degree.

He was Assistant Dean of Students in the College of the Virgin Islands 1967-68; in the Student Affairs Office at the University of Connecticut 1968-69 and counselor at the F.T. Maloney High School in Meriden, Conn., 1969-74.

Michael Herrington of Charlevoix was hired as an aide in the Auto Mechanics shop and David Anderson as the Building Trades aide.

Anderson, who moved to Charlevoix recently from Detroit, filled a similar position with the Detroit Board of Education for five years and has a four years carpenter apprenticeship.

The board also approved the required state and federal regulations regarding free and reduced price lunches. It was announced that milk will now be available to high school students under these programs effective this year.

A request for a deviation from graduation requirements made by Melanie Boeck was denied.

Miss Boeck, who would have been a senior at the local high school during the coming year, has now moved to Virginia. Because she needed only one credit in Government, she asked that she be allowed to take this subject via a correspondence course and receive a diploma from the Charlevoix High School.

Her request was denied because such arrangements must be made when the student is a junior and because she has several choices that will not interfere with her completion of high school elsewhere.

The resignation of Nancy Ryswick as Spanish teacher at the high school for the past three years was accepted with regret. She is leaving the area to be married.

The appointment of Barry Anderson as Vocational Education director to succeed Mrs. Sandra Fassett who resigned earlier was approved.

Commission Hears About Drug Program

The Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners heard from Shiela Hawkins regarding the Drug Awareness program Monday.

Ms. Hawkins appeared before the board to offer information on the Drug Awareness Center now being operated in Emmet County and to ask for an appropriation to supplement state funds.

She said the program, through the State Health Department, receives 75 percent of its funding or $44,336.

She was asking that the remaining 25 percent be contributed locally through an appropriation of $9,209 from Charlevoix and Emmet counties which are served by the program.

After hearing of the work accomplished by the program, she was referred to the Public Health committee.

Mr. Hawkins said that the program which offers counseling for young people and parents might be moved to Charlevoix county because that is where the greatest need is.

Ms. Wojan, accompanied by David Hershee, an attorney, appeared in behalf of the Charlevoix County Humane Society.

Hershee explained the organization had been incorporated since April and was now seeking a tax exemption.

Mrs. Wojan said that the Humane Society is interested in working with county officials regarding animal control and animal abuse.

The Judicial and Legislative committee recommended an expenditure to underwrite the cost of recording equipment for use in the county building, especially in the courts.

The amount was $1,502.39 to come from the District Court budget.

'Dr. Spock' Plays Traverse

Leonard Nimoy

Star Trek fans will not want to miss the next play at the Cherry County Playhouse as Leonard "Mr. Spock" Nimoy comes to Traverse City to star in the Broadway comedy "6 Rms Riv Vu," August 13 through August 18.

In this adult comedy, Mr. Nimoy plays Paul Friedman, a man who finds himself in the enviable position of being locked in an empty New York apartment with a beautiful young lady.

Since they are attractive young people, they find each other interesting and the fact that they are both married, but not to each other adds to their mutual, yet obviously separate interests.

"Renaissance Man" is an apt deseription of Mr. Nimoy who's artistic endeavors include not only acting but also directing, recording, photography, and writing.

Leonard Nimoy began his acting career on the stage in his home town of Boston. His break finally came on television as bits grew into leads in such programs as Rawhide, The Virginian, and Outer Limits. It was an episode of The Lieutenant that attracted the attention of producer Gene Roddenberry and led to the role of "Mr. Spock" on Star Trek and later to his challening role of "Paris" on Mission Impossible.

Today his credits include directing on Night Gallery and stage appearances across the country in such plays as Cat On A Hot Tin Roof, Man In The Glass Booth, Oliver, and Full Circle, which he premiered at the Kennedy Center and later played on Broadway. Nimoy has also recorded five top selling albums on the Dot label and has written two books of poetry, You and I and Will I Think Of You.

Performances are Tuesday through Friday at 8:30 p.m., Saturday at 5:00 p.m. and 9:30 p.m., Sunday at 7:30 p.m. and a Thursday matinee at 2:00 p.m. For ticket information and reservations call the Playhouse box office at 947-9560, Monday through Saturday 10:00 a.m. till 10:00 p.m. and Sunday noon till 9:00 p.m.

Interlochen Summer Program Ends With Modern Dance Performances

INTERLOCHEN--Two student dance concerts will climax the eight-week program at the National Music Camp–modern dance on Thursday, ballet on Friday, Aug. 15 & 16, at 8 p.m. in Kresge Auditorium.

Choreography is by instructors in the dance department directed by Sheila Reilly. Miss Reilly is on the faculty of Marquette University and the Wisconsin College Conservatory.

Eleven dancers open the modern dance concert Thursday with the jazzy "Loss" by Don Ellis. Su Burns is the choreographer. "Chorale and Fugue for Four Springs and Four Dancers" is choreographed by Richard Burrows to music by Russell Danberg, instructor of composition at the camp.

In "Comewhatmay" a student ensemble improvises at an organ composition by John Boatner. Dance styling is by Holly Catchings. "The Fourth Piece," choreographed by the three modern dance instructors to a taped collage is performed by all the modern dance majors.

The ballet concert Friday is performed to music by the World Youth Symphony Orchestra under the direction of A. Clyde Roller, conductor of the Lansing Symphony Orchestra, and a resident conductor of the Houston Symphony.

Bizet's Symphony in C, choreographed by Miss Reilly, is danced by 34 ballet majors. John Landovsky has given classical Spanish ballet styling to Chabrier's "Espana," with twelve dancers.

The grand finale is danced by all ballet majors to Benjamin Britten's "Young People's Guide to the Orchestra," with choreography by Joseph Kaminskii.

Colorful costumes, dramatic lighting, and a huge, incandescent chandelier for the ballet, will enhance the most expressive and transient of the arts, the union of music with human form and movement.

Family Practice

Young Physican Joins Staff

Dennis Martin Joy, M.D., who has set up practice in Charlevoix is a new kind of doctor.

He is a specialist in Family Practice, a category of medical practice approved by the American Medical Association in 1969. At that time, a committee of the A.M.A. reported that "medicine needs a new kind of specialist, the family physician who is educated to provide comprehensive personal health care."

The need for such a specialist was based on many factors, including "fragmented care by several well-intended doctors often hurried and impersonal, with its inefficiency and high costs."

The family physician is defined as one who has the first contact with the patient; who evaluates his health needs, provides personal medical care within one or more fields of medicine and when indicated refers the patient to other appropriate sources of care while preserving the continuity of his care; who assumes responsibility for his patient's comprehensive and continuing health care and acts as coordinator of his patient's health services; and who accepts responsibility for his patient's total health care, including use of consultants, within a given social unit.

Dr. Joy received his medical degree from the University of Michigan and served his residency in Family Practice at the University of Minnesota.

The University of Minnesota has the largest training program in Family Medicine in the United States. It is a three year post medical program with in-depth training in the traditional specialties of surgery, internal medicine, obstetrics and gynecology, and pediatrics.

Added to the above training is an ongoing experience in family practice group clinics, and in emergency services.

Dr. Joy was born in Stanton. He and Mrs. Joy have two small children.

Should Nixon Have Resigned?

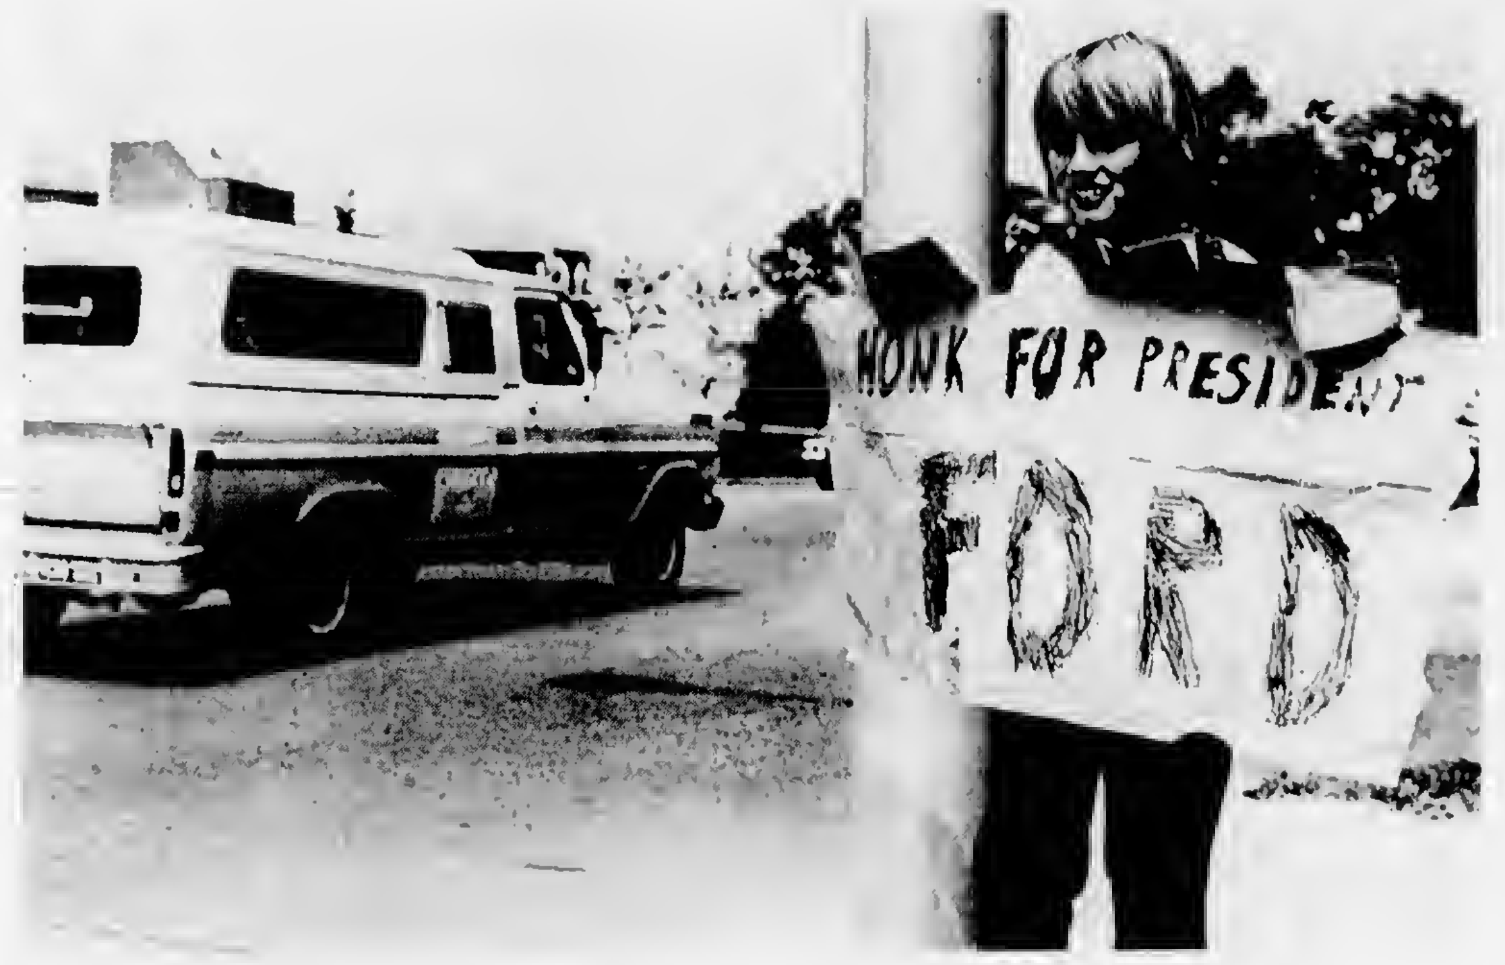
...Charlevoix Residents Thought So



NINE-YEAR-OLD John Logie was out last week trying to get Charlevoix residents to honk for President Ford. He said he had a lot of response from his Thursday morning venture.

Apparently nine-year-old John Logie had some advance information on President Nixon's resignation last week.

The Charlevoix summer resident was out campaigning Thursday morning for then Vice President Ford to become President.

He was standing at the corner of Bridge and Dixon with a large brown paper poster that read: "Honk for President Ford."

Logie, the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Duerr of Charlevoix, was kind of strong about his candidate and explained why he was holding the poster.

"Well, number one, Nixon will resign tonight," he said.

"Number two, he's already trying to make a deal."

Logie says that if Nixon had been allowed to testify, the former President wouldn't have been let off the hook.

"But, if he doesn't, he'll get slugged on his nose."

Besides Ford being more honest than Nixon, the youngster said he likes Ford because his grandfather once dated Mrs. Ford when she lived in Grand Rapids.

While passing cars were honking their horns for Ford, other Charlevoix residents had good things to say about Ford and Nixon's resignation.

"Better late than never," said Barb Fels of the Charlevoix County Planning Department.

"He didn't have any other choice.

"He only did it to save his skin."

Another county employee, Pat Lass, said she didn't even know if she had a comment.

"I didn't expect it this soon," she said about Nixon's resignation.

"I really thought he would hang in longer.

"I thought he had done such a good bluff job."

One man, who was standing outside a gas station, said he thought Nixon had done a wise thing.

"I think it was a wise decision, he had too much to lose if he was fired."

Don Trost, a Charlevoix service station attendant, said he didn't really want to see him go.

"Some of the things he said were wrong, but he was the first President I saw that got knocked down."

Walking along Bridge Street, several residents like Mrs. Roy Rankin of Charlevoix, felt it was the best thing that could happen, but thinks the impeachment process should be continued.

"Otherwise, there will always be a doubt in people's minds whether or not he was guilty," she said.

While most Charlevoix residents were pleased with Nixon's move, some like Robert Dentowol of Central Lake thought Nixon made a mistake.

"I'm greatly disappointed in Nixon.

"I've had every confidence in him."

Dentowol said he thought Nixon had been treated unfairly by the media.

"I do think Ford will make a very fine president."

After Many Years

Loons Looney At Island

ST. JAMES--The loon, whose insane laughter virtually disappeared from northern Lake Michigan in the 1960's, is making a comeback on Beaver Island, according to retired conservation officer Karl Kuebler.

At least one pair of loons is nesting this summer in the marshes of Font Lake, one of seven inland Lakes on the island. Others have been sighted on Paradise Bay just off St. James.

Kuebler says the loon population on the island dropped drastically in the mid-1960s when Lake Michigan became infested with schools of alewives. The alewife is a small, bony fish of absolutely no commercial or sports value.

Kuebler says loons and seagulls would attempt to swallow alewives, only to have the spiney fish stick in their gullets.

"If they could get them down in one gulp, they were all right,'

Kuebler says. "But if the fish stuck halfway down, the loons could never cough them up again and the birds would die."

One day Kuebler says he counted 38 dead loons along one and one-half miles of Lake Michigan shoreline on Beaver Island. Most of the dead birds had ruptured blood vessels in their throats from eating alewives.

Alewives also posed problems for the owners of shore property around Lake Michigan and other Great Lakes. Billions of the little fish would die off every summer and wash up on beaches in odiferous windrows. Property owners buried them by the barrel, only to have a new harvest of dead alewives wash ashore overnight.

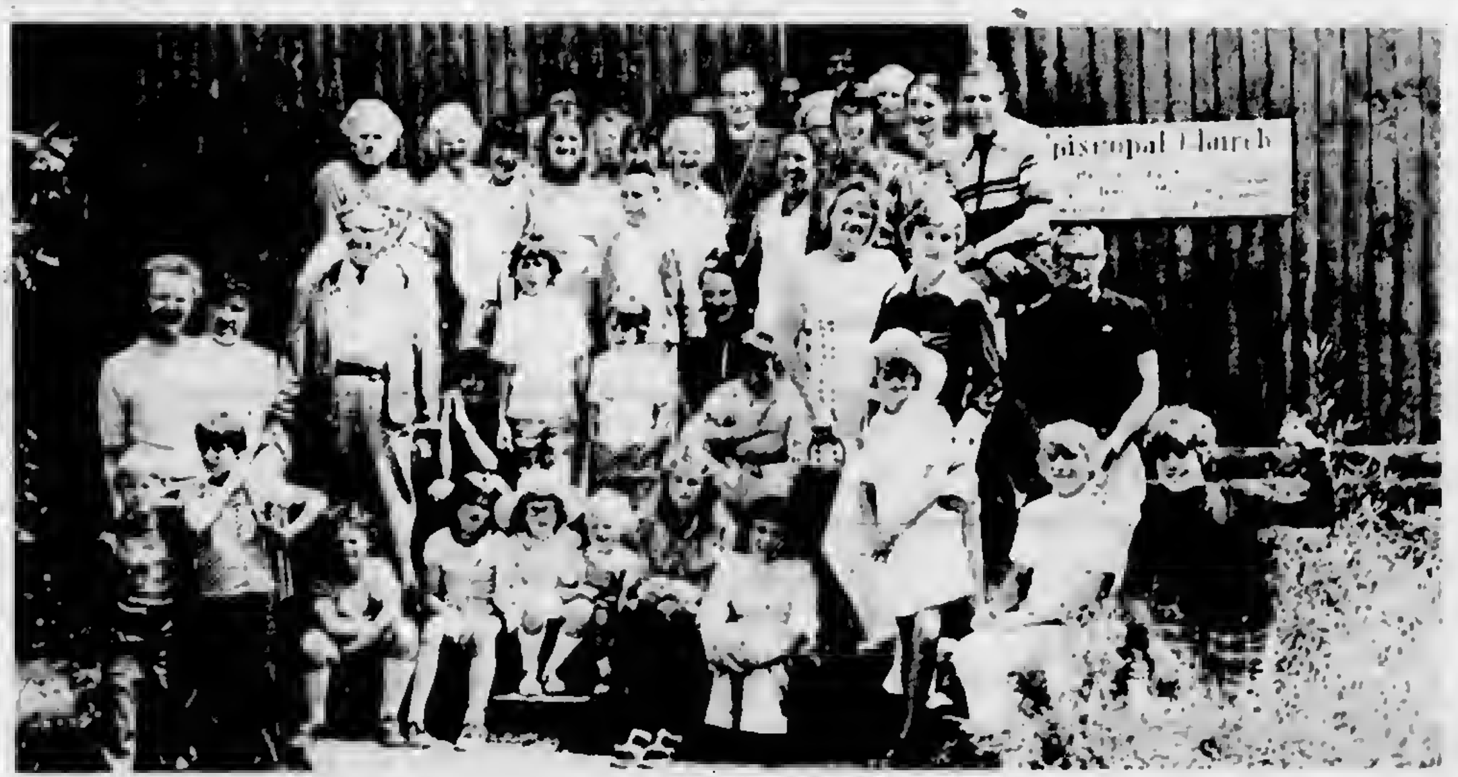
The problem became so acute in 1966 and 1967 that the resort industry suffered.

Then the state and federal governments began plantings or coho salmon and lake trout, natural predators of the alewife, and the problem resolved itself almost overnight.

However, loons were virtually extinct on Beaver Island following the alewife infectation until this summer.

A large, web-footed bird indigenous to the northern hemisphere, loons are most easily recognized by their lonesome, almost human cry of "Look-at-the-Loon." It's enought to send shivers up the spine when heard across the still waters of a wilderness lake at nightfall.

Loons also delight viewers with their comical antics while making long underwater dives in search of food.



EPISCOPALIANS from Charlevoix, Elk Rapids and St. James held their second annual Beaver Island get-together in St. James the weekend of Aug. 4. Mainlanders hosted a picnic on the grounds of the King Strang Hotel Saturday night and the islanders reciprocated with a potluck luncheon after the morning services. Bishop Dudley McNeil of Buffalo, N.Y., officiated, assisted by the Rev. Howitt V. Johnston of Christ Church, Charlevoix. Mrs. Paul Neihaus of South Lyon and Kathleen Clock of Charlevoix were confirmed during the service at St. James Episcopal church.

Civil Defense Prepares Area For Foul Weather

> "Some disasters, such floods, could encompass many counties, even states. State Civil Defense organizations have ways and means set up to handle them..."

The emphasis has shifted from war to natural disasters, but there is still a vigorous, working Civil Defense Department.

Alice Tunison

Its activities reach from Washington to township halls in an effort to prepare every U.S. community to meet the dangers of disasters. It is really "civil preparedness" rather than "civil defense".

Tornadoes, blizzards, forest fires, floods, power failures, train wrecks, hurricanes, nuclear emergencies, earthquakes. All of these vagaries of nature and man can descend upon communities everywhere, and there must be planned programs to cope with them.

There is a Civil Defense Department in Charlevoix County, and it does have set procedures of action in such disasters.

Here, as in other places, the Civil Defense Department is an administrative group. It coordinates the facilities of all governmental units such as fire departments, road commissions, police departments, health departments, weather bureaus, and welfare departments with non-governmental units such as the Red Cross, power companies, and communications networks.

With emphasis on civil preparedness, the most important part of the work of Civil Defense is to help formulate disaster readiness plans, and to keep them current.

Some disasters, such as floods, could encompass many counties, even entire states. State Civil Defense organizations have ways and means set up to handle them through their district and local departments.

There are eight Civil Defense Districts in Michigan. Charlevoix County is part of District 7, and Mrs. Alice Tunison, County Civil Defense Director, is also head of the District group and a member of the executive committee of the State group.

Both the State and Civil Defense Department and the District meet regularly for talks and workshops. In the past few months they have gathered to learn about tornadoes from a representative of the Weather Bureau, and about forest fires from a D.N.R. employee. The next workshop will cover school emergency planning.

According to Mrs. Tunison, there has been some talk of adding an educational program on civil defense to the local school curriculum, to teach children what to do in case of emergency.

Mrs. Tunison devotes half her time to Civil Defense matters, and half to the Prosecuting Attorney's office. She was appointed Director of Civil Defense in 1963, when the former Director, General George Ely, died. She had served as secretary to General Ely and was given the job, she says, "because no one else knew anything about Civil Defense and no one wanted the job."

The Director is slight and quiet-appearing, but after talking with her a few minutes, one finds that she is most knowledgeable and enthusiastic about her job, and could easily be pictured in the midst of an emergency.

Besides being the connecting link between State and local Civil Defense units, Mrs. Tunison spends as much time as she can talking with allied persons about mutual problems--state police, sheriffs, teachers, firemen, the Red Cross, and many others.

She is in charge of distributing Civil Defense literature to all persons and organizations requesting it and hopes that through its dissemination the public will become more aware of what Civil Defense is doing for civil preparedness.

Civil Defense also has many films which will be furnished upon request to organizations.

The Civil Defense Department provides many fringe benefits to the community. One of them is the "Federal Surplus Property Program", through which governmental units may buy surplus items from the Federal government, at drastically reduced prices, with the stipulation that these items be available for use in any disaster.

Medical supplies, automotive products, hardware, paper products, furniture, and power generators are examples of what local units of government might buy through the Surplus Program, but they must be turned over, upon request, if needed for disaster use.

As with people in any business, Mrs. Tunison has a lingering concern. It is that, as land is being developed in this area and forest and hills are destroyed, there is the possibility of creating wind tunnels–a path along which tornadoes could travel.

"We may need tornado shelters some day", she says.

Booklets available to the public through the Civil Defense Department bear such titles as "Tornado Safety Rules," "Spotter's Guide for Identifying and Reporting Severe Local Storms," "Lightning," "Protecting Mobile Homes from High Winds," "Family Guide to Emergency Health Care," and "Emergency Rescue Training."

Bay Township Board Adopts New Zoning Ordinances

A permanent zoning ordinance was passed by the Bay Township Board last Thursday.

The ordinance, which replaces a temporary one under which the township has been operating for the past year, is the result of nine months of work and study by the Township Zoning Board.

Within ten days every resident of Bay Township will receive a copy of the ordinance and additional copies will be available for those who need them.

The Bay Township Board also voted to pay $300 a year to Boyne City for ambulance service to the Township. This figure does not include cost of actual ambulance use, which must be paid for by the person transported.

There was discussion about administration of the State Construction Code which becomes effective in November. The Township Board agreed that it did not have the personnel for such administration and voted to ask the County to assume responsibility.

Other discussion centered around the necessity for improving some Township roads.

Keep Your Eye on Those Garage Sales

MRS. JUDY Liebschulz shows off the boat trailer which was included in her recent rummage sale.

By PEG OHLE

Rummage sales-garage sales-yard sales-basement sales-house sales. They're really all the same but held in different places.

What are they to the public?

To some, they are a way to clothe a family and furnish a home for a few cents on the original dollar.

To others, often collectors, they are a past-time, a way to spend a few hours looking for a "treasure" buried under a heap of junk. To still others they are business, a means of stocking the shelves of antique and second-hand stores.

And, of course, they are a social occasion for some "lookers" who mee-ow over "what she's charging for that thing like the one I threw away years ago."

Odds and Ends

Whatever rummage sales are to any given individual, they have a following that is large and knowledgeable.

The advertisement may read, "Children's, men's and women's clothing, dishes, furniture, odds and ends."

This is the signal for a mother or housewife to go shopping in the hope of finding just what she needs at greatly reduced prices. Clothing for babies and small children is usually a good buy because it is outgrown before it is worn out.

The same is true of older children's "good" clothes, those worn to church or saved for special occasions. Unlike school and play clothes, they are often still in good condition when they are outgrown.

Adults outgrow clothes, too. They become too small for those who pay no attention to diet, too large for those who do diet, and too old-fashioned for those who are style conscious.

Ranging Prices

When such articles that may have cost from $10 to $50 new can be bought for prices ranging from 25 cents to one dollar, no smart sale goer is going to pass them up.

The fact that clothes are such a public thing, that everybody sees them on the wearer, does not bother those who know how to buy. They go to sales outside their children's school district or away from the area where they, themselves, might walk down the street and meet the original owner.

Furniture and other household items are also usually good rummage sale buys. "Do-it-yourselvers" might pick up a table with a badly marred top, an upholstered chair with broken springs, a set of kitchen chairs needing a coat of paint, and a television set that requires a new tuner.

A few hours of know-how devoted to these items can result in the nucleus of a house furnished at a small fraction of the cost of the articles when new.

Dishes to Tools

Such things as dishes, pots and pans, and garden tools are often just as useable when they are 20 years old as they were when new-that is if one doesn't mind a few chips or dents or loose handles. And sometimes they can be bought at sales without these defects at bargain prices.

The collector who uses his spare time looking for his specialty is another type of rummage sale devotee.

Today there are collectors of almost every item from the past; buttons, books, bottles, carnival glass, barbed wire, dolls, jewelry, primitives, embroidery, banks, post-cards, stamps, guns, advertising pieces, graniteware, pill boxes, ladies' fans, crocks, clocks, almost everything that might be found in grand-mother's attic.

Deals and Steals

These collectors may go to dozens of sales without finding anything they want, but when they do it is often at a price they consider a "steal". The unknowing seller was not aware of its value to a collector.

A mention of "antiques" in a rummage sale ad brings out not only the collectors, but operators of antique shops and second hand stores. Such business people will buy anything they can sell at a profit and are usually at the scene of a good sale when it starts.

They shop with a trained eye and often strip a sale of everything good within a few minutes, much to the dismay of the person who may have advertised a two-day sale, and to customers who arrive later in the day.

House Sales?

Who has rummage, garage, yard, basement and house sales?

Many types of people: those who like to house clean, those who just want to get rid of "that junk", those who are moving, those who have inherited or otherwise acquired things they have no use for, those who need money, and those who make a business of such sales.

The house cleaners are those who regularly go through their closets, cupboards, garages, attics and basements and set up sales to dispose of the articles they no longer use.

The second group lets things collect until they don't have room to move, then decide it's time to "clean out the junk."

Moving away from the area or into a smaller house creates a problem for many people. Having a rummage sale is a way to cut down moving poundage for some and a means of reducing inventory for others.

Household Possessions

Many persons are faced with the problem of what to do with grandmother's or Aunt Jane's household full of possessions now that she is gone. A rummage sale is often the answer.

Perhaps the sadest reason for a rummage sale is the need for money. Persons, usually elderly, sell family heirlooms, wedding gifts and almost anything they don't really need for money to meet living expenses.

Those who are in the rummage sale "business" sometimes have sales that last for weeks, or many shorter sales throughout the year. They usually resell, at a profit, items they have bought at other sales or auctions. Regular rummage sale goers know which sales these are and what articles they have.

New Market Place

The rummage sale is a fairly new type of market place. In another generation some of the items sold at today's rummage sales might have been given to a charitable organization, to a relative, friend or neighbor, or just taken to a dump.

Often large and expensive items are included in rummage sales. Not long ago a vintage silver gray Cadillac was part of a sale on Lake Charlevoix and last week a boat trailer was offered at a sale in Charlevoix.

Not all rummage sales are held by individuals. Churches, clubs and charitable groups have found them to be a way of raising money. Articles donated to them become cash for operating purposes.

It makes no matter who has them, or for what purpose. Rummage sales seem to be here to stay, at least for a while.

BOOK SALES are another great way to find bargains. Several hundred residents pawed through the books on sale outside the Charlevoix Library last week for Charlevoix Indian children.

Ask Your Road Commission

What Does Road Abandonment Mean?

Every once in a while you will see a notice in the newspaper headed "Notice of Absolute Abandonment and Discontinuance of a Portion of the Charlevoix County Highway Known as......"

What does it mean? It DOESN'T mean that some night you could drive home and find access to your property cut off.

Road abandonments start with petitions of landowners and occupants of land abutting a roadway that is no longer being used or maintained. If there is any question about the feelings of anyone regarding the abandonment, a public hearing is held and all arguments noted.

The Charlevoix County Road Commission considers each petition for road abandonments individually, and when it is determined that it is to the best interest of the public to abandon a road, a notice headed as above quoted appears in a County newspaper.

Usually the piece of roadway which is abandoned is only a few yards long, was never really developed, or was replaced by another roadway.

Portions of three roads in Charlevoix County were abandoned this summer. One of them was in Bay Township, one in Hayes Township, and one in Hudson Township.

In Bay Township, a portion of Valley Brook Avenue in the old Zenith Heights subdivision was abandoned. It had never been physically developed.

In Hayes Township, Struthers Road, which runs along the railroad track from See Road to Burgess, was abandoned because it was not being used or maintained.

In Hudson Township, a portion of Jenkins Road south of Thumb Lake Road was abandoned for lack of use and maintenance.

Road abandonments do not occur often in Charlevoix County. The above three are the only ones granted this year. Last year there was only one.

There are 731 miles of county roads in Charlevoix County, 553 miles of which are designated local roads and 178 miles primary roads.

Democrats Plan Outing

Charlevoix county Democrats will hold their county convention at the county building in Charlevoix on Friday, Aug. 16, Martin Paul of Boyne City, county chairman, has announced.

Purpose of the meeting, called for 7:30 p.m., is to elect delegates to the 11th Congressional District and the State Democratic convention to be held in Grand Rapids in late August.

DREW WACHLER shows Nancy Powers some of the basic parts of a tennis racket during one of the many tennis instructions he gives through the Charlevoix Recreation Department.

City Recreation

Pro Teaches Tennis

By Karen Berry

Some of you may have seen a blonde-haired man on the public tennis courts.

He usually has about ten or 15 kids crowded around him while he demonstrates the fore-hand, back-hand or serve techniques.

This man is none other than 21 year old Drew Wachler, the teacher of the city tennis clinics.

"I've been coming up to Charlevoix since I was three weeks old," he said "I can honestly say that I've never seen a better place. I really like the people."

Wachler said he started playing tennis seriously when he was 14. He learned about tennis from Jean Hoxie.

"I played tennis in high school, and since then I've been playing and teaching," he said.

Wachler said Charlevoix Recreation Director, Kurt Kipke, and Chuck Wright, tennis instructor, set up the tennis program he is now teaching.

"One really good thing about these lessons is that they're a great way for people who don't want to spend a lot of money on private lessons to learn how to play tennis," he said.

"But if someone wants to really work at becoming a tennis player, they should go to a tennis camp."

"It takes a lot of desire to go for two weeks and do nothing but play tennis."

Wachler enjoys his job because he is outdoors and with people. "I like my work the most when my students seem to be enjoying their lessons," he said.

"When I teach a class with ten or more people in it, I always give each of the students individual attention.

"Most of my students have told me that that's what they like best about the lessons."

Wachler teaches three different types of clinics–beginner, intermediate, and advanced.

"In my beginners class, most of my students have never had lessons before, and some of them have never held a racket before." He continued. "I think that when someone starts a beginners class, they should be about eight, or maybe younger if they're exceptionally coordinated.

The intermediate class varies from people who just took the beginners class last year, to people who have been playing for a couple of years.

Intermediate classes emphasize a higher degree of skill.

"Probably the hardest thing to teach any of the classes is the proper way to serve," he said

"Another thing is for someone to make the transition from a learning situation to an actual game situation."

"Whenever my students practice for a game or just to practice I always tell them to hit against the wall," he said

"When you hit against the wall you get in about 4 times as many strokes as you would hitting with someone.

Wachler teaches the clinics for five to six hours a day, 21 hours a week.

He first demonstrates the stroke and then sets them up so they can practice.

"I go to them each one individually and check their form. I try to mix group lessons and individual lessons together," he said.

Tennis Talk

The overhead smash is the single most offensive shot in tennis. Over ninety percent of all overheads are hit for outright winners, or attempted winners. Without a good overhead smash, any player's net game is vulnerable against the proficient lob artist.

Hitting an overhead is actually very easy. Modeling the stroke after the serve, the key to a good overhead is taking your time. It is very easy to sense the kill and become too eager to hit the ball. The result is a silly mistake on a shot that should have been a winner.

Every player must learn to wait for the ball, especially on the high lob that seems to take forever to come down.

As in all your net shots, use the backhand grip when attempting an overhead. When you see your opponent beginning to hit a lob (you should be able to anticipate the shot by watching his stroke), immediately get into position by turning your body sideways.

Even if the lob is a little to the backhand side, hit it as a forehand. There is no such thing as a backhand overhead smash although you can hit a high backhand volley. The backhand volley lacks the power and control of a good overhead.

Make sure that your non-playing hand is up at shoulder level as you get ready to stroke the ball. This gives you good balance and an excellent line on the approaching ball. Further, the combination of the racquet cocked behind your head and your non-playing hand extended to shoulder level is virtually the same motion as the serve.

Once you have decided to hit an overhead take a full swing at the lob. It does not pay to be hesitant. Make sure that your weight is going forward into the ball as you stroke it. This will give you the desired power with the minimum of effort.

Your follow through, as in every full tennis stroke, should go out in the direction of the flight of the ball. Without this follow through, the shot will lack control. What good is a screaming shot that does not stay in the playing surface?

Above all, watch the ball until you hit it. This will make you take your time and will guarantee that you do not pull down on the shot too early. The most common error in hitting an overhead is looking down an instant before hitting the ball. This pulls the racquet off the line of the shot, and results in mistakes.

Most overheads are hit with at least one foot on the ground. Situations do arise when this is impossible. If the lob is well over your head but you still want to try to hit an overhead, it becomes necessary to leave your feet.

If such a situation occurs, back up as far as possible. When you feel ready to hit the ball, jump off your playing foot (the right foot for right handers). Hit the ball at the peak of your jump. This is a most difficult shot to attempt because it requires perfect timing.

The overhead smash is the most effective single offensive weapon in tennis. Even this stroke requires some degree of consistency, however. Until you feel quite comfortable hitting an overhead, sacrifice some of your power.

Idle Thought: Congratulations to all the participants in the Charlevoix Mixed Doubles Tournament. Your participation in this first year tournament made it a big success.

MIKE BARTS, coach of the Minor League Champion Argonne team, of the Charlevoix Little League, presented individual trophies to his team members recently. Receiving trophies were: Matt McClanaghan, Don Moll, Bill Tillen, Tom Waneck, Gregg Whitley, Glenn Smith, Rusty Williams, William Joy, Rick Barts, Mike Barts and Wade Stoneham. Also receiving trophies, but absent when the photo was taken, were: Peter Cockfield, Mark Mosley and Lance Stevens. Coach Barts was also presented a trophy from his players in appreciation of his leadership throughout the successful season.

Slo-Pitch Action

First State Bank Upsets A & W

In an error-filled game, 1st State Bank upset A & W 14-13 in women's slow pitch action last week. The loss was only the second of the season for A & W.

Only six of the twenty-seven runs scored in the game were earned. 1st State Bank made nine errors and A&W committed six. There were base runners in every inning during the wild contest.

First State Bank was ahead 14-13 in the bottom of the seventh as A&W came to bat. A&W managed to get three base runners aboard in the seventh, but a pop up to first ended the threat and the game.

1st State Bank scored first. After Julie Cristanson and Judy Elzinga both were safe on errors, Jean Sutton walked to load the bases. Robin Pardee then came through with a run scoring single.

A&W came up with five runs in their half of the first. The first four batters, Bobby Sladek, Connie Shores, Holly Garten, and Kathy Sladek, were safe on errors. That led to two runs. After Tiller Otis hit into a force play, Connie Crain doubled to score two more. Crain herself scored on a wild throw.

1st State Bank battled back with three runs in the second, three in the third, and two in the fourth. Key hits were delivered by Lori Skeel and Kit Lieberman.

A&W was not idle, however, as they scored one in the second, two in the third, and two in the fourth. Barb White, Marilyn Cummings, and Bobby Sladek had key hits.

A&W led 10-9 at the end of four innings.

1st State Bank made their move in the fifth scoring four runs with the aid of two errors. Lieberman singled, Elzinga walked, and Sutton singled. With two outs, Galager singled home Lieberman and Elzinga. Pardee and Sandra Wibby both reached first on errors to score the other two runs.

A&W could not score in the fifth. After 1st State Bank scored a single run in the sixth, A&W came through with three runs. Sue Boss and Bobby Sladek singled to start the inning. Shores followed with a double to score Boss. Garten singled and Otis and Crain were safe on errors to score the final two runs of the game.

NOTICE TO CUSTOMERS OF TOP O' MICHIGAN RURAL ELECTRIC COMPANY

Top O' Michigan Rural Electric Company filed an application on June 27, 1974 with the Michigan Public Service Commission for authority to increase rates for electric service by approximately $799,000 annually. The Company also proposes to change the base rate in the wholesale power adjustment clause in the rate schedules to reflect current power costs. The overall net revenue increase requested is approximately 14.5 percent and varies by class of service as follows:.

Single Phase Rate A	12.8 percent
Single Phase Rate A-1	19.0 percent
Three Phase Rate B	13.1 percent
Three Phase Rate C	15.7 percent
Lighting Rates	34.0 percent

Within each classification the percentage increase will vary depending upon consumption levels.

THE INCREASES DESCRIBED IN THIS NOTICE HAVE BEEN REQUESTED BY TOP O' MICHIGAN RURAL ELECTRIC COMPANY. THE MICHIGAN PUBLIC SERVICE COMMISSION MAY EITHER GRANT OR DENY THE REQUESTED INCREASE, IN WHOLE OR IN PART, AND MAY GRANT A LESSER OR GREATER INCREASE THAN THAT REQUESTED FOR ANY CLASS OR CLASSES OF SERVICE.

Since the Company's last rate increase in 1971 the Company's cost of operation, including costs of wholesale power, labor and material, interest, depreciation and taxes have increased substantially resulting in an operating deficit for fiscal year 1973. Since December, 1973 the customer billings have been adjusted for increased wholesale power costs, but these adjustments have not provided sufficient revenues to offset increased costs. The rate increases requested are intended to enable the Company to recover these increased costs and to maintain financial stability.

A public hearing before the Commission on the application is scheduled to begin at 9:00 a.m. on Friday, August 23, 1974 at the Commission offices located at 525 W. Ottawa Street, Lansing, Michigan.

can be yours on
Channel 6
Public Television for Northern Michigan
but, your financial help is needed to make it possible!
CENTRAL MICHIGAN UNIVERSITY

HOW YOU CAN HELP

Informal surveys and conversations with businessmen, educators and civic leaders in the 24-county area indicate enthusiastic support for the WCML-TV 6 project. Central Michigan University's commitment is evident, as is governmental support at the state and federal levels.

A fund-raising effort, coordinated by Central Michigan University's Development Office is now underway. It will be led by volunteers from the 24 counties affected by the new station.

We need your help in this massive effort to bring public television and all its values to northern Michigan. If we are to be successful in raising the Channel 6 tower we need you! We need your financial gift support (many gifts of all sizes will be needed for TV 6 to become a reality) to reach our goal of $250,000 for the project, which figures out to $556 per yard or $186 per foot for the sponsorship of the tower.

You can make a gift of money, stocks, or bonds to:
Central Michigan University—TV 6
If you desire to make other gift arrangements of real or personal property,
WRITE:
Development Office
Central Michigan University
Mt. Pleasant, MI 48859
OR CALL: 517/774-3744

A RETURN ON YOUR GIFT

Michigan Public Act 315 was created to encourage private support of Michigan's system of higher education. The provisions are 1) the gift must be unrestricted in nature, and 2) the credit can be 50% of the gift but cannot exceed $100 ($200 if filing a joint return) or 20% of the tax payment due.

For example, if your gross income is about $10,000 and you claim four exemptions, you could make a gift of $80 to Central Michigan University for an out-of-pocket cost to you of only about $32. If your gross income is $20,000, you could make a gift of $200 for an out-of-pocket cost to you of only about $72.

Editorials/Opinions

Are Michigan Railroads Better Off Abandoned?

What's happening to Michigan's drive to save its railroads?

Apparently nothing.

Area government and business representatives met last week to draw up plans to combat proposed abandonment of Northern Michigan's rail service and came up with very little.

Everyone seems to be doing very little and in less than 10 weeks it will be too late to block the elimination of 2,272 miles of Michigan trackage.

Possible abandonment of all service in the upper half of the lower peninsula became a reality when a report issued by the U.S. Transportation Department claimed that virtually all of the present rail service and right-of-way in the northwest region is "excess" and therefore expendable.

The announcement came last spring and since that time Michigan officials haven't done much more than talk about the problem.

Everyone appears to be patting themselves on the back over how they are cooperating, but no one has taken it upon themselves to actually block proposed abandonment.

One of our major concerns is the Michigan Highways and Transportation Department's slowness in releasing its rail use study.

The information they have gathered and are formulating into a report would be invaluable in proving the state's need for a rail network.

Local chamber of commerces and industrialists have also been slow in reacting to the proposed abandonment.

More than ever, they should be clamboring at the heels of their elected officials to do something.

It is important for Michigan to keep its rail service and not to let the rail industry off the hook for poor management.

The rails are the life blood of many Northern Michigan communities and without them we may be faced with high unemployment and the loss of much potential development.

We urge local residents to take up petitions and attempt to thwart the proposed abandonment hearings in October by the U.S. Department of Transportation.

There has not been enough time for Michigan to plan its defense and we feel the hearings should be held up until there has been.

If nothing else, it is important to insure that we are able to keep the rail right-of-ways open.

Now is the time to fight back and save our rails. Another few months and it may be too late.

Important Meeting This Next Week

An important organizational meeting will be held in Gaylord on August 22 and we feel the Charlevoix Board of Commissioners should plan to be there.

The meeting will deal with the formation of a substance abuse advisory council to work with the Northern Regional Alcoholism program.

Each of twelve county Board of Commissioners has been requested to send members of their health committee to form and advisory council.

Under the requirements of Public Act 56, each county must have equal representation on the council to review and comment on the need for and planning of substance abuse services.

Alcoholism is a serious problem in Charlevoix County, yet very little has been done to solve it.

Unfortunately, Charlevoix County does not have a alcoholism abuse program and is in desperate need of one.

This type of involvement on a regional level by the Charlevoix Board of Commissioners might enable Charlevoix to participate in a program now being enjoyed by Emmet County through Lockwood-McDonald Hospital.

Another program that should be recognized by local industry is the employee health problems seminar now being promoted by the Northern Michigan Regional Alcoholism Program in the Charlevoix area.

The District Three Health Department program is attempting to identify those employees with personal problems that cause excessive absenteeism or poor work performance.

It is estimated that alcoholism costs the nation's business firms twelve billion dollars annually in absenteeism and botched work.

The seminar, sponsored by the Michigan Department of Health, will provide employers and labor representatives with assistance in developing an effective policy for dealing with human problems.

The seminar will be held in Gaylord on September 13. Arrangements may be made by contacting the local health department.

We wholeheartedly recommend that employers consider the program.

Cancer Drive Successful

Dear Sir:

I wish to report that Charlevoix County has reached their quota in the American Cancer Society Cancer Crusade. Dollars to date are $11,140. I wish to thank all volunteers, without whose help there would be no crusade, the First State Bank and the Charlevoix County Bank for their ad alerting residents to the crusade and the bars for placing our buckboards in their establishments raising more money this year than ever before. The Shamrock of Beaver Island will receive the placque for raising the most money on the buckboards. All areas raised more money than last year and all are to be commended. At this time I would also like to thank Mr. Ken Winters and his staff of the Charlevoix Courier for their help and coverage of this very important fund raising crusade. Mr. McPhillips of the McPhillips Flying Service for flying our material to our volunteers on Beaver Island, free of charge. May God Bless you all for your unselfish effort.

Thank you

Charlevoix, Mi.

Dear Sir:

During our three years of residence in the Charlevoix area (both City and Township) we have been amazed and distressed at the duplication of effort, services and facilities; the dilution of administrative talent; and what must be considerable in the way of inefficiencies which result from the existence of two separate governmental units maintained by the City and Township of Charlevoix. Also disturbing are the frequently published reports that the City of Charlevoix has an administration not covered by state law.

Mr. Dale Boss' recent announcement in favor of the consolidation of City and Township would appear to deserve the serious consideration and support of all residents of the area in question. Personal and partisan politics should be discarded in favor of constructive efforts to bring about a unified government which will be within Michigan law and which, hopefully, can begin to cope with the problems which our rapidly growing area is already confronting.

Most sincerely,
Gail and Rod Stebbins

Clockwise

By Bob Clock

Did you know that raspberries are good for high blood pressure? Picking them, that is; not eating them.

One of the delights of Beaver Island discovered by the Clocks this summer are mile after mile of wild raspberry bushes along deserted roadways on the north end of the island.

The crop is abundant this year, but the pickers have been few. Literally tons of berries certainly will go unharvested.

Regardless of what opinion you hold about the American Central Land Development Co., that oft-maligned organization is directly responsible for the island's present raspberry bonanza.

It was American Central which bought up vast tracts of wilderness in St. James Township in the 1960's, staked it off into cottage lots and cut miles of handsome graveled roadways through the dense forest.

Today you can count on both hands the number of summer cottages erected on the sprawling American Central lands, but the roadways and their right-of-ways have provided a climate that must be agreeable to raspberries because they grow in unbelievable profusion.

And there are few things in life more relaxing than spending a sunny afternoon among the berry bushes on Beaver Island. You may literally pick for hours on end without seeing another human being. But you will have plenty of company.

Honeybees like the nectar of ripe raspberries and you have to stay alert or you'll wind up picking as many bees as you do berries.

Tiny inchworms also have found wild raspberries to their liking. It's fun to watch them arching from berry to berry until they find a ripe one.

The right-of-way crackles continously with grasshoppers seeking new fields to conquer.

Every once in a while you find a tiny green tree toad looking very self-satisfied as it jumps from leaf to leaf.

Don't be afraid if a friendly garter snake comes out of his nest to see what you're up to. He'll be gone before you know it.

When you grow weary and your bucket is heavy, stand up and look down the road, a veritable canyon cut through skyscraper pines and hemlocks. If you're lucky you'll spot a deer on its way down to Lake Michigan to drink.

Disposing of the berries is no problem. We had huge bowls of them with brown sugar and milk for several mornings hand-running. Judy turned one batch into jam which will bring a taste of summer on Beaver Island to our breakfast table in Charlevoix next winter.

I'm still holding out for a raspberry pie, but the crop is now past its peak and every pailful I bring into the house disappears as if by magic.

Unfortunately, the raspberry era on Beaver Island will be short-lived. Young maples, oaks and wild cherry trees already stand as high as the raspberry bushes and in a few short years the berries will disappear as the forest reclaims the broad right-of-ways carved out of the woods by American Central.

But the islanders—and the Clocks—are making the most of it while it lasts.

Let's Look At Rate Hikes

To the Editor:

Recently, Federal Energy Chief Sawhill addressed the Midwest Governors' Conference, urging them to help increase utility rates so that utilities could speed up the building of nuclear plants.

Michigan citizens should look again at how much energy we are getting from our nuclear commitment compared to the costs we are bearing for them.

Fermi No. 1 was shut down after approximately 100 hours of operation because of a serious accident that was more than any "credible" accident was thought possible for this plant. It cost $125 million. It is now being decommissioned. A ton of radioactive sodium that can explode on contact with air or water remains in the core of the plant because no one has found a way to get it out.

Palisades nuclear plant has operated only 5 months since it received its full power license in December, 1972. It has been shut down since August, 1973, because of fuel core vibrations and steam generator leaks. It cost $3 million a month at first to buy the electricity this plant was not producing. Through the peak load summer months of June to September, it is costing $27 million, according to Consumers Power Company, to buy this electricity, this does not include the capital, interest, and maintenance costs which the ratepayers must bear.

The whole nuclear fuel cycle, the mining, milling, fuel enrichment, transportation, fuel reprocessing and ultimate long-term storage of highly toxic, radioactive waste for thousands of years, are among the other very high energy, resource and dollar consuming costs of this technology.

Can we really believe that these are good reasons for bearing a high rate increase in our electrical utility rates?

Bay Resident Blasts Local Voter Apathy

Dear Editor:

The Watergate exposure and the resignation of the President are a pair of the finest achievements in the history of self-government.

They dramatically portray the end results of continuous voter apathy and lack of citizens interest in their government.

The local results of last Tuesday's primary election spotlights the erosion of both major political parties in this county.

Both need reformation and an announced program of continuous service to their membership.

This conclusion is graphically demonstrated by the votes cast in Charlevoix County for the legislative seat in the 103rd district. Richard Friske, a former legislator whose record proves conclusively his ineffectiveness at the State level, by use of inuendos, negativeness and a glib tongue, garnered 25 percent more votes than the incumbent, Ralph Ostling.

The primary purpose of a political party is to screen and select qualified candidates who espouse positive and constructive programs.

Analysis of the results in the contests for County Commissioners nomination clearly indicate that those citizens who bothered to vote, effectively defeated those articulate perpetrators of negative thinking. We refer to Karl Waldner and Willis Peters.

From this we conclude that the Citizens of Charlevoix County are still searching for positive and constructive reform, not destruction without an alternative.

This conclusion will be confirmed or denied at the November election, at which time the balance of the negative quartet, Messors Paul and Ward, put their programs on the line.

If it Fitz

Let the other guy quit

In my hometown, officials are currently disagreeing over who should pay to fix up the old railroad depot.

Which is similar to fighting over the cost of carpeting running boards.

Amtrak is restoring passenger service through our county but it says it won't stop here because our depot is too rundown and ugly. But for a few thousand bucks worth of paint and paving, they'll change their mind. Golly gee.

For 75 years, that depot was plenty good enough. And that was when people were using it. Now nobody takes the train. That's why it quit stopping here a few years ago. So Amtrak says pretty up the depot or they won't use it.

I haven't felt so intimidated since a sergeant told me to clean my rifle or he wouldn't shoot me with it.

The energy shortage was supposed to restore the popularity of passenger trains. You remember the energy shortage. That was when you drove into a gas station and nobody cleaned your windshield. If you complained, the gasoline company said the men who used to clean windshields were now offshore, drilling.

It costs more to drill for oil than it does to wipe windowshilds. And you should thank God gas now costs more because this means the friendly Standard dealer on your corner will never wear a turban and ride to work on a camel.

The gasoline shortage is over now, which is a remarkable thing. Gas is a fossil fuel, so there has to be less gas in the world today than there was during the shortage. But today there's plenty of gosoline to buy and no long lines at the pumps. It just costs more now. And that's how cynics are born.

Sure, you should think of your great grandchildren. If you spent your life driving to work alone, they may spend their lives trying to bum rides on that Standard dealer's camel. We have to run out of gasoline some day.

I asked a car dealer if he didn't think people should ride trains today so his great grandchildren won't have to walk tomorrow. He didn't.

"Let them dig up their own energy. They'll think of something. We've got gasoline today and I want it or I can't sell cars. Everybody wants it. Nobody wants to worry about their great grandchildren's transportation," he said.

Yeah. That's why it would be dumb to spend dough on our old depot. Nobody is going to use it. Paint applied today will be all flecked away by the time your great grandchildren come by, following the rickety railroad tracks to see if they lead to the edge of the earth. They may discover India.

Everybody knows the way to avoid a gasoline shortage is to quit burning so much of it. But let the other guy quit. You expect more from Standard and you're going to get it, by God.

Meanwhile, back at the depot, they should forget today and build for the future. How about hitching posts?

Meet Charlevoix

Meet Bill Mercer

Does a merger between Charlevoix and Charlevoix Township seem logical?

The Charlevoix Courier asks Charlevoix County Planning Director to examine the question in this week's Meet Charlevoix.

Mercer joined the county in 1971, after having worked for a private Grand Rapids-based consulting firm since his graduation from Michigan State University.

He holds a Bachelor of Science Degree in Urban Planning and is a member of the American Society of Planning Officials, Michigan Society of Planning Officials and the American Institute of Planners.

Mercer is also a registered Community Planner within the State of Michigan.

Courier: During the last several weeks there has been discussion about the merger between Charlevoix and Charlevoix Township. As a planner, does this seem logical to you?

Mercer: The proposed consolidation between the two communities is the only real logical answer to the problems we have today. This is especially true when we are talking about such things as water and sewer, police, fire and ambulance services; when we are talking about the provision of storm sewers and drainage programs, about recreation services; when we are talking about community school recreation programs, and anything else along these lines. It would seem to me very logical for the two communities to move toward the merger and annexation simply for the fact that it will save tax dollars in the long run to pull the community together, they are in fact a community of one today, and it seems that we should erase those boundary lines that exist only on paper.

Courier: What do you see as some of the advantages of having a merger?

Mercer: Well, it seems to me the big advantage would be that the township residents, especially in the Pine Point and North Point areas would now be in a position to have water lines, sewer lines and city police protection provided, which they do not have today. Certainly with continuing development taking place in Charlevoix Township at the rate it has been for the past ten or twelve years, these services are desperately needed. Other advantages would be township residents would no longer have to deal with the city on a contractual basis for such things as ambulance services, and would be in a position where they would have a say in what types of ambulance services would be provided, what kind of fire protection would be provided, what kind of police services that are made available, where water lines and sewer lines go, where storm drainage systems are constructed. Other advantages would be a voice in the overall government of the community, which they do not have today. This would have an impact on street programs, recreation programs, and the like.

Courier: At the same time, do you feel there would be any disadvantages in this kind of move?

Mercer: Well the two disadvantages would be, number one going from a smaller population within the political unit to a larger population. Anytime you move into a larger population situation, you lose a little autonomy. By losing a little autonomy, I mean that in a smaller unit of government the individual has more to say about what kind of services that are made available. In the larger unit of government, it would take more blocs of votes to turn the council one way or the other, and I think in this sense there might be a disadvantage. The second disadvantage would be the fact that in the short run it most likely will cost a little more in taxes for the township residents. In the long run, this will be balanced out by the provision of services which they will be receiving. Hopefully, this short run tax increase would be very short, and that the long run gains will be very major.

Courier: Are there any organizations already existing between the two entities that might help facilitate this merger?

Mercer: As I stated before, the community now is only divided by an imaginary line called the city limits, and you will see a great deal of cooperation from all the service organizations such as, the Lions Club, Kiwanis Club, Women's Club, Garden Club, and other organizations of this kind. Other cooperative efforts are the Regional Planning Commission, some work done on water and sewer provision, and of course the communities have long cooperated on provision of fire services and ambulance services and things of this nature. Other than that, there aren't too many organizations that are cooperating at this time.

Courier: What would be the mechanics behind the two groups merging?

Mercer: As I understand it right now, there is some strong feelings toward staying away from the word annexation and the annexation procedures. It would seem to me that the most logical means of achieving consolidation of the two political units would be for the City Council to take the bull by the horns and appoint a Charter Commission. The Charter Commission could be made up of city residents, which it would have to be made up of legally, with township residents being ex-officio members. The two groups could then work together for the preparation of a charter, hopefully to satisfy both the township and the city. At such time that the charter is ready for a vote by the city residents, a vote for annexation could be held within the township. These could be held as a simultaneous election both in the township and the city, with the two different questions. In the city of course, the charter and the Township, the annexation. If the township residents are happy with the way the charter has been put together, they could express that vote with a yes vote for annexation. If city residents are happy with the way the charter has been put together, they could express that with a yes vote for the charter, so that at the end of this election, if both issues were to pass the two units would then be merged together under a new charter. At the next election of officers within the community, the township residents and the city residents could vote for a new city council or for a mayor or for whatever the charter commission would come up with. I think that would be the mechanics at this time, but the first move would have to be made by the city council in appointing a charter commission.

Courier: What will happen to such things as zoning where you have two separate zoning ordinances for two different governmental units?

Mercer: Well, again let's assume that a charter is drawn, that the charter is passed by the city and that the township residents vote for the annexation, the new city council then would have to adopt a zoning ordinance. The existing city zoning ordinance would stay in effect until such time as the new ordinance was adopted by the new city council. Any subdivision control regulations, zoning codes, or any other regulatory ordinances would be those of the city. Now perhaps this could be taking place during the time that the charter commission is working, the City Council could examine those ordinances which are now in effect in the township and attempt to strike a compromise between the city ordinances and the township ordinances now in effect, so that at such a time that the new charter went through and the annexation was passed, the city would be regulated by an ordinance which would cover the entire two political units. I think this seems to be the most logical means of providing those kinds of regulatory ordinances and acts.

Letters to the editor

World War II Reunion

Dear Editor:

The USS Hunter Liggett (APA-14) from World War II had a ship's reunion.

The ship was commissioned at the Brooklyn Navy Yard in June, 1941 and decommissioned in March 1946 at Olympia, Wash. A Navy ship with a Coast Guard crew and Captain Louis W. Perkins landed the First Marine Division at Guadalcanal on August 7, 1942.

It made several trips unloading combat troops and supplies to all of the Solomon Island campaign. Again on November 1, 1943 the crew of the Hunter Liggett with Captain R. S. Patch landed the Third Marine Division at Empress Augusta Bay, Bougainville.

In both invasions the USS Hunter Liggett was the Flag Ship. The crew and ship earned four battle stars in the Asiatic-Pacific Theatre of war! The crew and the ship was credited with shooting down six enemy aircraft!

Admiral Owen W. Siler, Commandant of the U.S. Coast Guard, served as a line officer for two years on our ship! Douglas A. Munro, Signalman First Class, the only recipient (Medal Of Honor Award) in the History of the U.S. Coast Guard also served on our ship!

Please find a little spot to print this in your newspaper. We had many men from your state and local area that served on our ship and have been unable to locate.

This is our second reunion and many years have passed since we all reunited for a celebration!

Anything that you can do to help us locate our shipmates will be greatly appreciated! Thanking you in advance, I remain;

Sincerely yours;
Joseph F.ubino
National Chairman

Editors Note:

Lt. Joseph Etienne, (Ret.) and Clarence F. Itahoeh of Charlevoix both served on this ship.

Tillie Drops A Few Hints About Those Big Ripe Tomatoes

By this time next week, most home gardeners are going to be seeing red – plump, round red objects that weigh down the vines upon which they grow.

Tomatoes, they're called. The hardworking, frugal housewife must now devise ways and means of eating, cooking, canning and freezing these succulant morsels that Mother Nature has provided in such abundance.

This is the tale of how happy little Tillie copes with the problem.

It is a nice, warm, sunny day, so Tillie decides to do her canning and freezing.

Surrounded by bushels of tomatoes, kettles, jars, sterilizing equipment, freezer bags, nssorted spices and other extra ingredients, she starts to work.

"What will I prepare first?" she muses. "Soup, of course. First a batch of plain tomatoe, than a batch of tomatoe and hean, just for a treat."

Tripping lightly from sink to stove, she stirs the soup and mops her brow.

"Well, as long as the chopping things are in the sink, I think I'll cut up the tomatoes, onions and peppers for my catsup and chili sauce," she tells herself.

No sooner said than done.

By this time, the soup is ready to put in jars. After that little interlude, she starts the marmalade cooking.

"Isn't this fun?" Tillie giggles. Now, just a little more peeling and the paste and puree will be ready to cook.

"Whoops, it's time to put the marmalade in jars. Then I'll have room for the catsup and chili and paste and puree on the stove. That'll use up the burners."

More jars and caps need washing and sterilizing, but that's an easy job for Tillie.

Clever little Tillie has saved the easiest canning chores for the last. "Stewed tomatoes, they're so simple – just peel and cook. This batch will fill those two big kettles.

"And the tomato juice. Peeled tomatoes and spices, that won't take long and it's so good.;" Tillie whispers pleasantly.

Catsup and chili sauce and paste and puree are ready to can. They all look so much alike she doesn't know which to put in the jars first. Alphabetically, she decides – catsup, chili sauce, paste, puree.

The plain old tomatoes go on the stove along with the juice. While they are simmering happily away, Tillie has time to prepare the aspic, which she is freezing for the first time. "What an addition that will be to Christmas dinner."

The freezing equipment is nearby so Tillie decides she might as well freeze some stewed tomatoes, too. "There's plenty of room in the freezer, and they'll taste different from the canned ones," Variety is the spice of life," she quotes.

Before long the stewed tomatoes and juice are canned and the aspic and other batch of stewed tomatoes ar ready for freezing. "One, two, three, and that's done, too."

A glance at the clock brings Tillie out of her reverie. It's almost dinner time. The day has gone so fast, nobody has interrupted her, she even forgot to eat lunch, but what a fruitful day it has been.

"What will I have for dinner? There are still lots of tomatoes left, I'll fix some of them," is the answer.

"Some of those big ones I'll stuff with tuna salad. It's such a hot day. Sandwiches, too, bacon, lettuce and tomato.

"There are so many good things I could make with these tomatoes but I don't have time tonight."

At this point Tillie's mind starts whirling with ideas for tomorrow and tomorrow and tomorrow.

"Tomatoe rarebit, tomato corn chowder, tomato fritters, tomato pancakes, tomato pudding, baked tomatoes, broiled tomatoes, sauted tomatoes, acalloped tomatoes...."

Tillie is not only a hard-working little girl, she is a smart girl. She knows there are recipes in cook books for all the tomatoe goodies she has been thinking about making, and many more.

We hope this little story about Tillie will lighten your tomato load.

Library notes

It's summer playtime in Charlevoix, and the Library has a wide assortment of helpful books to make your summer playtime safe. For the young fry, there is Better Scuba Diving for Boys by Dave Horner, a basic instruction manual.

It is a valuable source and practical guide which is used by accomplished scuba instructors who teach thousands of individuals the safe procedures for enjoying this fascinating sport.

The Young Sportsman's Guide to Swimming was written by Lynn Burke and Don Smith. There are numerous photographs and detailed information about muscle-building exercises, both in and out of the water, training methods, fundamentals of breathing and, of course, a complete discussion of the important basic strokes. The authors believe that training is half the fun and safety precautions are only good sense.

Canoeing was written by John Malo, holder of canoeing and kayaking championships in two countries.

Well illustrated, with large, easy-to-read print, the book gives valuable advice on knowing your canoe, canoe care, paddling techniques, launching and boarding, beaching and docking, capsizing and a complete chapter on canoe safety.

The Official U.S. Coast Guard Recreational Boating Guide provides boatmen with a handy booklet setting forth the basic principles of safe boating in simple, non-technical language. The material includes information on minimum equipment requirements, aids to navigation, emergency procedures, hints on safety afloat and boat maintenance and care.

For adults, the attractive book Water Skiing was the first book on the subject personally written by a national champion.

It is an exceptionally fine how-to-do-it book for the expert as well as the beginner.

The Encyclopedia of Sailing is a handsome new edition to the Library shelves. With more than 250 illustrations, the book contains just about everything you'll want to know about sailing--its history, equipment, catalogue of boats, sailing rules and technique, competition results, racing tactics, meaning of terms, and how to get the greatest enjoyment from sailing.

Our summer sport books will be on special display for your inspection and enjoyment.

For Diebetics

Lockwood Offers Class

Lockwood-MacDonald Hospital is currently sponsoring classes for diebetics on the third Wednesday of each month at 1:30 p.m. at the hospital.

The classes are, according to Mrs. Marilyn Greene, registered Dietician and co-ordinator of the program, for the re-education and reinstruction of diabetics and their families.

The process includes all phases of the diabetic's life style and the control of the disease.

"We try to enforce ideas already presented to them by their doctors and to help them in everyday problems that they might have," Mrs. Greene said.

The classes are conducted jointly by Mrs. Greene and Mrs. Judy Brink, R.N., Inservice Education Director at the hospital.

Mrs. Brink conducts the first segment of the class, covering such subjects as personal hygiene, use dosage and administration of insulin, and urine testing.

According to Mrs. Brink, "The Diabetic has a lot to cope with – not only a special diet.

They are more prone to contract infections and, once contracted, infections are harder to heal in a diabetic." She stresses good personal hygiene, proper insulin injection, and discusses individual problems that class members might be having.

In the second portion of the class Mrs. Greene details the diet for diabetics based on the "Food Exchange Groups" system. It allows the diabetic - or any person on a calorie-restricted diet - to have more freedom in his choice of foods.

In adddition, she covers such important areas as food buying and preparation, snack foods and liquor for the diabetic.

"The important thing to remember," Mrs. Greene said "is that insulin does not cure diabetics. It is only a part of the total program that a diabetic must follow for control of the disease."

Class participation is stressed, and the classes will continue to be held on the third Wednesday of every month; all diabetics and their families are welcome to attend.

Write The Feds For Information

Most people know that the Federal government prints hundreds of thousands of pamphlets, bulletins and books. Unfortunately, too few people take advantage of this inexpensive, sometimes free, way to get information on almost any subject.

Consumer information is a case in point. The Consumer Information Index lists approximately 200 publications which tell how to buy, use, and care for consumer products. Other publications discuss such consumer-interest subjects as child care, financial planning, health, home maintenance, nutrition, and consumer protection.

The publications are listed under such headings as "Appliances and Household Furnishings", Automobiles", "Clothing, Fabrics, and Laundering", "Cigarettes and Alcohol", "Home Maintenance and Improvements", "Landscaping, Gardening, and Pest Control", and many others.

The Consumer Information Index is available, free of charge, from Consumer Information, Public Documents Distribution Center, Pueblo, Colorado 81009.

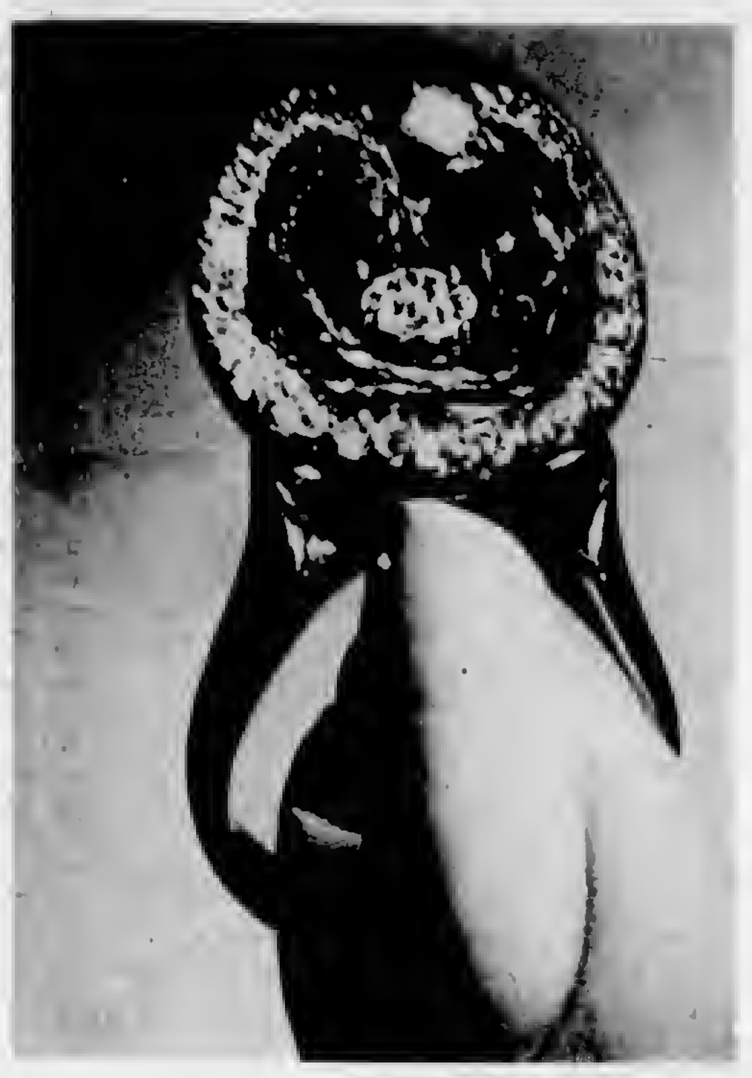
'Diamonds Today'

Wachler Wins Jewelry Competition



Link Wachler, of Southfield husband of the former Rindi Luedke, has won an award in the 1974 "Diamonds Today" national jewelry competition.

Wachler's design, which became a group project of the family business, Wachler & Sons Jewelers, consists of a "cup" of highly polished gold, rimmed with tiny diamonds and set high on a gold shank. Another slightly larger diamond is suspended inside the cup on a slim wire so that it shimmers with each movement of the hand, reflecting back in the gold.

This is the third year the Wachlers have won nationally in diamond competition. In 1973 they won with a ring design and in 1972 their winning entry was a diamond ankle bracelet. Four years ago they won a Diamonds International Award with a diamond eyepiece.

The annual contest, which has been held for the past five years, is sponsored by the Diamond Information Center and is open to all U.S. manufacturers, designers and retailers

It limits entrants to using a minimum of 10 diamonds, the total weight of which cannot exceed one carat.

The David Wachler and Sons has been located in Southfield for 4½ years. The company was originally established in Detroit in 1920.

It is a family organization which primarily consists of David's sons, Jeff and Norman Wachler, and their sons, Link and Buzz.

The Wachlers have been summer residents here for 40 years, having owned a cottage in Boulder Park at one time. They continue to vacation here.

Mrs. Wachler is the daughter of Lt. Cmdr. Donald Luedke, U.S.C.G.(Ret) and Mrs. Luedke of Charlevoix.

LINCK WACHLER of Southfield receives one of 15 awards offered by the Diamond Information Center for his entry in the national contest sponsored by the organization. He is the husband of a former Charlevoix resident, Rindi Luedke.

Coast Guard Keeps Watchful Eye

earlier.

"We might have been able to save some lives. Better we should be called than have this happen."

Collisions, groundings and capsizing are more or less self-explanatory.

However, there are times when more than small craft are involved in these.

Smith referred to the time last year when two lake freights collided in the fog off Gull Island.

The local station provided communications for the ships and ferried M.I.O. (Marine Inspection Officers) to the scene.

False alarms include cases where a boater will call in via radio and say he is OK after remedying some small difficulty.

An aborted case is listed as one where the Coast Guard proceeds to the scene and is then advised that the caller has rectified the problem or been assisted by someone else.

"Flare sightings are something else. We often receive calls of a flare being sighted some place and it turns out to be a falling star or the revolving light at Beaver Head light station" Smith explained.

He added, however, that there is always the chance that people are, indeed, seeing flares, In such an event, he urged them to call.

Medivac, as it is called, means evacuating someone,

school athletes named All-American end...Bob Carey who earned this honor while playing football at Michigan State University.

Many others of his athletes went on to gain some degree of success in the field of coaching in both high school and college levels. He hesitated to name any of them because there have been many.

However, one who is well known is Chuck Fairbanks, who gained recognition as head coach at Oklahoma and who is now head coach and general manager of the New England Patriots.

Coach Kipke was born in Lansing Jan. 7, 1902 and, like his brother, Harry, who went on to become head coach at the University of Michigan, he played his college football at Michigan State.

While still a student at State, he coached the first football team at Boys' Vocational School in Lansing.

After graduation, he coached at Williamston until coming to Charlevoix in 1928.

For 41 years Coach Kipke was employed at the Belvedere Golf course during the summer months, first as caddy master and later as club manager, a position he held until the close of the 1972 season. Golf is a game he enjoys and he played the game until this summer when he was slowed down with a leg injury.

When Coach Kipke is officially inducted into the Michigan High School Coaches Hall of Fame next month, his wife of 45 years, the former Mable Turpin, will be at his side.

It is likely that at least two of their three daughters will also attend the event. They are Mrs. Don (Nancy) Bambach of Farmington, Mrs. John (Amy) Gibson of Pinconning and Mrs. Roibert (Bennie) of Phoenix, Ariz. They also have nine grandchildren.

Coach Kipke is the third northern Michigan coach to be inducted into the MHSCA Hall of Fame in recent years. Others are coach Matt Jacobson of Mancelona and Coach Earl Brotherston of Boyne City.

Officials Consider Merger

about the two governmental units.

He suggested the Charlevoix Regional Planning Commission get together and state its views.

"There are many, many reasons why they should merge, and very few reasons why not," he said.

Charlevoix County Planner William Mercer said the proposed merger would do three basic things.

Three Basic Things

First, it would provide for better provision of water, sewer, storm sewer, police, fire, ambulance and related services.

"The present township residents would not have to depend on contracts or providing their own separate services and could have a voice in what services are made available," he said.

He said secondly that zoning, subdivision control, building codes and similar regulatory laws would be consistent for residents of the two existing political units.

"Instead of neighbors dealing with two separate legislative godies, one set of rules would be applied to all," he continued.

Abolishes Old Charter

Finally, Mercer said the proposed merger would abolish the old Fourth Class Cities Charter and allow for a modern charter to be drawn which covers the unique situation in Charlevoix.

"Along with these basic changes, merger of the two units could help develop a better community recreation program, provide for more orderly growth, and save many tax dollars in the long run.

The county planner said a suggested means of dealing with the consolidation would be for the city council to create a charter commission having a mixed membership made up of persons from the city and township.

"The proposed charter could be brought to a vote at the same time as the township votes on whether to join the city," he said.

"If the merger passes, the two units would begin operating as one under a new charter."

New Officers

Then at the next election, Mercer said a whole new slate of officers, alderman or similar designates, could be placed on the ballot.

The Michigan Attorney General's office said there would be no problem.

However, two villages within a township located near Lansing have attempted to merge into one city and failed twice.

On both occasions, a Mayor was elected, but ended up having no city to be mayor of.

Other Business

In the meantime, it was suggested both local and state highway experts attend the special board of appeals meeting.

In other action, council:

–Approved a new building permit regulations and fees.

–Referred bids on a new one-ton truck, ambulance and aerial device and service body to committee.

–Decided to consider Mt. McSauba as a possible site for new baseball diamonds.

On Guard 24 Hours A Day

Charlevoix Coast Guard Keeps Watchful Eye

By FRAN MARTIN

The 18-man crew at the Charlevoix Lifeboat Station has had a busy year

Chief Robert J. Smith was quick to add, however, that the 1973-74 year was not as busy as some years in the past have been.

Nevertheless, the Coastguardsmen at the station responded to 89 calls that covered a variety of services to the public.

The stations primary function is search and rescue, more familiarly known as SAR, Chief Smith explained.

By virtue of its very nature, SAR requires first and foremost a 24-hour continuous communications room watch to receive all distress calls via radio or other calls by land lines. It also needs men to man the two SAR boats attached to the station.

One is a 44 ft. motor life boat considered an all-weather craft which is self-bailing and self-righting and the second is a 40 ft. utility boat, a medium weather craft used in SAR cases when the weather is not severe and in carrying out logistic demands.

Normally, the 44 ft. boat, as well as the smaller craft, are manned by three crewmen. However, in the event of very inclement weather or a mission of more than eight hours duration, a fourth man joins the crew.

The secondary missions of the station include maintaining Aids to Navigation from Petoskey on Little Traverse Bay to Northport on Grand Traverse Bay; inspection of 23 private Aids to Navigation that are in operation from May until November and providing logistic support in the way of mail and personnel for the USCG Cutter Sundew stationed here.

The Charlevoix station reported 89 cases during the past fiscal year which adds up to an average of probably three per week when you consider that the majority of these are during the navigation season.

Included among these were 25 mechanical failures; seven exhausted fuel supply; 10 reports of boats overdue; 15 collisions, groundings and capsizings; six false alarms; two miscellaneous (Medivac) and 24 flare sightings and aborted cases.

The first, mechanical failure, can be anything from the loss of a rudder to an engine failure of some type.

An exhausted fuel supply is self-explanatory.

An 'overdue' results when a boater departs Port A and fails to turn up at Port B' where he informed his family or friends he would be at a given time or date.

When such a case is reported, the Coast Guard immediately makes a harbor check by checking boats tied up at the yacht basin and marinas and notifies all law enforcement agencies in the area.

This same thing is done in all ports, whether there is a lifeboat station there or not, between Port A and Port B.

If no trace of the craft is found by these methods, the search is expanded to include an aerial search by aircraft from the Traverse City Air Station until the craft is accounted for, Smith explained.

Smith went on to explain that these are among their biggest headaches. "People will meet friends who are going here or there, decide to join them and tie up at a port they never mentioned to those at home. Or the weather looks nasty and they head for the closest port, neglecting to let anyone know where they are." Smith said.

"Luckily, the people are safe most of the time but there have been instances when we wish we had been called

COMMON COUNCIL

COUNCIL MINUTES JULY 29, 1974
8:00 p.m.

The Common Council of the City of Charlevoix met on the above date and time with Mayor Hansen presiding. Present: Aldermen Wood, McRae, Plumm, Selph, and Timms. Absent: Alderwoman Wallace.

The minutes of the July 15, 1974 meeting were approved as presented in writing and as recorded in the Council Minutes Book.

Attorney Berlage explained that the lease with the Beaver Island Boat Company, signed July 1, 1974 by the Mayor and Clerk has not been returned by them.

Attorney Michaels addressed the Council stating that his client, Beaver Island Boat Company, feels that a clause should be added in the lease to protect them from anyone using "Berth A" for loading and unloading who is competitive to Beaver Island Boat Company.

Alderman McRae offered the following Resolution and moved its adoption, supported by Alderman Timms. RESOLVED THAT the property lease with Beaver Island Boat Company, previously executed by the Mayor and Clerk, dated July 1, 1974, be confirmed and that it be re-submitted to the Beaver Island Boat Company for their acceptance and execution. The Resolution was approved by the following yea and nay vote. Yeas: Aldermen Wood, McRae, Plumm, Selph, and Timms. Nays: None. Absent: Alderwoman Wallace.

Richard Mitchell presented a signed petition to the Council regarding the use of dune buggies on City-owned property at Mt. McSauba. After much discussion by visitors who accompanied him the matter was referred to the Recreation Committee for further study.

Alderman McRae offered the following Resolution, supported by Alderman Selph and moved its adoption. BE IT HEREBY RESOLVED THAT the Council renew the fire and ambulance contracts with Marion Township, which have been signed by them and that the Mayor and Clerk be authorized to sign said contracts on behalf of the City of Charlevoix. The Resolution was adopted by the following yea and nay vote: Yeas: Aldermen Wood, McRae, Plumm, Selph, and Timms. Nays: None. Absent: Alderwoman Wallace.

Council discussed briefly recording equipment for Council Meetings. The Acting Administrator was instructed to get bids for recording equipment.

Correspondence from Mr. and Mrs. Carl C. Smith regarding cemetery markers was read. Council discussed it and referred it to their Resolution of March 11, 1974, where a decision was made to keep all markers "flush type." It is the wish of Council to keep the Resolution in effect.

Council discussed fees for building permits. It was put into Committee; their meeting to be held August 7, 1974 at 8:00 p.m. They were asked to give their report at the next regular meeting.

Motion was made by Alderman McRae and supported by Alderman Selph to send Mayor Hansen as delegate and Alderman Wood as alternate delegate to the Michigan Municipal League meeting in Detroit September 11-13, 1974. The motion was adopted by the following yea and nay vote. Yeas: Aldermen McRae, Plumm, Selph, and Timms. Nays: Alderman Wood. Absent: Alderwoman Wallace.

Alderman Selph inquired how the City knew who had hooked up to the May Street sewer - and asked if property owners were required to get a permit to hook-up from the City. He felt that the Acting Administrator should inform the residents in the area, so that everyone knew the City must be notified when a hook-up to the sewer is made.

Alderman Timms inquired about the carport being built at The Dunes. He felt that since provisions for a carport were not included in the building permit, they should be stopped immediately. The Acting Administrator was advised to notify them to cease with the building at once.

The Finance Committee having examined bills totaling $74,795.95 find them correct and recommend that the bills be allowed. Moved by Alderman Plumm and supported by Alderman McRae that the bills be allowed and orders drawn for their amounts. The motion was adopted by the following yea and nay vote. Yeas: Aldermen Wood, McRae, Plumm, Selph, and Timms. Nays: None. Absent: Alderwoman Wallace.

Alderman Plumm moved that Council adjourn.

Ida A. Heise, City Clerk

Motion was made by Alderwoman Wallace and supported by Alderman Plumm that Council dispense with the reading of the minutes of the regular meeting held July 29, 1974.

Directors of the Beaver Island Boat Company were present to discuss their dissatisfaction with parts of the Agreement for use of Dock Facilities (Berth A & B) as presented to them. Considerable discussion took place between the Council and the Boat Company.

Alderwoman Wallace offered the following Resolution and moved its adoption, supported by Alderman Plumm. Jim C.--Alcoholic Since Boyhood

A Drink For A Drunk

EDITOR'S NOTE: Jim C. lives in this area. He along with many others are concerned about the lack of alcoholic treatment facilities in Charlevoix County. This week's Meet Charlevoix on page 5 also deals with the need for a program.

Jim C. is an alcoholic.

It probably doesn't mean much because it's doubtful you know him.

Who ever hangs around a drunk?

Yet, he could be one of the estimated 900 people in Charlevoix County that have a drinking problem and don't know it.

Maybe he's your neighbor or the person you always say hi to on your way to work.

Who knows?

And he's been an alcoholic since he was nine-years-old.

"I was nine or 10-years-old when I would sip," the local salesman said.

"I remember the man in the downstairs flat used to make wine and I would pull the cork out of one of his bottles, put in a rubber tube and sip."

Jim C. was living in Detroit then and was joined by some of his other buddies who would play cards.

"At that time I believed I was an alcoholic," he said while sitting behind a restaurant table.

"Now that I looked back I always wanted to drink a little more than my friends to get my share."

Wearing a bright-colored golf sweater, white-haired Jim C. began scratching his head and relating his past drinking problems.

"I drank on and off in high school and college," he said in his soft voice

"I left college after two years...rather abrubtly."

He said he was kicked-out because he had kept a freshman girl in his fraternity house overnight.

"If I hadn't been drinking, I wouldn't have done it."

From college, Jim C. went into sales and began selling for an advertising company.

"This became another excuse for my drinking," he said.

"I would only take out a customer who would like a long drinking session.

Jim C. said if his client was a teatotaler it was the last time he would take him out.

Then the war came along and Jim C. was able to keep his habit going.

"I started running my own still and finally sold beer and whiskey which I had flown in by an Austrialian pilot," he said.

"The reason behind the whole thing was to have enough income to buy all the booze I wanted to consume myself."

Jim C. said he came out of the service with a lot of money, but instead of investing in the market, he invested in saloons.

"I was a typical drinking sailor," he quipped.

The father of six children said he then joined the sales department of a Detroit firm.

"I continued my drinking and finally married a girl from Northern Michigan," he said.

While his marriage was doing well, Jim C. said he left the company because he was passed up as sales manager.

"This hurt my feelings to the point that I left the company and started my own sales company," he said.

"Being my own boss gave me as much time as I need or could afford to drink."

Business was good, although Jim C. said he was paying less and less attention to it.

Then his wife died suddenly with a hemorrhage.

"I played the poor Jim to the hill," he said.

"All my customers felt so sorry for me that they pushed business my way."

For two years, Jim C. said he didn't make call and even so, his business kept improving.

Even then, Jim C. said he had no suspicion that he had a drinking problem.

Six years ago he remarried and his wife had a child.

"She could see I had a drinking problem and for almost a year she tried to talk me into going to AA and seek help," he continued.

"That was my first ex-

How Will You Be Voting On The School Bond Proposals?

By FRAN MARTIN

Registered Charlevoix School District voters have only three weeks to study the proposed bond issue for a new high school before going to the polls on Sept. 12.

So that voters might have first hand knowledge of the issues involved, the Charlevoix Information Committee has compiled answers to numerous questions asked most often regarding the proposed building program.

What Will Be Constructed?

A complete high school complex designed to house 850 students; a bus storage garage and repair center and an athletic field to include a track, tennis courts and stadium seating and lights.

Also included in the proposal will be additions to the present high school to convert it for use as a middle school. This will include the addition of six classrooms, an enlargement of the library and conversion of the present study hall to a small auditorium and art room.

An indoor swimming pool proposal will be submitted as an alternate proposal.

Where Will the New High School be Located?

It will be located on M-66 across from the Kit Carson Lumber Co. immediately south of the Baptist Church. The Board of Education presently has an option to purchase 66 acres at this location.

How Much Will It Cost?

The bond proposal is for $6,990,000 for the construction of the new facility on the proposed site plus the garage, athletic facility and equipment for the new structure along with the cost of remodeling and equipping the present high school for use as a middle school. In tax dollars this means $2.97 per $1000 S.E.V. during the first school year. After the first year it decreases according to a regular schedule. Proposal No. 2 is for $600,000 for the construction of an indoor swimming pool.

Why do we need to Build Now?

The Citizens Study Committee studied the problem and concluded that the most reasonable solution to meeting the classroom needs for the Charlevoix Public Schools would be to construct a new high school, renovate and add to the existing high school for middle school purposes and abandon the existing middle school as a classroom facility.

Growth and building obsolenscence were the two major reasons given for these recommendations.

Regarding growth in the district, the Charlevoix public schools are experiencing growth at this time at a more rapid rate than other school districts throughout the state.

The Charlevoix school district is expected to increase from its present enrollment of 1711 students to an estimated enrollment of 1950 in the next five years.

The existing middle school facility, completed in 1927, is requiring constant expensive maintenance to maintain it at a functional level of quality for a school classroom facility.

To modify the structure would require excessive renovation costs and would remain inadequate to meet the required size for the present student enrollment upon completion.

What about the size of Existing Facilities?

The existing high school was constructed to enroll 472 students. The 1974 enrollment will be 610 students. Thus, overcrowded conditions exist and as a result the quality and the number of programs offered suffer. The present middle school was designed to house 435 students and the 1973-74 enrollment in the building in grades five through eight was 580 students.

Will the Building Meet Future Needs?

The construction plans are designed to meet the enrollment projected through the next five years.

In addition to the actual plans, the special facilities such as the auditorium, gymnasium, library, cafeteria have been planned to service a student population of approximately 1200 students.

'Virgin of Fatima'

Famous Carving Visits Area

The "International Pilgrim Virgin of Fatima", a representation of the image of the mother of Christ which reportedly appeared in a vision at Fatima, Portugal, in 1917, will be at St. Mary's church here Sunday.

Sponsored by the Legion of Mary, the original woodcarving will arrive here early Sunday afternoon at the high school parking lot where a procession will form to escort it to St. Mary's church located on South Bridge st.

A brief ceremony will be held at the entrance of the church before the statue is enshrined.

A Solemn High Mass at 8 p.m. Sunday will be followed by Benediction and the Exposition of the Blessed Sacrament. An all-night vigil will be climaxed with a Mass at 8 a.m. Monday.

An honor guard will then escort the "Pilgrim Virgin" on its pilgrimage that will take it to Nebraska from here.

The famous woodcarved statue has never been in the United States before.

Its tour of the Gaylord diocese of which Petoskey and Charlevoix are a part will mark its only stop in Michigan.

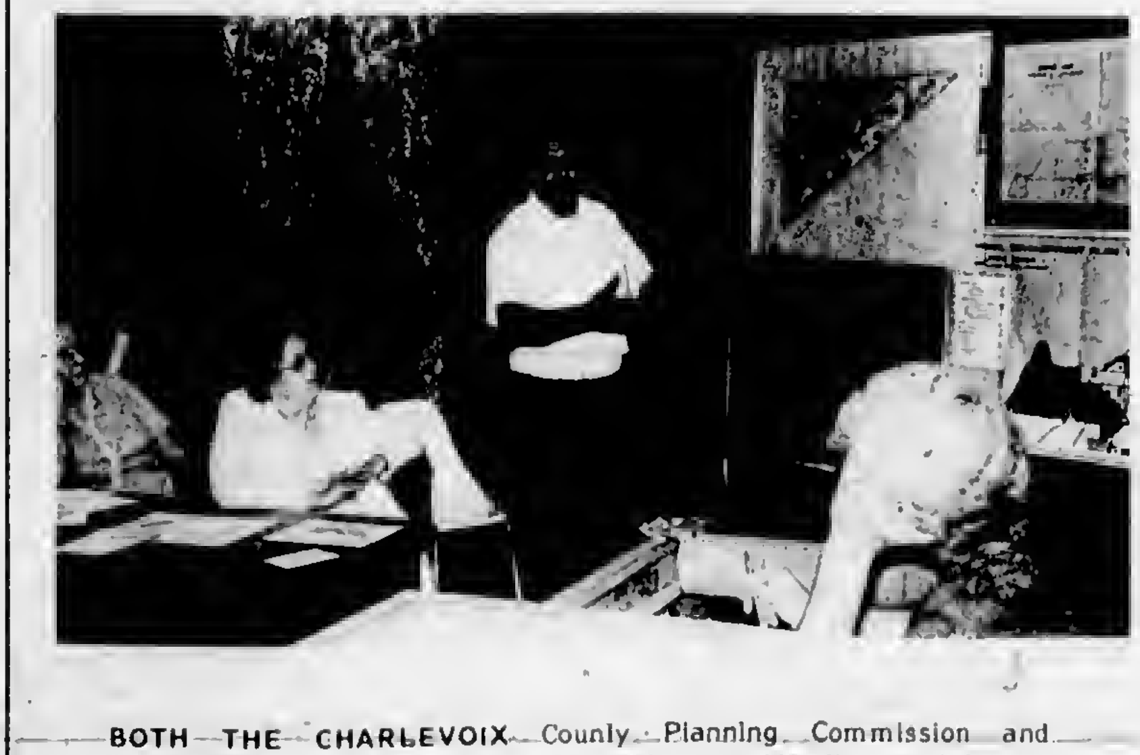
The legend of the vision of Fatima is one known by Catholics and non-Catholics alike for it promises "the conversion of Russia and an era of peace for all mankind."

It began on May 13, 1917, when three Portugese children told of having seen a lady dressed in white in a cove tending their sheep. As the store goes, she told them to return to the site on the 13th of each month until Oct. 13 when she would reveal her identity.

On that date she told them she was the "Lady of the Rosary" and, among other things, promised, under certain conditions, the conversion of Russia and lasting peace.

The Pilgrim Virgin which will come here Sunday is a woodcarved likeness of the vision of Fatima as described by the sole survivor of the three children who witnessed the vision.

Planned Unit Development (PUD)--What Does It Mean?



BOTH THE CHARLEVOIX County Planning Commission and Charlevoix Township Board met last week to consider the county's first proposed PUD. Dr. Walter Hoffmann explained his proposed development to both groups.

By Peg Ohle

Members of the County Planning Commission spent two hours early Wednesday evening discussing the Planned Unit Development amendment to the Charlevoix Township Zoning Ordinance.

Planned Unit Development, as explained by County Planner Bill Mercer, is "a housing project with the following characteristics:

"Dwelling units grouped into clusters, allowing an appreciable amount of land for open space;

"Much or all of its housing in townhouses or apartments, or both;

"Higher densities than conventional single family projects of the same acreage;

"Often, part of the land used for non-residential purposes, such as shopping and employment centers."

Several Planning Commissioners criticized the Planned Unit Development concept, especially in an area as sparsely populated as Charlevoix County.

Commissioner Donald Berlage spearheaded the discussion, pointing out that a development, certainly one containing commercial enterprises, would, in effect, create a satellite city.

"With all the land mass we have, why is it necessary to crowd people into a small area?" Berlage asked.

"What is this kind of development going to do to our life style? Is it in the best interest of the community?" he continued.

The Planned Unit Development amendment to Charlevoix Township's Zoning Ordinance was written specifically to permit such a development on a 52-acre parcel of land on the north end of the township.

The parcel, bounded by U.S. 31, Martin, and Waller Roads, is owned by Dr. Walter F. Hoffmann of Charlevoix, and plans for a combined shopping center and residential development there were announced several months ago.

Since that time, the developers have been trying to get the Township Zoning Board to rezone the property so that such a development would be legal. The present Zoning Ordinance does not provide for combined residential and business development, hence the Planned Unit Development amendment.

The County Planning Commission further criticized the amendment on the basis that it would take business from Charlevoix's downtown area and could be the beginning of a commercial strip "from Charlevoix to Petoskey."

Development plans for the Hoffmann property, as presented to the Township Zoning Board, provided for multiple family housing, a rest home, restaurant, car dealership, and retail outlets such as hardware and furniture stores.

Berlage pointed out that the proposed P.U.D. amendment to the Township Zoning Ordinance does not specify any percentage figures for residential and commercial development. "Will there be 40 acres of commercial and 12 acres of residential building?" he asked.

County Planning Commissioners closed their meeting with agreement that Planned Unit Development may be all right for urban and suburban areas, but if applied to Charlevoix County, it should be done in a very limited way.

The matter is now in the hands of Charlevoix Township officials.

Two Youth Canoe Mighty Michigan

--Anna Steere

"There's kind of a feeling down in Chicago that the lake is all cemented, they don't realize there are these fabulous islands of forests and that's what we are going to show."

--Michael Steere

Two brave Chicago youth set out three weeks ago to conquer Lake Michigan by canoe and apparently they're making it.

Michael and Anna Steere of LaGrange, Ill. wanted to show fellow Chicagoans that Lake Michigan is still a place of beauty.

So, the college-aged couple decided to paddle from Ludington up the coast across the Mackinac Island chain down the west side of the lake to Manitowoc.

"There's kind of a pervasive ignorance in Chicago about Lake Michigan," said Michael, a 23-year-old Roosevelt University graduate.

Wild Land

"A lot of people are under the impression it is a sewer and that there's no wild land on the lake."

But, both he and his wife, Anna, are finding out that it isn't true with only a few exceptions.

"We have a little trouble in state parks now and then," said Anna.

"We come rolling up in at dusk, the lake is kicking up and the guy says we're full."

They said they had the worst problem was at Ludington when they tried to escape the dangers of a four-foot surf and were told to move on.

Little Understanding

"This guy had little understanding," Michael said.

"He said they were full.

"So rather than try to argue with him, we just snook into a remote part of the park."

Except for other similar incidents, the Chicago couple said their sojourn to find the wild shores of Lake Michigan have been trouble free.

While most would think traveling by canoe in Lake Michigan would be dangerous, neither Michael or Anna thought it took guts.

Takes Patience

"It takes patience, you've got to know what the boat will do," Michael said.

"You've always got to wait for the lake.

"The lake is the boss, you can't go when you want to go, you've got to go when the weather will let you go."

She said there's no way to predict the water.

"Nobody can tell you what this means or if the wind blows a certain way this will happen," she said.

"There's nothing you can use to predict the water."

Uninhabited Areas

While there are still some uninhabited stretches of beach, they said there are too many cottages on the shore.

"I also think there's just too much cheap automobile tourism around here," Michael added.

"It's more apparent down the beach by Sleeping Bear."

He said the area is just too geared to people wanting to be able to hop out of their cars and go down the beach to buy things.

"Like the way you go see the dunes is not to walk the dunes, but you go to Glen Haven and take a dune ride," he said.

Michael said he remembered walking out alone with the winds screaming across the dunes.

Dune Rides

Then all of a sudden, a dune ride came roaring by.

"Actually, there are very few roads that skirt the lake," Anna says.

National Park

They both thought the national park program was terrific.

Traveling by canoe, the Steeres say, allows them to see the need for that type of program.

"When you get in a canoe, you experience the lake exactly the way the Frenchmen did 300 years ago," Michael said.

"It really looks better from the water when you really can't see all the buildings and farming.

"Now and again, it's really precious, you can see something that must look exactly like it did three hundred years ago and that's the reason for going."

Erosion Concern

They say their major concern is the erosion.

"It's not so bad here because the coast line is low, but if you go south where there are bluffs, well a whole forest has toppled into the lake," Michael said.

"It's quite spectacular."

The Chicago couple hopes to show the slides they take during the trip to several local clubs.

"There's kind of a feeling down in Chicago that the lake is all cemented in, they don't realize there, these fabulous islands of forests and that's what we are going to show," Michael said.

MICHAEL AND ANNA STEERS of La Grange, Ill. recently stopped by Charlevoix on the way around Lake Michigan by canoe. They are attempting to visually record some of Lake Michigan's wild spots.

Technical Error

Schools Get More Money

All Charlevoix school districts will receive an additional .2 mill as the result of an appeal to the State Tax Commission made by the Charlevoix and Boyne Falls School Districts.

Local districts will now receive 9.2 mills in taxes, an increase of .2 mill. The Charlevoix County Tax Allocation Board had originally alloted 9.0 mills to the schools, .5 less than had been allocated to them in 1973.

In dollars the .2 mill will mean an additional $13,706 to the Charlevoix School district; $2,220 to the Boyne Falls district; $14,319 to the Twin Valley district; $1,316 Beaver Island district; $2,224, Petoskey district; $118, Ellsworth district and $551 Vanderbilt district.

The latter three are districts with which Charlevoix county schools are fractional.

Appeals to the State Tax Commission were made by Supt. James A. McKimmy of Charlevoix and Richard A. Kelly of Boyne Falls on the Allocation Board's ruling when they (the school districts) were not given a hearing at the time the board set the final rate as required by law.

The appeal also alleged that the county did not include revenue sharing funds as anticipated revenue at the time of the county's budget was presented to the Tax Allocation Board.

In a letter from Robert L. Purnell, chairman of the State Tax Commission, following a hearing held here on Aug. 8, it stated that:

"The commission...after reviewing the report of the field staff and the testimony presented at the hearing there was a technical error of law on the part of the County Tax Allocation board in that it did not actually conduct hearings before entry of the final order, although it is apparent that the school districts were present at the meeting at which the final order was adopted.

"Also it is apparent that the county's budget did not include the revenue sharing funds as an anticipated revenue."

In giving the additional .2 mills to the school districts, the State Tax Commission upped the total millage to 15.2 mills.

The county will still receive 4.8 mills, the townships 1.0 mill and the Charlevoix Emmet Intermediate School District .2 mill.

Charlevoix Youth Learning Lifesaving Technique Skills

By KAREN BERRY

Swimming instructor Chuck Novak yells to his class to jump into Lake Charlevoix's icy blue waters.

About 15 junior high school kids slowly slip into the glassy smooth lake and attempt to rescue their partners.

It was only a pretend exercise, but it was an important part of the junior lifesaving class being taught by Novak and Erin Arvilla.

"The children in the class are progressing pretty well," Novak said.

"Usually it takes a good three weeks to get them started.

"I think that as a total staff we are pleased with the progress."

To pass a junior lifesaving you need to know the skills of rescuing someone without endangering your own life.

How to use the safety equipment on the beaches and how to set up and organize a good beach are also important, Novak says.

The second instructor, Erin Arvilla, "I think they've been doing great. They've got a lot to learn. Not only the holds to use, but also the responsibility of being a jr. lifesaver. Even before they pass the class, they've got to watch out for others, and they themselves have to follow the rules of the beach and make sure that others do too."

The students seem to think the class is a lot of work, but they also seem to feel it's worth it.

One student, Karen Lass of Charlevoix said that she thinks the class is interesting and finds it pretty easy.

Donna Solomon of Boulder Park said, "I took the class because I want to become a better swimmer. I'm enjoying it. It's a pretty good course. The hardest part is saving anyone at all."

Jeff Cockfield, 13, passed the course last year. He's too young to take senior lifesaving, so he's taking Jr. lifesaving again. He said it was hard the first time, but if anyone wants to take it twice, the second time is a lot easier.

Another student, Debbie Talis, 13, said, "I do a lot of swimming, and I think it's important for a good swimmer to know how to save people. I think this course is better than any of the others. Probably the hardest part is saving a struggling person."

Jewel Climas of Charlevoix said that she needs to take this course because she's going to be a counselor at camp next year. She thinks it's pretty easy as long as you understand what you're doing.

Editorials/Opinions

Hayes Township Needs To Re-evaluate Zoning

As supporters of zoning and planning for good land use, we are sorry to see in our midst an example of adjoining Residential and Industrial zones without a buffer area to protect homeowners from the nuisances of a mining operation.

The example is in Bay Shore, Hayes, Township, where property owned by Hodgkiss & Douma, a road contracting company, was recently rezoned from Agricultural to Industrial in a new zoning ordinance. This property adjoins the Michigan Shores subdivision.

Michigan Shores property owners have objected to the rezoning and the Charlevoix County Planning Commission has suggested that an adequate buffer zone be etablished. However, neither the Hayes Township Zoning Board nor Hodgkiss & Douma has paid any attention to the complaints.

The District Health Department has also cited the potential problems that mining operations could create for well water supplies and septic tanks systems in the subdivision.

Last week, an attorney who owns property in the subdivision said that the property owners were considering several courses of action to protect their property rights and land values.

It would be too bad if the situation results in a lawsuit against the Township.

It seems as though Hodgkiss & Douma could be good enough neighbors to agree to the buffer zone, especially since Don Hodgkiss of the company is a member of the Emmet County Planning Commission and knows the value of proper planning and zoning.

Should PUD Zoning Be Allowed Up North?

Charlevoix Township is considering an amendment to its zoning ordinance which would permit combined residential and commercial development on certain parcels of land within the township.

We wonder about the advisability of encouraging such developments in the Charlevoix area.

The concept of this type of planning, called Planned Unit Development, originated in the metropolitan area where land for housing and business is scarce.

Charlevoix County has plenty of vacant land for both residential and business expansion.

There is really no need for acres of cluster, multiple housing surrounded by retail stores, restaurants, filling stations, and all the other enterprises that might be attracted by such development.

Certainly, if Planned Unit Development is permitted in the area, such developments should be mainly residential with perhaps two or three small stores for convenience of the residents.

The proposed amendment to the Charlevoix Township zoning ordinance does not specify what percentage of land in any Planned Unit Development should be devoted to residential or commercial purposes.

It is possible that within walking distance of the city of Charlevoix, a whole new business area, surrounded by a few houses, could be built.

Girl Scouts Need Help

One of the basic strengths of our society is the concept of voluntary social action. For most Americans voluntarism means a commitment to improving the quality of life--in the community, in the nation.

By donating their time and skills to organizations such as Girl Scouts, many citizens are able to give responsible service to their communities. We need Girl Scouts and they need us.

This fall, Girl Scouts are again conducting an adult recruitment drive for volunteer leaders, in their continuing effort to bring Girl Scouting within reach of all girls who want to belong.

In Girl Scouting voluntarism is more than a simple commitment; it's a way of life. And, since the ultimate responsibility for the Girl Scout movement rests with the volunteers and their dedication to young people, we are happy to lend our support to the organization's adult recruitment campaign.

Today, over half a million women and men work in partnership with more than three million Girl Scouts in the country. But — and it's an important but — there is a vital need for at least twice that many adult volunteers if the organization is to achieve its goal of serving every girl who wants to be a Girl Scout.

There is a long list of girls ages 6 thru 17 who are waiting to become Girl Scouts in our area. To give them this opportunity for self-development and to give yourself personal satisfaction, join Scouting--be a Girl Scout leader.

Letters to the editor

Citizen Answers Republican

Dear Editor:

I would think by now Mr. Harris would have piled up enough brownie points from both the County Commissioners and the liberal Republican Party for an appointment to some political or government position in the very near future if it has not already been done.

He should try his positive constructive method and run for an elected office.

We might see then just how effective his positive thinking is.

His remarks about Watergate and President Nixon are very ambiguous and even a little on the incoherent side. His rhetoric seems to be articulate in some places but paradoxial and contradictory in others.

Oh well, I guess we all have our faults. What always is a mystery to me, is how people like M. Harris can use the term "positive constructive reform" without even smiling. He should know that term today is a euphemism for "Liberal give aways".

He says the primary purpose of a political party is to screen and select qualified candidates. Really Mr. Harris! Do you mean like the Nixons, Agnews, Smeekesn, etc., etc...Thanks, but who needs political parties like this?

Scrutinizing a candidate for his love of freedom, the constitution, integrity and honesty is what the party should do alright, but anyone who can read or hear the news, knows that this kind of candidate cannot be chosen today, for obvious reasons.

It wouldn't be politically expedient for the party to endorse the conservative constitutionalist.

I'll close by saying there is no malice or contempt on my part for Sobriety Bucky and hope he will reply in a not too profound and eloquent manner, so a "negative perpetrator" may comprehend it in a positive way.

Respectivully,

Negative Perpetrator

What Happened to Local Fair?

109 Park Avenue
Charlevoix, Michigan
August 14, 1974

Editor
The Charlevoix Courier
Bridge Street
Charlevoix, Michigan

Dear Sir:

The Charlevoix Waterfront Fair for Artists and Craftsmen, of August 10 was, as indicated by the size of the crowd it drew and the financial rewards garnered by many of the exhibitors, a success, but I would like to ask a question that has also been asked by many puzzled, and disgruntled, Charlevoix residents--where are the Charlevoix artists in their own art fair? The city and its Chamber of Commerce set up the fair originally to encourage local and area talent to exhibit their work for each other and the community to show what was being done and to possibly open a local market for those desiring to sell. As indicated by this year's brochure, just over 6 percent of the spaces available were granted to residents with Charlevoix addresses, less than 3 percent to people within a twenty-mile radius of the town, less than 10 percent overall of the exhibit spaces given to area artists. Why this decisive imbalance? Why have local artists been excluded from their own fair after having been able to exhibit, for several years running, in the past? Who is responsible for telling them they can't continue, only to find themselves elbowed aside by exhibitors from Florida, Arizona, New York, Illinois, Ohio, and Wisconsin, people who follow the commercial summer art trail circuit for their livelihood, many dragging in what can only be termed junk? As it stood, the art fair could have been held successfully anywhere; as a representation of Charlevoix and environs it left quite a bit to be desired. Who did it represent, the art fair committee or the community?

Last year, my own work, based on photographs, was turned down under the committee rule stating, "The Fair is open to all amateur and professional artists and craftsmen of all categories, exhibiting only ORIGINAL (their capitals) items of their own creation." I accepted the explanation, given verbally, in person, by a committee member, that works based on photographs did not constitute "original" work, and thought no more of it. That was the only reason given. Then I went to the fair. The amount of "original" work based on photographs was laughable, especially the pieces done by a portraitist who comes to Charlevoix early each winter to photograph local residents and turns the results into finished portraits. They sit for his camera, not his brush. The Charlevoix Courier of Feb. 20, 1974 ran this item: "Ronald F. Farrell, who

By BOB CLOCK

When Richard Nixon was re-elected president in 1972, Clockwise examined his conscience and resigned as a precinct delegate in the Republican Party.

The event wasn't covered by national television and no one asked me why. But I'll tell you. I simply could not continue to contribute my time and annual dues to an organization which had such a devious individual as its standard-bearer in Washington.

At that time, of course, we knew little of the role Nixon played in Watergate or the cover-up. But we did know that the war he had promised to end in 1968 was still raging in Southeast Asia.

The events of the past two weeks have more or less vindicated my opposition to Richard Nixon and I suppose I could be excused if I danced a jig every night on the table top at the Shamrock.

But I don't.

Like most Americans, I feel a great sense of relief at having Richard M. packed away in mothballs at San Clemente. I shudder to think how close we came to losing this republic of ours under his shoddy mismanagement and I have made a solemn resolve to do everything I can to see that we never come that close again.

But I also commiserate greatly with Richard M. — the man — who must continue to live with the monumental insecurity that was at the root of the many frauds and injustices he served upon the American people.

The question remains how anyone so suspicious, so unsure of himself, so vindicative toward those who opposed him could ever have risen to the highest elective office in the land. This is a riddle that future historians will have to unravel. The answer, when it comes, will probably tell the American people a great deal about themselves.

Two great goods, I believe, will result from the Watergate quagmire.

First, Congress must now draw up a new hard-and-fast set of regulations governing campaign financing to insure that it will never again be possible for well-heeled individuals or special interest groups to purchase political clout through their campaign donations.

If Congress fails in this, then it has failed to learn the lesson of the Nixon Administration.

Secondly, Nixon has established a precedent for cleaning house in the executive branch that may not be all bad. Until that fateful Friday, Aug. 9, the nation was literally wedded to its chief executive for four years at a stretch, barring impeachment and its attendant agonies.

Yet all of the great parliamentary democracies in the world provide for the removal of a head of state who loses his base of support in parliament. Until Nixon resigned, the inflexibility of our own system was threatening to tear us asunder.

Let's face it: Impeachment has no place in civilized government, since it totally destroys the offender and results in long periods of stagnation in governmental processes while the chief of state is in the dock.

Thanks to Nixon's example, it will be easier for another president to resign if and when he loses substantial support in the House and Senate.

It was unfortunate — but totally characteristic of Nixon — that he cited lose of support as the only reason for his resignation. He completely overlooked the fact that he was on the verge of criminal indictment, but that is the way Nixon does things.

Should Nixon now be prosecuted for obstruction of justice? Probably so. If there had been any assumption of guilt in his resignation speech, I, for one, would have been happy to let him go in peace. Since there was none, due process must follow in order to set the record straight.

Local Charlevoix Resident Gets Another Blast

Dear Editor:

"The love of Liberty, is the Love of Others."

Wm. Hazlitt

Perhaps a knowledgable candidate for public office should not stoop to answer the hateful tripe which was submitted by "Bucky" Harris appearing in last week's issue of the Courier — However it is doubtful if many people take his kind serious considering the track record.

In case your memory needs refreshing it was nearly 2 years ago that Mr. Harris and the total 15 members of the County Board of Commissioners endorsed County Wide Zoning as the wave of the future – the concerned land-owners however felt differently and defeated the proposal at the polls by 2 to 1.

Time, controversy, election does have a way of pin-pointing people who are in tune with their voting neighbors --really isn't this what Democracy is all about!

More effort does need to be expanded toward informing our neighbors in aiding them to become informed voters but it definitely will not be accomplished by allowing the weak to manage our affairs and do our thinking for us.

Many in and out of office shy away from controversy like the plaque but it is one ingredient deeply imbedded in the foundations of our form of government. The U.S. Constitution is my first love with Controversy firmly holding a lasting respect – the reasons are manifold but if actively practiced will eventually produce the TRUTH allowing prudent decision.

Perhaps many voters are turned off for good reason. To gain respect doesn't one have to be respectable beginning with self-respect? Is self-respect attainable to those whose integrity and honor is for sale? How can the glib dissembler claim to be speaking for majority when the majority does not vote? Hatchet men like Harris do turn off people deliberately, hopefull that people will not exercise the only remaining weapon left to us – the ballot.

Sunshine patriots will keep reminding us from now thru Nov. 5th what a fine system we have, how well it works and how much they in government have done for us – needless to say there will be silence on what they are doing to us. PEOPLE could do more for themselves providing the government would get out of our pocketbooks.

Space does not permit the enumeration of all the things distasteful about our government but I will mention one that bugs me which is – Secrecy in Government – This practice is not in keeping with the great American Tradition which begs the question – Can an elected official be considered a neighbor let alone worthy of voting support who offers misleading information regarding matters important to another neighbors' general welfare?

Government just may continue to keep us divided by misusing our tax money to buy votes but not without serious implications for the future; but we the people certainly do not have to permit it or like it.

To those who equate dissention with unpatriotism I would say you are on explosive grounds as members of the Nixon Administration could well testify.

Some preach Hate – What about Love?

The difference in crooks

By JIM FITZGERALD

Convict John Garfield pounded big rocks into little rocks. Convict Otto Kerner goes to town on weekends, for dancing and movies.

That's the difference between breaking the law and being "at variance" with it.

It is one thing to obstruct justice by slugging a cop. It is another thing to obstruct justice by taking the FBI chief to lunch and burying his head in the mashed potatoes.

I watched John Garfield on the late, late show. He got caught stealing and was sent to Sing Sing where Pat O'Brien was warden. Garfield was a big time hood and figures he should get special privileges. He didn't want to wear a prison uniform. O'Brien said OK, and Garfield had to run around the prison yard in baggy underwear.

Garfield didn't want to work. O'Brien said he'd either sweat on the rock pile or never see the outside of his cramped cell. After a few weeks, Garfeld was begging to make pebbles.

The only way I can watch TV is while reading a newspaper. While watching O'Brien best Garfield, I was reading about Otto Kerner. He used to be governor of Illinois, a federal judge, U.S. district attorney and chairman of a presidential commission. He is now in prison because, like Garfield, he got caught stealing.

Kerner's Prison is in Lexington, Ky. There are no bars on the windows. He has TV and radio in his room, along with private shower and bath. He has continual access to a library and a poolroom. He can go to town weekends and stay overnight in a hotel with his wife. There are also women convicts in Kerner's "prison" and the gals often join the men for dances and other social activities.

Pat O'Brien would have apoplexy at Lexington. John Garfield would send for Ann Sheridan and never go home.

Kerner is locked up under what is called "minimum security". This means he has more money than most people and more clout than the warden. These lace prisons are operated mostly for White House alumni. Guys like McGruder, Colson and Ehrlichman. But governors and judges are also admitted when there is room.

The only unbendable requirement is that all prisoners must have law degrees.

If you just got off a shuttle from Mars, you might wonder how come this nation clobbers little crooks and plays patty-cake with big crooks. It's all a matter of semantics. It is not important what crime you commit. What's important is what you call your crime. For instance, stealing is stealing and pickpockets go to jail. Unless you call it embezzlement in which case the stealer is given a raise in pay so he won't have to steal anymore.

If John Garfield wanted to stop a police investigation, he would slip some dough to a cop. This is called a bribe. If he lied about the bribe, he could be in more trouble. This is called perjury.

But if Richard Nixon wants to stop an FBI investigation, he simply orders the CIA to tell Efrem Zimbalist Jr. to forget it or our nation will be bombed by Cambodia. This is called being President.

And when Nixon is caught shoveling crap to the nation on prime time TV, it isn't called lying or perjuring. It is called being "at variance" with the truth.

In the Garfield movie, he finally developed a grudging respect for Warden O'Brien and, at the end, Garfield turned into a good guy.

When Nixon reached the end, he took a TV bow for saving the nation and turned into the nearest pawnshop to see what he could get for a used crown.

Meet Charlevoix

Meet Judy Franczek

Concerned about the lack of alcohol treatment facilities in Charlevoix County, Judy Franczek of Charlevoix has been out beating the bushes for a local program.

She was born and raised in Detroit, where she also formerly taught in the inner-city.

Mrs. Franczek did her graduate work in psychology and has done extensive inpatient work with alcoholism programs.

COURIER: Could you tell us about the Northern Regional Alcohol Program and some of it's goals?

FRANCZEK: Back in 1971, the senior administrator of the District Health Department wrote a grant for state funds to develop an alcoholism program because there were no services available for alcoholism in 12 Northern counties. He received a grant and Gus and I were hired as co-ordinator and assistant coordinator to develop treatment. This was his first goal and it's pretty well accomplished in the last 20 months or so. There are currently five alcoholic inpatient alcoholism programs in the 12 county area geographically distributed.

COURIER: Could you tell me what those locations are?

FRANCZEK: There is Lockwood-MacDonald Hospital in Petoskey, Community Memorial in Cheboygan, Otsego Hospital in Gaylord and Alpena General Hospital and St. Joseph General Hospial in Tawas City. Those are in patient and out patient services. Our next goal in terms of our objectives after treatment is established is to really develop a community awareness of the problem of alcoholism and get into some early case findings to develop to draw people into treatment before they are chronic alcoholics and have lost theirs jobs, lost their families, and need custodial or institutional care. With that view in mind we are holding industrial conferences, teacher education seminars, contacting the media, TV shows, so that people become aware of the symptoms of alcoholism and that either the alcoholic or their family will begin to seek treatment earlier, so that an employer or a judge, attorney, sheriff or police officer will refer earlier rather than later.

COURIER: Can you explain what kind of a budget you have to work with and where your funds for operating the program come from and then what you try to do with these funds?

FRANCZEK: Every year we prepare a long written graph about an inch thick and which we describe the kinds of programs which we would like funding for. We apply for this from the Office of Substance Abuse Services, which is a subdivision at the Department of Public Health in Michigan. Money from the OSAS office is comprised from Federal funds under the Hughes act, specifically house respect for alcohol and alcoholism treatment and education and prevention and state monies which are derived from the tax on alcoholic beverages. It's kind of a joke in the field that people who are out there problem drinking now are paying for their treatment ahead of time. All right so what we do with that money then is we contract with agencies within different communities such as hospitals, Catholic Family Social Services, in Alpena to provide a person, a trained alcoholism counselor to do the work with the service population needing service. Our budget this year was approximately $250,000.

COURIER: How is that compared to other years? Is it up or down?

FRANCZEK: This past year's budget was greater than the year before because we have developed programs. Now this really is seed money. It doesn't go on forever. Hospital programs are expected to become self substaining and so are agency programs, through the assessment of fees, according to the ability to pay through insurance collections. We're applying for about six or seven percent for this fiscal year. We won't know what our budget is until about October 1. Next year it will probably be larger.

COURIER: Is there a drug abuse problem in Charlevoix County?

FRANCZEK: Yes, there is a drug abuse problem in Charlevoix County, I know more about the alcohol problem than I do about the illegal drugs, than I do about such as Marijuana, heroin or LSD because it's more visible.

COURIER: Could you give any type of estimate about the significance of the alcohol problem in Charlevoix County?

FRANCZEK: Using the Jellinek formula which is the only acceptable measure used world-wide and is still inadequate, the basis for alcoholism rates on death by sclerosis there are approximately eight to 900 alcoholic persons in Charlevoix County. Now that's bad enough that's an astounding number, but what really hits home is that we must remember that each one of these problem drinkers has a husband or a wife or children certainly co-workers and neighbors they affect. So you multiply 8 to 900 by four and this is done nationally and we would say roughly 3,000 people have some disruption of their phsycological functioning or their family life or their job performance due to drinking and that's a lot of people who are hurting. I think that's the way I like to think about it and encourage people to think about it. They are not drunks, bad people or immoral people but people who are hurting.

COURIER: Demographically, are there any particular ages or types of people who appear to have a problem in this county?

FRANCZEK: It cuts across all levels of education of our social classes from the very poor to the very wealthy, men and women, the white population and the Indian population. Certainly we can't say that only poor people that have diabetes or heart trouble or cancer and it isn't just the poor people or uneducated who have alcoholism.

Letters to the editor

What About Merging?

I note the recent statements and comments made recently regarding the uniting of the City of Charlevoix with Charlevoix Township.

Mr. Boss has stated that he was in favor of making this area into 1 unit of government.

He also states the impossible. He is in favor of uniting the 2 units as long as the township has equal representation. With approximately 2200 registered voters in the city, how can the registered voters in the township have equal representation. This to me is another example of very narrow minded thinking as he has in mind the near equal tax base of the 2 units. May I remind him of the 1 man 1 vote principle established several years ago.

Don't get me wrong. The idea of the whole area being one city can be good for everyone but lets give this some serious considerations.

1. Police protection - I believe Chief Mol has this in mind and is building a department that can be expanded to accomplish this.
2. Water - Uniting the systems but this is going to call for a large expenditure in the expansion of the present city water system, chlorination, and larger mains in some areas of the city. A new, larger, water tank to insure a supply during emergencies.
3. Sewer - A large expenditure in this area to provide separation of sanitary and storm sewers in the city. Extension of mains into the present township area and establishing lift or pumping stations. (Specifications should be set now so all pumpings stations are alike.)
4. Electric - This may be a hard one to work out due to the township supplier at present. This was attempted 18 months ago but nothing could be accomplished.
5. Fire - I believe that this area would be very easily handled.
6. Representation - I feel that we would have to divide the area north of the Bridge into 2 or 3 precincts, the valley into one as far as Antrim and south of Antrim into 2 or 3 more. Township and city area would have to be considered on a population basis, not as part township and part city.
7. Charter - There are good and bad parts in the 4 class city act. A new charter creating a new form of government would take an estimated 2 years. Under the 4th class city act you can by ordinance create just about anything you want to do. Under a new charter you will have to create new ordinances covering a multitude of things.
8. Zoning – At present city and township are not too far apart. A review of the various areas and type of zoning that applies would have to be done.
9. Recreation - the city with some help from the school, is now furnishing a program for the city as well as several townships. This should be shared by all.

These are a few of the minor consideration as I see them. There will be a lot more. I am neither for or against annexation, consolidation or what ever you want to call it. I am interested in looking it over and seeing what can be done or would have to be done.

Special Camp Daggett Session

Kids Enjoy A Week At Camp

Charlevoix youngsters were among those last week getting a special session at Camp Daggett.

"It's a special camping session for the Char-Em Intermediate District," said Director Janet Langeland of Charlevoix.

The 45 children are from the area learning centers that during school year offer special guidance to those who might have a learning difficulty.

"We're trying to offer them a regular camping experience," she said.

Unlike a normal camp session, those attending last week's outing were given special attention.

There was almost one adult camp staff member for every three children.

During the week, youngsters were able to enjoy cooking, camping and water sports.

But most important, these youngsters were able to enjoy regular camping activities because of the close supervision.

One camp official said that under normal circumstances children with learning disabilities would be left out because they would be too slow to keep up with other children.

CHARLEVOIX YOUNGSTERS participated in a special Camp Daggett session that last week gave them more personal attention.

Entire County Has Coverage

All townships in Charlevoix County have contracts for fire-fighting with a nearby city or another township, or have their own fire-fighting equipment.

Bay Township is serviced by Boyne City, Boyne Valley has its own equipment; Chandler is serviced by Melrose Township; Charlevoix Township has its own equipment; Evangeline is serviced by Boyne City; Eveline is serviced by Boyne City, East Jordan and the city of Charlevoix; Hayes is serviced by the City of Charlevoix; Hudson is serviced by Boyne City and Vanderbilt.

Marion Township is serviced by the city of Charlevoix; Melrose has its own equipment; Norwood is serviced by the city of Charlevoix; Peaine is serviced by St. James, which has its own equipment; South Arm is serviced by East Jordan; and Wilson is serviced by both Boyne City and East Jordan.

Ambulance service to townships is not so widespread. Chandler, Hudson, Melrose, Peaine and St. James townships have no ambulance service. The city of Charlevoix provides such service to Charlevoix, Hayes, Norwood and Marion townships. Boyne City services Bay, Boyne Valley, Evangeline and Eveline townships. East Jordan covers South Arm and Wilson townships.

In most townships, fire-fighting calls are paid for on a "per call" basis by the township.

Ambulance service is provided by the cities to participating townships for a flat annual fee, with mileage paid by the patient. The fee is usually based on population of the area served.

Select State Delegates

Democrats Hold Convention

Eight delegates with one-half vote each were elected to attend the State Democratic convention in Grand Rapids this weekend. They are Mr. and Mrs. Howard Horton and Mrs. Robert Malison of Charlevoix, Martin Paul and Thomas Syrek of Boyne City, Rose Marie Seaton and Mr and Mrs. Donald Giem of Boyne Falls.

The Charlevoix County Democratic convention was held here Friday.

A regular meeting of the County Democratic committee followed the convention.

At the meeting, plans for a fund-raising dinner were made and Mrs. Ivan Whitley named to serve as chairman of the event.

It was announced that the county committee had received a citation from the State Central Committee in recognition of its 148 percent increase in memberships for 1974.

Robert Morgridge of Charlevoix will serve as coordinator for the campaign of Francis Brouillette, Democratic candidate for the 11th Congressional seat presently held by Republican Philip A. Ruppe.

The September meeting of the county committee will be held at the REA building in Boyne City Sept. 16 with the executive board meeting at 7 p.m. and the general meeting scheduled for 8 p.m.

Martin Paul, county chairman, was in Manistique Saturday to attend the 11th District convention.

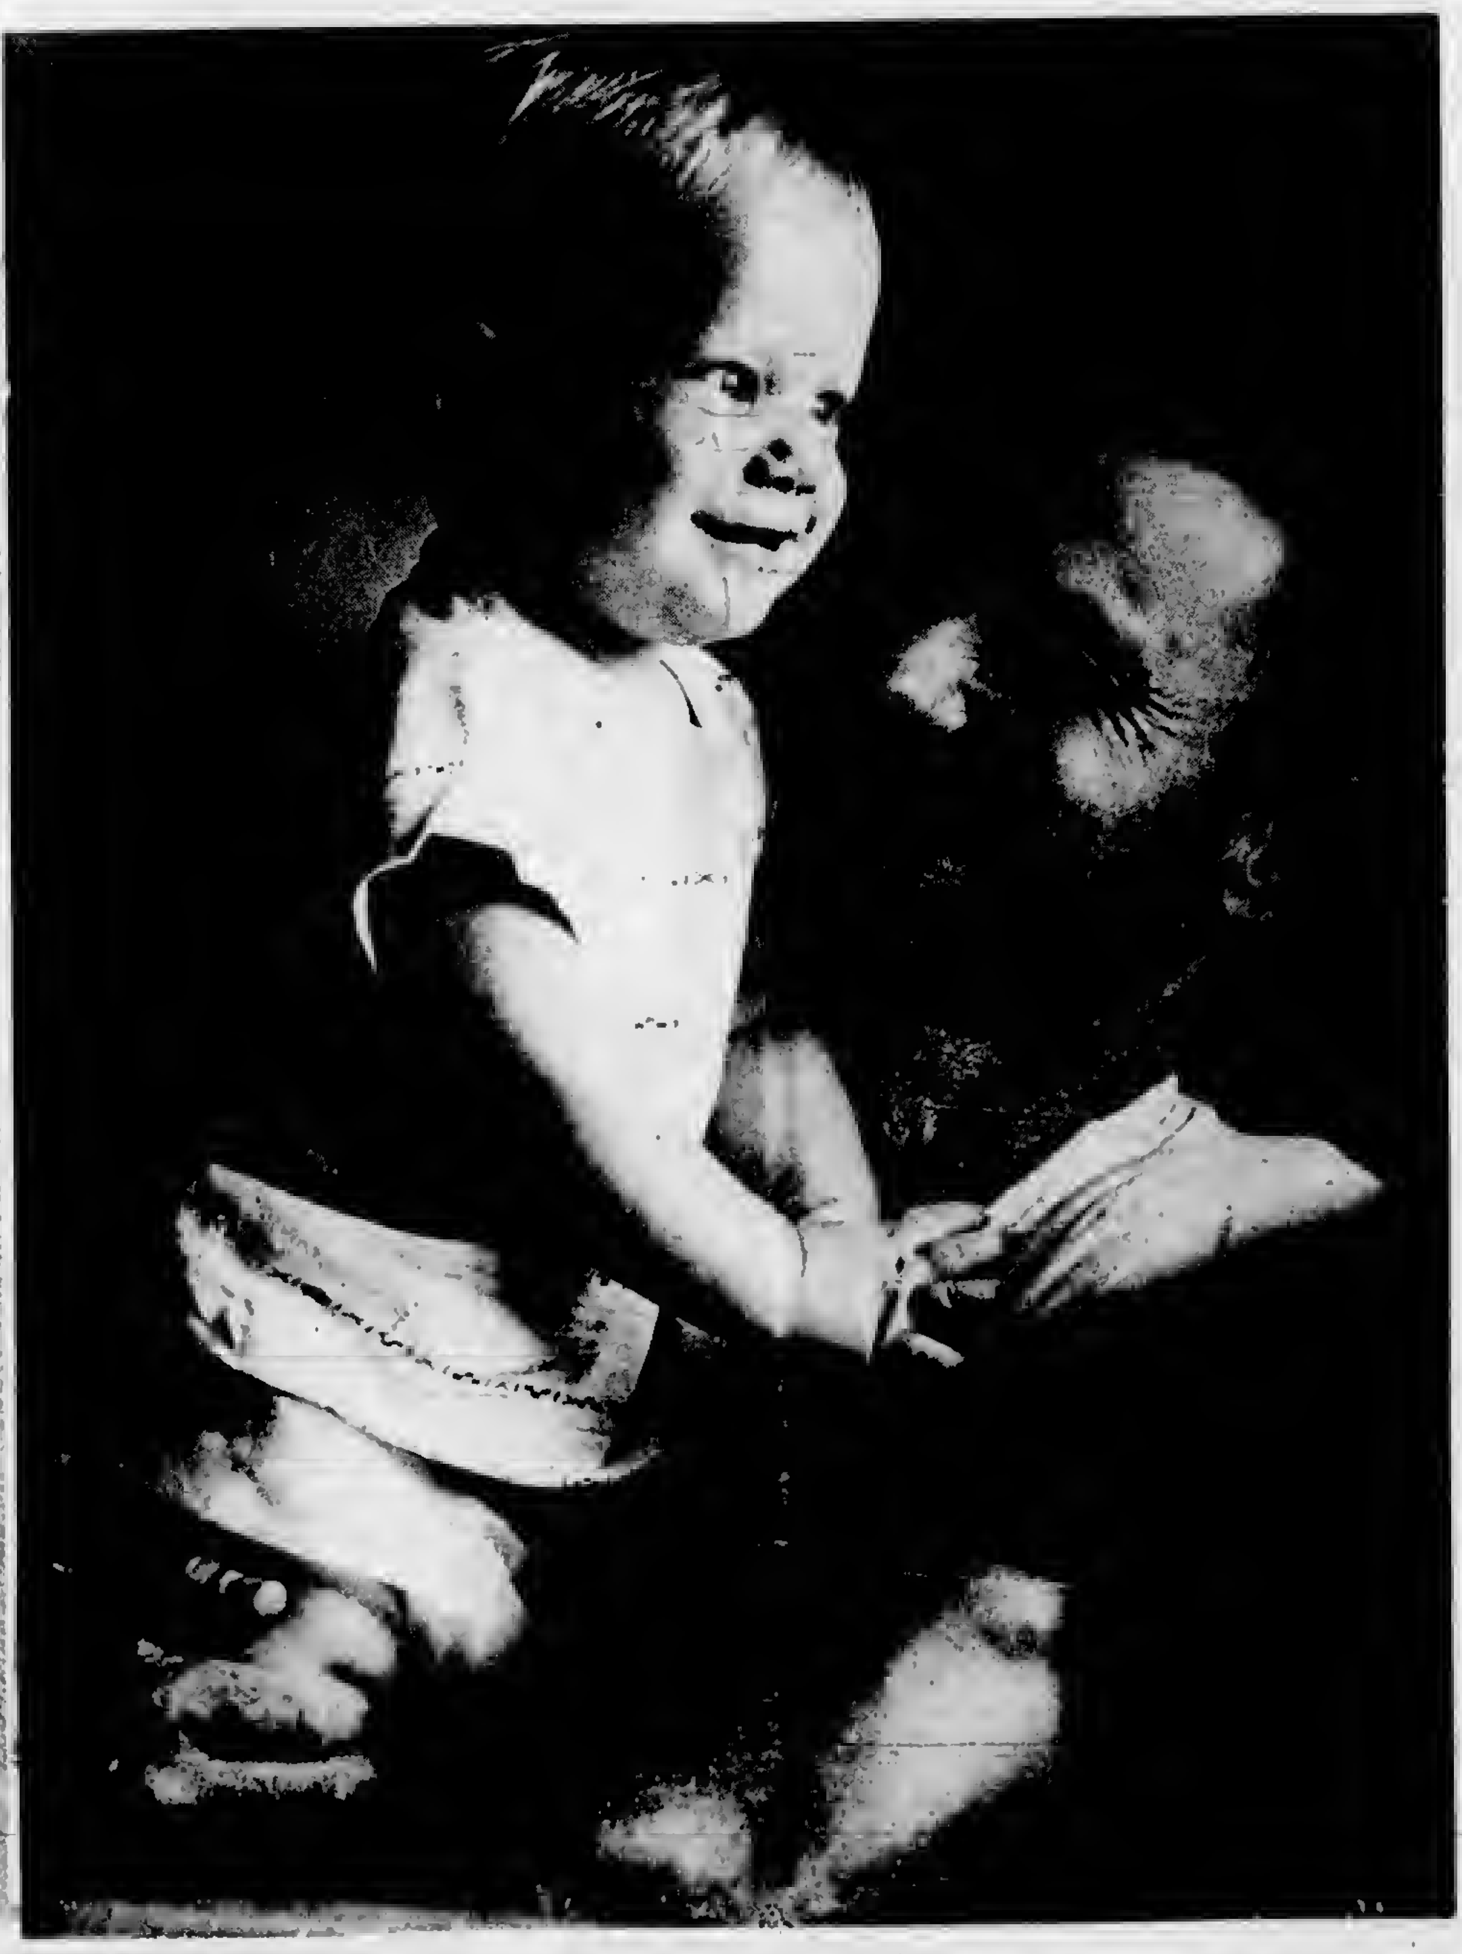
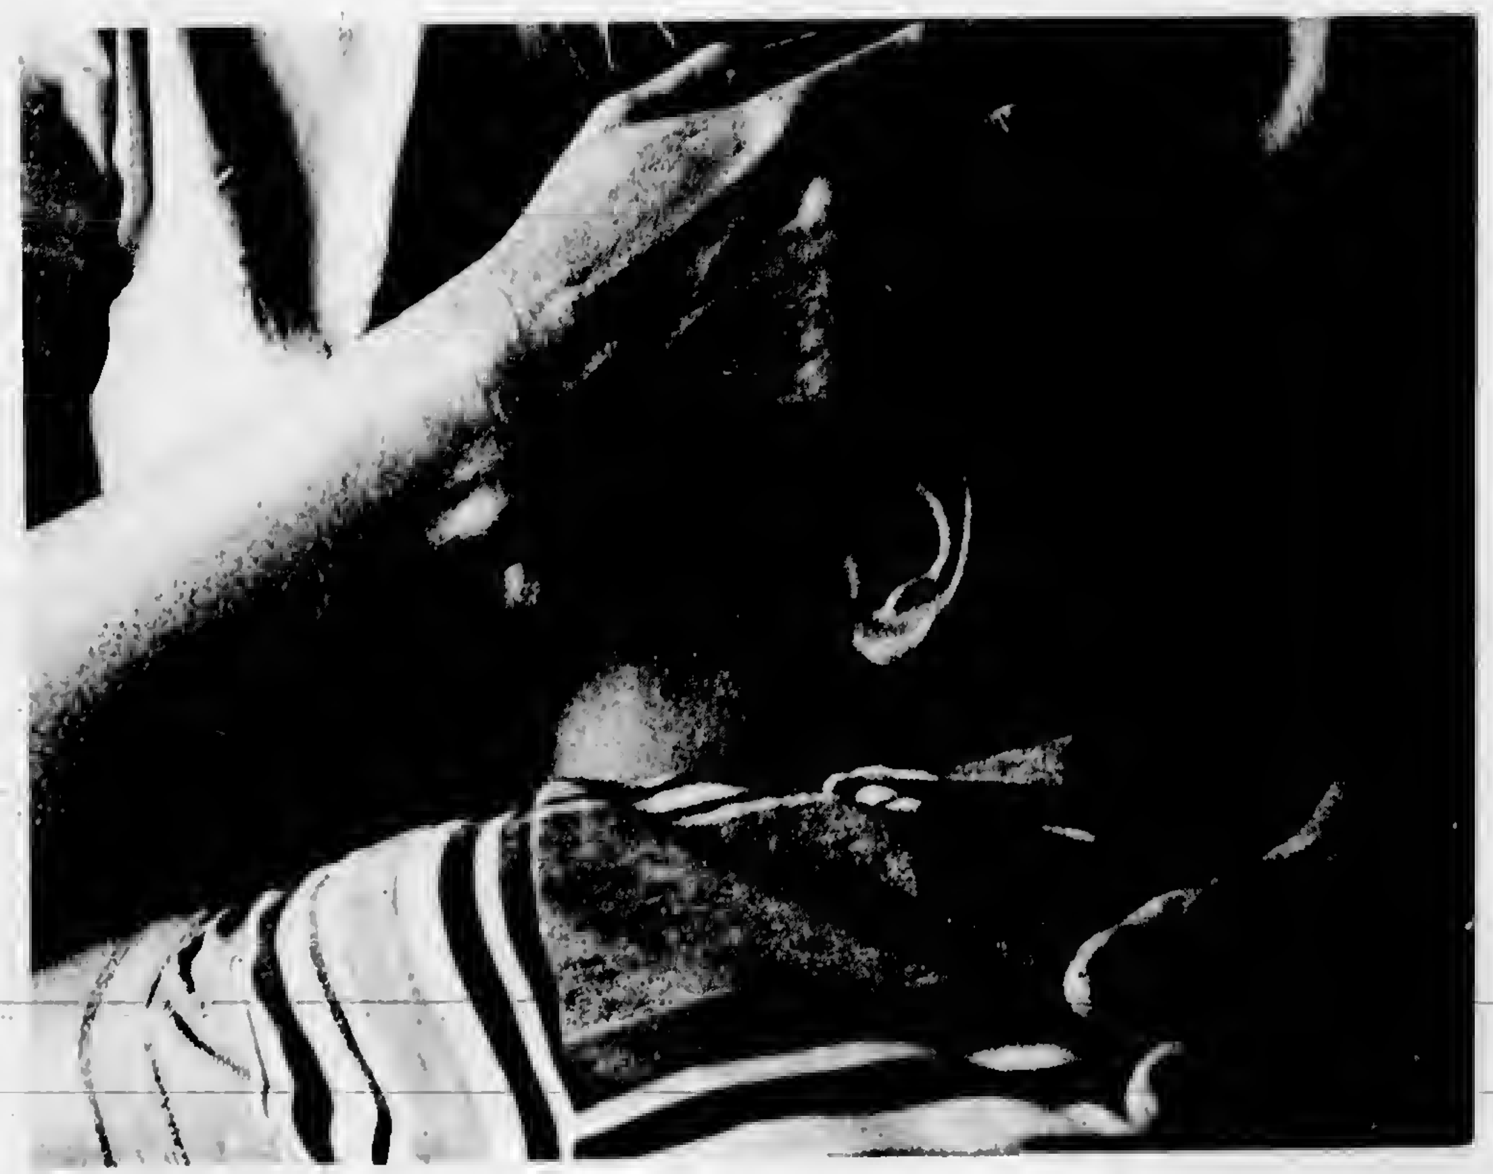
By Helen Gaskin





King With Many Sides

James Strang--A Polygamist?

Practice of polygamy and the regal role assumed by "King" James J. Strang are the two elements of sensationalism and novelty which have kept the story of the Strangite Mormons on Beaver Island alive.

This view was expressed last week by John Cumming director of the Clarke Historical Library at Central Michigan University, at a meeting of the Little Traverse Historical Society in Petoskey.

"Had the colony adhered to a simple, orthodox doctrine, it might have survived; but even in failure, it would have received only passing notice in histories," Cumming told the group.

Strang found authorization for polygamy in the Book of the Law of the Lord, which restricted the practice to those who could afford it.

The Book admonished, "Though shalt not take unto thee a multitude of wives disproportionate to thy inheritance, and thy substance; nor shalt thou take wives to vex those thou hast; neither shalt thou put away one to take another."

Since the vast majority of Strang's followers were very poor, few of them could afford more than one wife, even if they had the physical or spiritual desire, Cumming pointed out.

"By reliable estimates there were no more than 16 men on Beaver Island who adopted the practical of plural marriage," he said.

However, Strang himself apparently had both the financial and physical means of supporting more than one wife. When he died, he left four wives pregnant.

It was in 1847 that James Strang brought the first of his followers to Beaver Island from Vorhee, Wisconsin. Land values had made the prospects of building the promised city there remote. Strang, who had passed the cluster of islands in northern Lake Michigan en route to Wisconsin by steamer, conceived the idea that this might be an ideal place for his colony.

In 1850, in an elaborate ceremony, Strang was vested with a crown and declared "King", not only of Beaver Island, not only of his followers, but of God's Kingdom on earth.

Cumming called 'The Book of the Law of the Lord," " a marvelous production, which, according to Strang, was revealed to him by the Lord through the 'plates of Laban', ancient records which were lost by the Jews in ancient times."

It was from this book that Strang also conceived the idea of his kingdom. The book stated, "He (the Lord) has chosen his servant James to be King; he hath made him his Apostle to all nations; he hath established him a prophet, above the Kings of the earth; and appointed him King in Zion; by his own voice did he call him, and he sent his Angels unto him to ordain him."

The book provided that the King name a viceroy, councilors, apostles, and other officers, specified mode of dress, and many other rules.

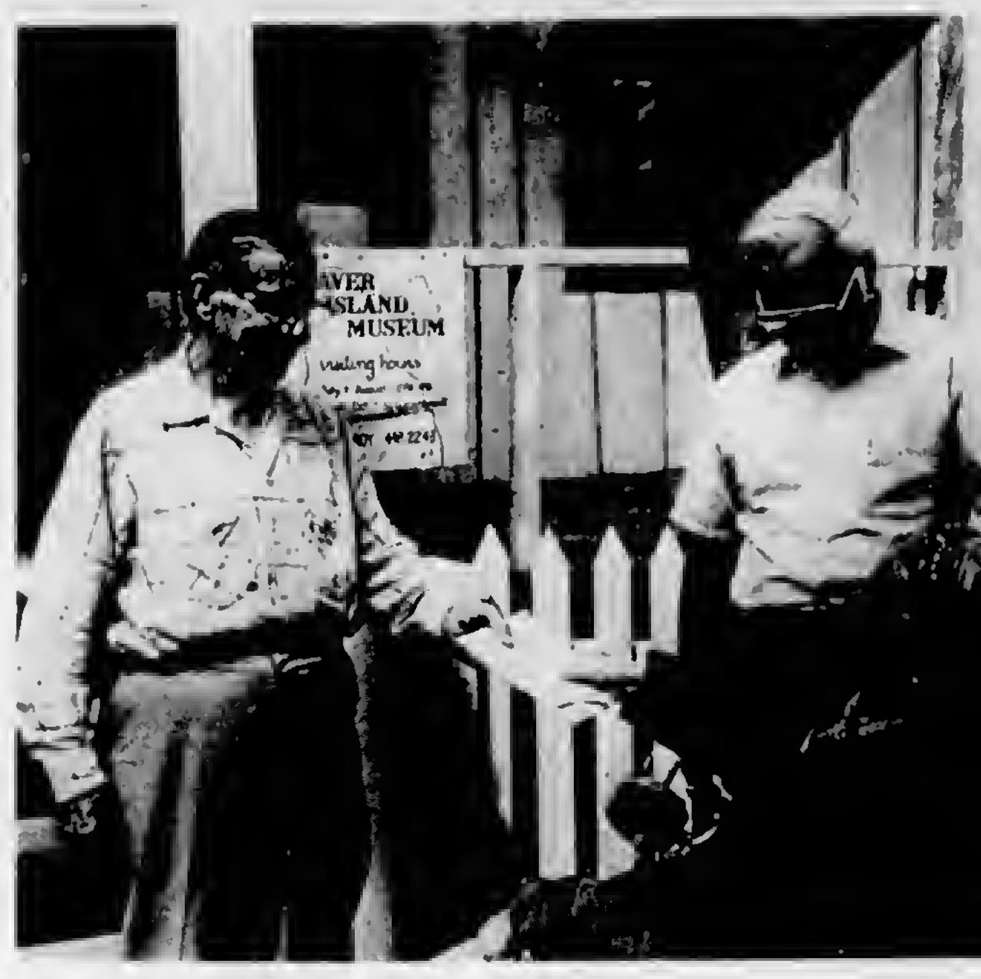
Cumming cited a portion of the Book of the Law of the law which deals with the Beaver Islands. It read, "I have appointed the Islands of the Great Lakes for the gathering of the Saints, saith the Lord, was to control all the land on these islands, and had the authority through God, not the United Statea Land Office, to give each head of household among the Saints a town lot and a farm of from 150 to 200 acres.

In 1849, Strang visited Washington in an effort to convince the government that the Beaver Island should be given exclusively to his colony, Failing in his personal plea, he later published "A Memorial to the President and Congress of the United States, and to all the People of the Nation.." in which he reviewed the wrongs done against the Mormons and plead that they be given all the uninhabited lands on the islands in Lake Michigan.

In spite of the fact that the government failed to accede to his demands, "King" Strang assumed the authority to parcel out the lands, basing that authority upon the Law of God as revealed in the plates of Laban. In short, he was giving away government land to which he had no claim.

There was much conflict between the Mormons and the Gentiles on Beaver Island, and its basis was essentially a claim to property. As the Mormons increased in number and gained political control, they were able to drive the Gentiles from the island and from property to which they legally had title.

By 1856, the Mormon interest in land had moved to mainland and they were settling near Charlevoix and Boyne City as well as in Antrim County.



A DEED to 40 square rods of property in Peaine Township in the handwriting of King James Strang was presented to the museum here Friday by Fran Martin (right) on behalf of Mrs. C. M. Brice of Florida. The presentation was made by curator A. J. Roy (left).

James Strang was elected to the State Legislature in 1852. The fact that he received all the votes on Beaver Island probably accounted for his win. Records from that period indicate that "King" Strang served with distinction in the democratic unit of government. He was re-elected in 1854 and soon he dreamed of entering Congress.

Strang's autocratic rule on Beaver Island began to breed dissatisfaction among his followers, however, and culminated in the shooting which caused his death in the summer of 1856.

The kingdom fell with the "King", and the 2600 Mormons on Beaver Island were driven out by gentiles from both the island and the mainland.

In all, "King" Strang and his followers were on Beaver Island for only nine years. Much folklore has been added to the history of that era, but interested is still high in the man who practiced polygamy and reigned with an iron hand in a democratic land.

Emmet County Fair Brings Back Memories

This week is Fair Week in the Charlevoix-Petoskey area. The Emmet County Fair opened Monday in Petoskey and will run through Saturday.

While there will be the usual carnival atmosphere at the fair, including "rides", games of chance, and hot dog stands, the real emphasis is on rural activities.

Farm boys and girls throughout Northern Michigan are exhibiting livestock they have raised from birth and their parents are showing off their skills in everything from vegetable growing, baking, and fancy work embroidery to do-it-yourself crafts and Christmas tree farming.

For those whose knowledge of farm life is limited to a glimpse from a fast-moving automobile on the highway, a visit to a county fair can be a real experience.

Observing the pride and tender care with which exhibitors groom their animals is, in itself, worth the trip. So are the displays by 4-H Club members, including such entries as home design, entomology, photography, safety and fire prevention, and cultural arts.

All exhibits are judged and prizes (usually ribbons) awarded the winners. There are many categories in each division. You may see breads--white, raisin, whole wheat, cinnamon, banana, date, Boston brown, corn, muffins, baking powder biscuits, yeast doughnuts, yeast coffeecake, quick coffeecake, sweet rolls, and plain rolls.

Farm animals of all kinds are numerous--cows, horses, ponies, pigs, sheep, goats, rabbits, chickens and turkeys. Visitors can get close enough to become acquainted.

There are canned goods displays--jams, jellies, pickles, relishes, preserves, vegetables, meat, fish and fruit.

If by now you have gained a pound or two by just looking, walk over to the collectors' hobby display. Here you will see collections of dolls, stamps, coins, insects, Indian relics, cups, glass, dishes, ceramics, fossils, bottles, and buttons.

If you like flowers, you may see real garden grown, not hothouse, flowers. There are gladiolas, zinnias, dahlias, bedding plants, rock garden plants and arrangements of cut flowers which were judged on the basis of "quality of flower 70 percent, Arrangement and suitability of container 30 percent."

If you think bees produce honey in the liquid form you buy in stores, you will be interested in seeing the comb honey display and to learn that your store honey is extracted from combs.

If you think a squash is a squash is a squash, you will learn differently when you look at the summer, hubbard, yellow, zuccinni, scalloped, buttercup and acorn varieties exhibited.

If you think fancy handkerchiefs have gone out of style, you will admire those with crocheted and tatted trim and those that are monogrammed.

If you have never seen cereal grains in their natural state, this is your chance. There is corn, oats, buckwheat, winter wheat, barley, and rye, all of the nutritious elements that fill your cereal boxes.

And if you don't know whether potatoes grow under or above the ground, you will learn at the fair.

Parsons Elected REA Head

William A. Parsons of Norwood was re-elected to the Board of Directors of the Top O' Michigan Rural Electric Company at its annual meeting last Thursday in Boyne City.

Parsons served as president of the company during the past year.

Patrick E. Harwood of Grayling, completing his term as vice-president, was elected president; Arthur Biehl of Mancelona, former secretary-treasurer, was elected vice-president; and Truman Cummings, Jr. of Harbor Springs was elected secretary-treasurer.

Walter Wiegandt of Johannesburg was also re-elected to the Board of Directors.

Karl Waldner of Boyne City nominated himself for a directorship from the floor. He cited what he called "several irregularities" in the operation of the company in his nomination speech.

Senior Citizens To Be Feted

September 15 will be Senior Citizens Day in Charlevoix County. On that day there will be a pot-luck picnic in Whiting Park sponsored by the County Commission on Aging.

Transportation will be furnished by either school buses or a share-the-ride program.

Although the picnic is to be a social gathering questionnaires will be distributed in an attempt to learn the needs of senior citizens in the area. One hundred questionnaires must be filled out to obtain data which will be the basis for determing and assessing senior citizen needs and procuring programs and funds.

The County Commission on Aging is the administrative agency through which Federal funds for senior citizen needs will be obtained.

At the present time, the Commission is seeking funds for mini buses to provide transportation to hospitals, doctors' and dentists' offices, and other places where senior citizens have business.

The Commission is also planning a pilot nutrituion program through which approximately 50 meals a week will be served to senior citizens in the county at a minimum cost.

Tennis Talk

In all games which require making contact with a ball, there is one essential fundamental: KEEP YOUR EYE ON THE BALL.

Naturally, the beginning player decides the importance of this funadmental is exaggerated, but any tournament player will readily testify that there is nothing in tennis quite as important as watching the ball.

Consider, for instance, that 75 percent of all points played in tennis are decided by mistakes. Of these mistakes, probably 65 or 70 percent are made because the player did not watch the ball actually make contact with the racquet.

These are not arbitary figures. Every study on the subject has verified them.

Most beginning and intermediate players will watch the ball until it bounces in front of them and then look to where they are trying to hit as they stroke the ball. The result is often an error on what should have been an easy shot.

Let's examine how many things can affect the ball AFTER it has already bounced.

Obviously, the most common factor in changing the bounce of a ball is an uneven surface. Even a pebble on the court can change the bounce enough to make you miss-hit if you are not watching the ball all the way to your racquet.

There are other factors which are not so obvious. A strong wind can change the flight of a ball. If a ball is hit with a tough spin and you have misjudged the amount of spin, you will inevitably hit the ball off the wood (or metal as the case may be).

Finally, the velocity of a ball is often very difficult to determine. If a ball is coming faster than you anticipated and you take your eye off it, the ball will be past you before you have a chance to swing.

These factors which affect the flight of a ball can occur at any time. Unless you have superb concentration and are constantly watching the ball hit your racquet, you will make errors on relatively easy shots.

Errors made through a lack of concentration are gifts to your opponent. The serious player will eliminate these kinds of errors in order to become a winner.

It is one thing to get beat by a better player who has won the points. But it is downright distressing to beat yourself through errors against an average player.

All players should be aware of the times when it is most common to take one's eye off the ball. Very few players actually see the ball hit their racquets when they serve. There is no excuse for this mental lapse since a player has total control over the serve.

When attempting a passing shot (i.e. a winner), many players look up to see where they are hitting. This also happens on the volley and the overhead smash.

It is hard not to become over eager when attempting to hit winners.

The next time you go out to play a little tennis, see if you can watch the ball make contact with the racquet. If you keep your eye on the ball regularly, I will guarantee that you will become a more consistent tennis player.

PEE WEES ended their summer-long season last week in competition that was played on both Tuesday and Thursday in Charlevoix.

Pee Wees End Season With Play-Off Games

Last Thursday marked the final game of the year for the Pee Wee Division of the Charlevoix Baseball League.

Larry Ford has worked all summer with six, seven and eight year olds, teaching the basic fundamentals of baseball.

Local baseball fans may recall that it was Larry Ford who was instrumental in getting Little League Baseball started in Charlevoix.

"I just started the fire", Wood said.

"It took a lot of people and their efforts to keep the flame going."

Working with youngsters in the learning stages of baseball is what Larry Ford enjoys most these days, and the kids obviously enjoy him, too.

Teams are evenly split up according to abilities before each game (which is played with a tennis ball to avoid injury), with a different youngster being named team captain each time out.

The team captains pick their team name for the games, and that leaves a lot of room for imagination.

The teams Thursday were the Tigers and Pirates, but on Tuesday the six-year-olds came up with the Dinosaurs vs. the Yellow Jackets. High scores are not unusual, but lop-sided scores are.

Thursday's game of 14-8 in favor of the Pirates was one of the larger margins of victory.

The Tuesday game of 10-9 in favor of the Yellow Jackets was more typical.

Mike Herriman went 7 for 7 Tuesday, hitting a home run. His teammate, Diana Loder collected 3 hits. In the same game, Mike Ford collected 2 home run for the Dinosaurs.

Others participating included: John Loder, Jeff Smith, Tim Salmonson, Mike Johnson, Dennis Curtis, Jody Pittman, Eric Bagby, Mannes Towsley and David Gibson. Among the 7 & 8 year olds were: Tony Towsley, Rick Gallant, Dave McKenzie, Jim Young, Jeff DeVries, Mike Joccia, Martha Staley, Mike Roebuck, Randy Skiver, Shannon Spence, Louis Raymond, Beth Ford, Sharon Losh and Phil Ladkey.

Emphasis in the games is not placed on winning, but rather on learning the positions on the field, throwing, catching, hitting and sportsmanship.

When a youngster learns to throw to the base ahead of the runner, instead of the one they just left, the coach has done his job.

Go To State Finals

Kay's Bomb Kentucky Fried

Kay's Red Devils of East Jordan bombed Kentucky Fried Chicken of Charlevoix 14-4 in the championship game to win the Women's Area Slo-Pitch District Tournament.

Kay's, undefeated in 20 games this year, now goes to the state finals in Lansing this weekend.

Kentucky Fried, also undefeated going into tournament action, lost twice to Kay's in the double elimination tournament.

In the title game, Glendoro Murphy, Linda Ballatine, and Arvilla Kowalski had three hits for Kay's. Toni Felter and Jodi Alger had two hits for Kentucky Fried. One of Alger's hits was a home run.

Pam Bur was the winning pitcher while Pam Parsel took the loss.

A & W, the other Charlevoix entry, was eliminated by Chuck's Marathon 18-9. Holly Garten and Regina Borths had three hits in the losing effort. Borths and Connie Shores also had home runs for A & W.

Kentucky Fried Chicken's first loss to Kay's was a heart breaker. Kentucky Fried out hit Kay's 14-11 but lost the ballgame 9-7. Cheryl Pence, Leanna Steelman, and Jodi Alger collected two hits in the loss.

In the semi-final game, Kentucky Fried earned their second chance at Kay's by walloping Gibbard's Shell 19-7. Pam Parsel pitched a seven hitter while offensive support was provided by Terri Morris with two home runs. Faye Alger and Heidi Dove chipped in with four hits apiece.

Bikers Travel 269 Miles

Mark Cothe and Chuck Moran of Mt. Clemens biked 269 miles last week to visit Mark's grandmother, Mrs. Florence Dundas, in Charlevoix.

Leaving Mt. Clemens with their camping equipment, the young men sent three days on the road, camping out in Sanford the first night, and in Cadillac the second night.

Wins 14 to 12

Shed Nips Portside

In a key game last week, the Shed nipped Portside Sports 14-12 to remain undefeated in the second round of the men's slow pitch league. The Shed and Topside are tied for first.

Pat Kerr led the attack with two home runs, a triple, and a sacrifice fly for a total of seven RBIs. Gale Sheldon also had a home run in the contest.

Behind 10-8 going into the fifth inning, the Shed erupted for four runs. Pete Spieles led off with a single and scored on Kerr's long triple. Sheldon followed with a single scoring Kerr and Glen Taylor drilled a double to score Sheldon. Winning Pitcher Norm Probert drove in the fourth run of the inning with a single.

Portside got one of the runs back in their half of the fifth on singles by Fritz Allard and Lee Simpson. Allard scored when Brian VanLoo was safe on an error.

The Shed scored the eventual winning runs in the sixth when Carlo DeAnglo and Spieles singled to lead off the inning. Kerr hit a long sacrifice fly scoring DeAnglo. Taylor came through with a single to score.

Portside had a chance in the bottom of the seventh but could not get the big hit. Tom Meggison had already scored when Sam Washburn and Van Loo reached base. VanLoo represented the tying run, but a long fly ball ended the game.

There was plenty of scoring in the early innings. Kerr and Sheldon had consecutive solo homers in the first for the Shed. Portside tied it up at 2-2 when Bruce Meggison singled to score VanLoo and Vince Leff.

Both teams came up with big second innings. The Shed scored five runs as Portside commited four errors in the inning. The Shed took advantage of the miscues as Kerr's home run was the big blow.

Portside's big inning started on four hits by Allard, Simpson, Washburn, and VanLoo. After Doug Winnell was safe on an error, Kevin Swanson walked. Bruce Meggison then hit a sacrifice fly. Randy DeYoung walked and Tom Meggison singled in the fifth run of the inning.

Portside went ahead in the bottom of the fourth as Leff and Bruce Meggison singled and scored on wild throws. That gave Portside a temporary lead.

Olsen Wins Tourney

Gretchen Olsen won the women's single championship by besting Carol Van Woerkom 6-3, 3-6, 7-5 in the second annual Charlevoix Open Tennis Tournament.

Olsen neutralized the Van Woerkom power game with a steady backcourt play. The three hour match was the second marathon of the day for the two finalists.

In doubles, Olsen and Renee Edelman outlasted Van Woerkom and Ramie Streng 6-4, 4-6, 7-6. Olsen and Edelman won the tie breaker in the third set 5-4.

In both the single and doubles Van Woerkom had to defeat the number one seed to get to the finals.

Streng had to use all his strength to beat Drew Wachler in the semi-finals, and had nothing left for the finals.

A Drink For A Drunk

perience with the AA program."

He learned that the blackouts he had experienced throughout his life were not normal.

"I sat at the tables and everyone told their own story," he said about his visits to AA in Charlevoix and other cities.

"A lot of them didn't fit me, but a few me to the T."

After learning '-that presidents of companies, priests and engineers admitted to being alcoholics and their problems were far less than Jim C.'s problems, he said he began to believe he had a problem.

"I worked with the program for a year and a half—and then it was only hit and miss," he said.

"No one had bawled me out or shamed me because everytime I would have a drink I would crucify myself."

Jim C. said it finally dawned on his alcoholic soaked-brain that if he was going to ever make the program, he would have to work diligently with the program and its steps.

"My last drink was years ago," he said.

"Today more than ever I realize I am a drink away from being a drunk."

Still Have A Local Art Show?

displays his paintings each summer during the Waterfront Fair...was in Charlevoix last week to take photographs of buildings and landscapes which may lend themselves to brush and canvas. He took many pictures of Charlevoix's C & O depot..." Mr. Farrell displayed again this summer. At the base of Clinton Street was a painting of Amsterdam houses reflected in that city's canals, lifted from a photograph on page 683 of the May, 1974 National Geographic. Many other paintings had to be based on photographs, for their planes of vision could be achieved only with wide-angle or telephoto lens. What constitutes originality in the eyes of the committee? Strictly applied, this rule barring works based on photographs as being not "original" would have kept certain works of Picasso and Cezanne out of the fair, yet no one contends these works were not "of their own creation." Why apply this "photography" provision to some applicants and turn away with a blind eye from others whose work is based primarily upon what the provision purportedly seeks to keep out of the fair—unoriginal work? What criteria are being used for "original?" What artist hasn't used photographs to some extent!?

To continue on the "original" theme, what are mounted butterflies doing in an artists and craftsmen show? What is original about exotic, rare, thus expensive and lucrative butterflies perched on dried weeds and flowers inside plastic cubes? Beautiful? Decidedly. A craft? Debatable, for what did he make rather than assemble? Art? Never. That exhibit belongs in the hobbycraft show, crowd pleasing as it is.

I do not intend this, in any way, to be a downgrading of the efforts expended by the committee, both this year and in years past, in making the Waterfront Fair one of the top attractions of the north, and for bringing, last week, a stunning work of one of America's foremost artists to the park (a vast improvement over last year's assemblage of rags). But I, and I speak for many residents who share the same view, feel that the Fair, as it now stands, has been allowed to be overextended beyond its original aims, to the detriment of the community to which it is responsible. Ten local artists, one from Petoskey, one from East Jordan, and two from Boyne City do not a Charlevoix Waterfront Art Fair make. Perhaps the committee, 11/12 female as it is now constituted, could see fit to rearrange its membership for possible up to 1/3 male participation, especially on their jury to select exhibits, to gain another viewpoint, to hopefully eliminate much of the junk ceramics, pottery, amateurish paintings, and silly wire jewelery? 140 spaces should be 140 spaces of quality. Surely the local and neighboring artists who exhibited in the past had merit and quality then, or they never would have entered their work. Maybe the quality I'm speaking of isn't only artistic but one of fairness and civic duty. In other words, return the fair to the community for whom it was intended and to whom it belongs.

Yours truly,
David L. Miles

Durr-Bilicki Exchange Vows At St. Francis Xavier

St. Francis Xavier church in Petoskey was the scene at High Noon Saturday of the wedding of Deborah Anne Durr of Charlevoix and James Edwin Bilicki of Midland.

Parents of the couple are Lt. Col. and Mrs. William R. Durr, Jr., of Charlevoix and Mr. and Mrs. Chester Bilicki of Romeo.

The Rev. Fr. Remy Stiglitz, O.F.M., officiated at the double ring service during the Nuptial Mass celebrated before an altar graced with arrangements of garden flowers. Music for the service was from Bach, Handel, Purcell and Whener. Trisha Durr, sister of the bride, sang "Morning Has Broken", "We'll Walk with God" and "Glory to God on High".

Escorted to the altar by her father, the bride chose a gown of candlelight polyester crepe for her wedding. Antique lace, appliques and seedpearls accented the softly fitted bodice, Juliet sleeves and the bias cut skirt that terminated in a chapel train. A modified Juliet cap secured her veil of candlelight illusion. She carried white roses attached to an heirloom fan.

M. Gwyneth Durr was her sister's maid of honor, Mrs. William Huston of Romeo her matron of honor and Lori Ann Kaeslin and Janet Lee Dinwiddie her bridesmaids.

They wore identical princess style flowered chintz dresses with light blue sleeves and matching blue horsehair hats with white satin streamers.

They carried baskets of white petunias with blue garden flowers for accent. Shari Huston of Romeo, wearing a gown similar to the attendants, was flower girl.

Kevin Folland of Troy attended the bridegroom as best man. Duane Dawidowicz of Caro, William Huston of Romeo and James Przedwojewski of Armada were groomsmen.

Mrs. Durr selected a floral blouse and forest green full length skirt for her daughter's wedding. Mrs. Bilicki, mother of the bridegroom, wore a pink princess style gown. Corsages of white garden flowers complimented their gowns.

A reception, hosted by the bride's parents, followed at Stafford's Bay View Inn where Lisa Durr of Pittsburgh was in charge of the guest book. Mrs. Jack Rosendahl, Mrs. Ronald Kaeslin and Mrs. David A. Durr of Pittsburgh assisted.

After Aug. 17, the couple will be at home at 812 Eastman ave., Apt. 3-A in Midland where the bridegroom is associated with the Bechtel Corp. The bride will attend Delta College.

Wedding guests were present from Ohio, Illinois, Alabama, Pennsylvania, Kentucky and Michigan.

On Friday evening Mr. and Mrs. Bilicki hosted a rehearsal dinner at Juilleret's in Petoskey.

At St. Mary's Church

Rev. Magoon Becomes Pastor

The Rev. Fr. R. Dale Magoon, 39, arrived here last week from his pastorate at St. Mary of the Woods at Kalkaska and the Mission of St. Aloysuis at Fife Lake to become pastor at St. Mary's church here.

He succeeds the Rev. E. Francis Denay, who was pastor of the local church for 21 years before being transferred to St. Mary's of Mt. Carmel Shrine in Manistee as pastor.

The Rev. Fr. Magoon is a native of northern Michigan, having been born at Mackinaw City in November 1934. However, his family moved to the Detroit area in 1937.

Breakfast at 2:30 a.m.? The story is about Jim Timmer of Jenison. He drove a big truck loaded with steel up north and returning stops in by his mother Elsie Timmer for supper and some shut-eye. This happened again last week and in order to be back at work 7 a.m. Jim has to leave by 2:30 a.m. This morning he had a visitor, Earl Jones of Jackson, former Ellsworth school superintendent, who had learned his former pupil "Jimmy" was in town. Not being able to find him the evening before, he set his alarm clock to catch him in the morning. Mrs. Timmer invited him in for breakfast and they had a great time rehashing the days gone by.

Mrs. Vicki Rood Newhouse of Salana Beach, California called on her friends, Mrs. Bob Vollmer, Alice Ruis and Elsie Timmer one day last week.

Coming Friday to visit Mrs. Hattie Kuiper were her nephew Reynold Weidenaar and sisters-in-law Effie Weidenaar and Cora Van Andel all of Grand Rapids.

Maggie Wold of Zeeland, who visited her sister Hattie Kuiper last week, returned to her home Saturday with Mrs. Katherine Swanson, who had visited a week in Atwood.

Visiting Clara Rubingh over the weekend were her daughter Harriet and husband Burr Abrahamson of Mt. Pleasant.

Rev. J.T. Holwerda of Grandville was guest minister Sunday Aug. 11 at the Christian Reformed Church. Rev. Holwerda was pastor of the church from 1935-1941. He is now retired after serving 38 years in the ministry. On August 11, Rev. Van Drunen of South Grandville Church was guest minister. Had Only Six Cents

Farmer Ends Up Sheriff

CHARLEVOIX–When Philo Sumner left his parent's Horton Bay farm with six cents in his pocket in 1943, he had no idea he would end up in law enforcement.

During his early years, the 53-year-old Charlevoix County Sheriff worked at the old Boyne City Tannery and for the coal yard where the Landings is now located on Lake Charlevoix.

But for the tough-looking, husky county official, that wasn't enough so he took a job with Boyne City as a police officer and continued to work there for six years.

While sitting in his office filled with his antique rifles collection, Sumner said he's not sure what got him interested in law enforcement.

He knows he likes it and the people he works with – and that he says is more than enough reason to have stuck it out as long as he has.

Sumner said he moved up to county level enforcement back in 1956 under Charlevoix County Sheriff Glen Rose.

In fact, he was one of the county's first deputy sheriffs who had joined a staff of two – Rose and a night desk man.

"I wanted to better myself and wanted a bigger territory," he said about becoming a Charlevoix county sheriff's deputy.

If you ask Sumner what his job is about he'll throw two heavy thick books on your lap.

They're two huge law books outlining the sheriff's job and what his responsibilities are.

One of his major jobs is making sure that all the legal papers in the county are delivered, as last year he served more than 982 papers.

"An it's getting bigger every year," he said.

The sheriff is responsible for everything from serving warrants to handling mortgage foreclosures.

"The prisoners are the biggest job," he continued.

Not only does he have to maintain security, he has to make sure they are kept fed and change their clothes.

By law, the department also has to make a security check every hour.

We also have to have men available for emergency at all times whether it is an accident or a fire," he said.

Over the years, Sumner has seen a lot of changes.

When he was first appointed sheriff in June, 1966, he had only the undersheriff, nightman, dog warden and deputy. He made $4,100 a year and had to work six days a week.

Now he has 14 full-time personnel, two special deputies, four patrol cars, one snow machine and two outboard patrol boats. His salary is now $10,325.

"The board of commissioners has cooperated 100 percent," he said, while pointing with pride to his new jail facilities that were opened in 1971.

The county jail facility is his proudest possession and if you ask him about – he'll practically show every nut and bolt in the building.

"It's a privilege to live here and yet it isn't," he said.

"Your living on top of the situation all the time and there's no place to go.

"You're almost out of circulation."

But there's more to the job than handling papers and transporting prisoners.

Underneath what appears to be a tough, crusty looking county sheriff is a warm spot for people.

"I've always maintained that if you can help someone out you should," he said.

Sumner says he thinks his most important job is trying to help someone out or steering them on the right road.

"There's a satisfaction that maybe there's one in 100 you'll be able to help out," he said.

"I like to make a citizen out of that person who everyone will be proud of."

CHARLEVOIX COUNTY has one of the most modern jail buildings in the state. It serves both county and local municipal needs for the area.

How Will You Vote On Sept. 12?

By FRAN MARTIN

On Sept. 12, Charlevoix School District voters will go to the polls to vote on a $6.99 million bond issue to underwrite a new high school and the remodeling of the present high school as a middle school.

The Charlevoix Courier asked a number of people how they proposed to vote on the issue and why.

The people who gave an answer to the above question were among many picked at random. Many said they had not studied the proposal so could not give an answer at this time.

It is understood that there are many opposing the issue but few who were contacted voiced this opinion.

"I know we need the school. It will have to come eventually. I will probably end up voting for it."

--John Fratrick

Charlevoix has enough schools and the present Middle School could continue to be used.

..Peter Walker

"I think we need it. The extra-curricular things that could be offered are the things that round out an education..."

--James Williams

Charlevoix Has Enough

Peter Walker, a city employee, said that he thought Charlevoix had enough school...three public and one parochial school.

He also thought the present Middle School could continue to be used.

In answer to the question regarding remodeling to meet Fire Codes, he said that if that was necessary to meet state standards, he felt the state should pay for it.

James W. Gallagher, a former Beaver Island resident and long-time member of the Beaver Island Community School Board, said he had not reached a decision about voting.

However, he said that he had been listening in the coffee shops and hadn't heard many people say they would back the proposal.

Mrs. James Annis, a housewife whose older daughter is a high school graduate and who has a younger daughter, said: "I think we need it. In fact, I know we need a new school. With the population increase we are experiencing, I don't think we have a choice but to build now before prices go any higher. We don't have a lot but we will vote for it because we believe we need it."

School Outdated

Mrs. Neil Jones, a Marion township resident, said: "The Middle School is out-dated. The wiring in it is bad. It scares me. We all need the space because the school population growth is in the Middle School grades. You can put money in that building (the middle school) and you still can't bring it up to the proper standards."

Mrs. Arnold Loper, mother of three school age youngsters, said that this was the first time she and her husband were undecided about how they would vote.

In the past we have always supported the schools, she continued, but the economic situation we are in today...the unstable condition in the country...has me concerned. And I'm not alone. I don't think I've talked to two people who plan to vote for the bond issue.

John Fratrick, who is employed at the American Mold Engineering Corp., said "I know we need the school. It will have to come eventually. I will probably end up voting for it."

Extra Things Important

James Williams, Pharmacist and owner of Williams' Dockside Pharmacy, said: "I think we need it. The extra-curricular things that could be offered are the things that round out an education. Everything that you can give a child in the way of education as he is growing up makes him that much more capable of being successful as an adult. I like the idea that the cost is being spelled out on a day to day basis. I'd like to see the whole package go."

Dale Boss, local businessman and former school board member, said "I'm all for anything that will make Charlevoix a better place to live. However, right now I think that asking anyone to vote on this (the proposed bond issue) is like asking them to vote for a pig in a poke, as the saying goes. It can't pass if people aren't informed and right now they aren't informed. I know because I don't know all I want to know before I make a decision. Have an open meeting, let them ask questions. It's the only way to get a favorable vote. That's why I can't make a statement...I really don't know what I'm being asked to vote on."

Money Wasted

Mrs. Earl Kroll of Ironton, housewife and mother, said: "I know we need it (the new school) but so much money has been wasted. Take the Middle School. It was not good planning to pour money into that building and yet it was done. It's too bad a new school wasn't built then. The (school) district isn't shrinking...more and more people are moving in. As I said, I know we need it so I'll vote for it."

Council Rejects Variance

Steffes Promises Suit

'If the city has an ordinance should it be waived for anyone?'

Charlevoix Developer Ron Steffes said he will go to court over Charlevoix City Council's refusal to grant him a variance for a carport at the Dunes Condominiums.

The developer charged that the council did not act in the public's interest and claims two councilmen are in conflict of interest because they bid on the carport project.

"I don't think they (council) considered public opinion in the vote they gave," Steffes said following Monday night's special Board of Appeals meeting.

"I have received so much support."

Carport Variance

City Council denied Steffes' request for a variance to construct 20 carports, which had already been partially built without a building permit, at the Dunes property on Michigan Avenue. Councilman Bob Timms casted the only negative vote.

Council had called the special appeals meeting after Steffes learned that the carports he was constructing in front of his new condominiums did not have a building permit.

Earlier this month and again last night, neighboring property owners voiced objections to the carports primarily for an alleged safety hazard it would cause to pedestrians walking less than three feet away on the public sidewalk.

Thirty Appear

Some 30 residents appeared Monday night to reinforce earlier safety concerns.

In submitting application to allow the carports to remain at their present location instead of 25 feet, Steffes proposed to undertake several safety programs not presently done by the city.

Open Walks

Among his proposals were to maintain an open walk through the winter at his own expense, install and maintain low profile garden lighting for sidewalk illumination and to erect a guardrail between the walk and street.

In addition, the general contractor offered to lower the existing carport heighth.

"We do have a zoning code?" asked Mrs. John Ulrich following Steffes' presentation.

Mayor Ed Hansen replied that the city had a zoning ordinance, but not a building code.

She said the city should follow it and asked how the carports progressed as far as they did.

Should It Be Waived

"If the city has an ordinance, should it be waived for anyone?" asked Mrs. Gordon Mueller.

Mayor Hansen said council, was merely upholding the ordinance by holding a board of appeals.

"There's no point to have rules if they are going to be changed," Mrs. Mueller continued.

James Wineman then asked

School Sets Contracts

The Charlevoix Board of Education and the Charlevoix Education Association have reached a tentative agreement on a two-year contract it was announced early Saturday following an all-night negotiating session.

Thus, Charlevoix schools are expected to open without incident Wednesday, Sept. 4.

Both groups will meet at separate meetings Wednesday to ratify the contract.

The board will meet at the office of the Superintendent and the members of the Charlevoix Education Association will meet in the High School cafeteria at 7 p.m. Wednesday.

Teachers may pick up copies of the contract at the superintendent's office Tuesday for study prior to Wednesday's meeting.

Details of the contract will not be made known until it is ratified by the two parties concerned Supt. James A. McKimmy, speaking for the board of education, and Vincent Chew of the C.E.A. said. However, they did say that they felt both groups would find it "satisfactory."

It was mutually agreed when negotiations began in March that neither group would discuss the negotiations once they were underway. Both groups honored the agreement and even when negotiations went to mediation last week no announcement was made regarding it.

Friday's all-night meeting wrapped up the six-months negotiations which were interrupted in July when the board's attorney left on vacation.

Vincent Chew represented the C.E.A. at the final meeting when William Murray, who had headed the C.E.A. negotiation team, left town on vacation.

With the tentative agreement on the teachers' contract, the Charlevoix schools are among the few area schools to be ready for the current school year. Others are still negotiating.

DEVELOPER RON STEFFES (standing in background) heard Charlevoix residents question him about the carports partially constructed on the Dunes property near Michigan. After nearly an hours discussion, council rejected the contractor's request for a variance

Charlevoix School Board Approves Loan Against Anticipated Taxes

By FRAN MARTIN

The approval of a $356,000 tax anticipation loan and the hiring of three teachers to fill the remaining vacancies highlighted the action at the meeting of the Charlevoix board of education Monday night.

The board voted to accept bids for a loan against anticipated taxes on Oct. 1. The bonds will be payable June 30, 1975. Earlier the board had borrowed $325,000.

The three teachers who were offered probationary contracts include Miss JoAnn Kravutske who will teach English and Spanish in the high school; Plas A. Presnell, Learning Center teacher in the high school and Mrs. Frances May, who will teach kindergarten half-days in the Elementary school.

Miss Kravutske, a native of Detroit, is a 1974 graduate of Albion College. She served as a student assistant to the college's summer program in Mexico and, in 1973, spent the summer in Mexico studying the language and native crafts. She did her practice teaching in the Jackson school system. She will succeed Nancy Ryswick who left Charlevoix to be married.

Mr. Presnell will become Learning Center teacher in the high school replacing Janet Langeland who is returning to school. He is a graduate of the Allen Park high school in 1967 and Michigan State University in December 1973. He did his student teaching at Campbell School and LaFayette Clinic, both in Detroit.

Mrs. May, a Central Michigan University graduate, with a social Science major, will teach the half-day kindergarten. She is a resident of Charlevoix. Her husband is employed at Consumers Power Co. She returned to school and graduated in 1972.

In other action, the board adopted tuition rates for the coming year. The highest in the school's history, the rates are $919.90 for the elementary student and, $1,057.89 for the secondary of upper grade students. The high rates, which are the minimum possible, are necessary because the school district will receive no State Aid.

The board voted to table all policies presented for approval until a later meeting. However, after a letter inviting the Charlevoix high school marching band to participate in the Northern Michigan University band day Sept. 28, the policy relating to the music department was

Red Cross Prepares For Drive

The Red Cross Bloodmobile is coming to town Wednesday, Sept. 18. It will be stationed at the Lutheran Bethany Church on Bridge Street from 2:00 until 8:00 p.m.

Over 100 pints of blood will be needed to meet area needs, and Red Cross volunteers are busy lining up former and new donors. Now, for the first time, 17-year-olds will be permitted to donate blood with permission from their parents.

Blood donated to the Red Cross is made available to all hospitals within the boundaries of the Flint Regional Blood Center. Charlevoix County is part of this Region.

Blood is also made available to hospitals located outside the Region to replace any amount used there by a Charlevoix County resident.

When requested by the Department of Defense or other governmental agency, blood will be collected and shipped in accordance with existing conditions and the emergency.

Everyone in good health between the ages of 17 and 65 is invited to participate in the blood donor program. It takes about 45 minutes, less than seven minutes of which is for the actual donation.

Red Cross officials say the need for blood is great at this time of year because of the difficulty in scheduling bloodmobile visits during the summer months. Blood can be kept for only 21 days, but all out-dated blood is sent to the Michigan Department of Health for fracturing into medical by-products.

Red Cross blood is supplied free of charge to hospitals. However, hospitals charge the patient a small fee for processing and technical services involved in giving the transfusion.

Statistics show that every 17 seconds someone in the United States needs blood. Sometimes there may be as many as four persons at once – victims of an automobile accident or a fire, people in shock, infants or mothers, sufferers from leukemia or hemophilia, or patients undergoing surgery. Heart surgery operations require eight to ten units of blood.

There are always nurses, and usually a doctor, on hand at a Red Cross Bloodmobile. The nurses draw blood and help donors through a short recovery period afterward.

Those who cannot donate blood, and even those who do donate, can help in operation of the Bloodmobile. People are needed to help make telephone calls to sign up donors, to work as aides in the blood units, to register donors, to pre-level blood bags, to escort donors, and especially to drive donors from their homes to the Bloodmobile.

Mrs. Vernon Mathews, Jr., phone 547-9896, is chairman in the blood drive. Anyone who can help on the day the Bloodmobile is here, or before, is asked to call her.

Mrs. Mathews met last week with members of her group. They included Fran Tollas and Nancy Fowler, Charlevoix County Red Cross Board members; and Fran Works, Carol Roznoski, and Patricia Drost, committee members.

Jason H. Snyder of East Jordan, County Blood chairman, and Ray Mettva of the Flint Regional Blood Center also attended.

Plans are being made for a recognition dessert luncheon some time in October to honor all persons who have worked on the Bloodmobile since it started coming to Charlevoix some time ago.

The request of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Robinson to split Lots 70 & 71 of Upright and Hurlbut's Addition and the recommendation of Charlevoix Planning Commission was discussed. It was learned that Lot 70 had been already split. Mr. Robinson advised he was requesting the split of his Lot 71 only; that William Haggard already owns the back half of Lot 70. The request was held over to the next regular meeting for more information. Mr. Haggard should be contacted to see if he will agree to combining the lots. Attorney Berlage advised it could be handled by drafting Quit Claim Deeds.

Discussion followed regarding the carport at The Dunes. The Committee as a whole reported meeting at The Dunes to review the situation and were concerned that it is too close to the sidewalk; their concern about children who use the sidewalk; that The Dunes is definitely in violation in building the carport without a building permit and have not considered a 25 ft. set-back from the property line; and that it is a case of over-building on too small a plot of land. Concerned citizens were present and many had called Council members to voice their complaints. Mr. Ron Steffes, the owner, admitted his mistake and asked permission to apply for a variance, so he could present his problems to the Board of Appeals.

Board of Appeals meeting is not due to meet again until October 7, 1974.

A motion was made by Alderman Wood and supported by Alderwoman Wallace that Council grant Mr. Steffes the privilege of meeting with the Board of Appeals at a Special Meeting to be held August 26, 1974. The motion was adopted by the following yea and nay vote. Yeas: Aldermen Timms, Wallace, Wood, Plumm and Selph. Nays: None. Absent: Alderman McRae.

The Acting Administrator was reminded to give written notice of the Public Hearing to all property owners and tenants within 300 ft. of The Dunes. If names of tenants are unknown, mail to Occupancy, giving Apt. number.

It was suggested by a visitor that the Board of Appeals meeting be advertised through the News Media and that someone from the State Highway Department be asked to attend the meeting as well as someone from the Street Department.

Alderwoman Wallace asked that a site be chosen this fall for baseball, so that the people in Westport Subdivision could be assured the diamond would be moved from their area. Curt Kipke, Recreation Director, presented a drawing and plans to utilize the City property, in the Mt. McSauba area, for two diamonds. Acting City Administrator Wexstaff suggested the area on the East side of Mt. McSauba, where both summer and winter sports could be co-ordinated in one area. Attorney Berlage suggested the City might wish to get a topographical survey of the area. The matter was put into Committee for further study.

National Flood Insurance was discussed briefly. It was assigned to the Finance Committee for study and research.

The building permit regulations as proposed and submitted by the Ordinance Committee were reviewed.

Alderwoman Wallace offered a Resolution and moved its adoption, supported by Alderman Wood regarding the Rules and Regulations of Building Permits. The Resolution was adopted by the following yea and nay vote. Yeas: Aldermen Timms, Wallace, Wood, Plumm, and Selph. Nays: None. Absent: Alderman McRae.

Correspondence was reviewed from the Parks and Recreation Committee, stating that Curt Kipke was the only City employee who didn't receive a cost of living raise this year. The matter was referred to the Committee for recommendation.

A signed petition dated August 5, 1974 was presented to Council protesting the 8:00 a.m. opening of the municipal tennis courts. It was Council's recommendation that the hour to start playing tennis be left at 8:00 a.m. The Acting Administrator was asked to notify them.

Alderwoman Wallace announced she had several calls about repairs that should be made on the sidewalk in front of the Sand Castle on Park Ave.; and asked if any other repairs will be made this year on sidewalks in which property owners can share in the expense of having their sidewalks repaired.

Ray Wood reported of calls about the condition of access to Michigan Beach on Pine River Lane and also the Public access North of the intersection of Michigan Avenue and Petoskey - stating the sign had been torn down.

Alderman Plumm asked what disposition was to be made of the suggestion made in the auditor's letter dated May 22, 1974. It was referred to Committee as a Whole to be held Monday, August 19, 1974.

The invoice of G & T Construction was discussed, and the Clerk was instructed to pay them, but to withhold $8868.47 at this time.

The Finance Committee having examined bills totaling $141,446.07 find them correct and recommend that the bills be allowed. Moved by Alderman Plumm and supported by Alderman Timms that the bills be allowed and orders drawn for their amounts. The motion was adopted by the following yea and nay vote. Yeas: Aldermen Timms, Wallace, Wood, Plumm, and Selph. Nays: None. Absent: Alderman McRae.

Moved by Alderwoman Wallace that Council adjourn.

Building Proposal Only Weeks Away

Here's More About Schools

By FRAN MARTIN

EDITOR'S NOTE: Charlevoix School District voters will go the polls Thursday, Sept. 12, to vote on a $6.99 million bond issue for construction of a new high school and the remodeling of the present high school as a Middle School.

The Charlevoix board of education has made available to the Charlevoix Courier information regarding the proposed construction project. The first information appeared in the Aug. 20 issue of the newspaper. The following is a continuation of that.

The proposed site for the new facility is across from the Kit Carson Lumber Co. of M-66 south of Charlevoix.

Why was this site chosen?

1. The utility services, electrical, gas and water utilities are available at the present site without additional construction costs. Sewer currently exists within 1,000 feet of the site and would require very minimal construction to meet this need. A site could have been selected at a more remote distance but would have required large expenditures for the construction of a lagoon sewage treatment or sewer construction.

2. Access by highway is already available at this site which is currently served by M-66 and a county road from Marion Center road. It is very accessible from these two roads which provide adequate ingress and egress to avoid congestion at any one point in the local traffic corridors.

3. The site is within easy walking or bicycle distance of many families in the community and is in the area of anticipated future growth for residential construction in the Charlevoix area.

Will the Site be large enough for Future Expansion?

The answer to this is a definite "Yes". The board of education has selected a site of 66 acres. The recommended minimum size for a high school facility is 35 acres plus one acre per 100 students to be enrolled. This means that the recommended minimum for the proposed facility would be 43½ acres. This would provide additional space for other facilities which the board may choose to locate in this area or it may be resold for other purposes if it should be determined at a future date that it is no longer necessary to reatin this property for school use.

How Many Students Will the High School Accommodate?

The building is being constructed to accommodate 850 students upon completion. With the addition of general classrooms, the building could be expanded to accommodate an enrollment of 1200 students. The rennovation of the existing high school for use as a middle school will increase the enrollment from 427 students to 602 students.

Will the Building Be Designed to Accommodate Adult Education and Other Community Activities?

The answer is "Yes." The board of education is committed to making this facility available to members of the community. The auditorium would be available for large group activities and programs requiring stage facilities. Adult education programs are expected to continue in the school district. Adult recreation, banquets and other activities can be accommodated in this facility.

Will the proposed new facility allow for expansion of Vocational Education?

Present facilities are very limited for the instruction of vocational education programs. The auto shop, business education courses and the food service program are severely restricted due to the condition of the facilities now being used. Construction at this time would provide the vocational education student a much better opportunity to gain a saleable skill to use when he enters this world of work following graduation.

When would the new facility be ready for occupancy?

If the bond issue is approved in the Sept. 12 election, it is anticipated that classrooms that would be added to the existing high school would be available for use to start the second semester of 1975-76 school year. This would make it possible to more easily accommodate the current overcrowded enrollment in the high school. The new high school should be ready for used by the start of the second semester of the 1976-77 school year.

Are there Costs of Inflation?

Inflation has hit construction costs as it has everything else. The projected cost of constructing buildings has risen from $26 per square foot in 1973 to an estimated cost of $35 per square foot in 1975. A delay in plans to construct facilities will cost additional dollars to meet the facility requirements at approximately 20 per cent annual increase. To wait as much as one year would cost the residents of the Charlevoix district an additional $1.4 million to realize the same benefits that could be gained by approving the bond issue at this time.

Capitalized Interest?

The Citizens Study Committee recommended voting at such time that the taxes could be collected prior to the sale of bonds. In this manner approximately 200,000 interest savings would be realized on the total project. To wait until a date after Sept. 12 would require the additional expense of the interest cost on bonds from the sale date to the collection of taxes in December of 1975.

Opens September 4

Charlevoix Road Commission Gets New Head Supervisor

A man who likes the outdoors in both summer and winter has come to work as Superintendent for the Charlevoix County Road Commission.

Delmar G. "Del" Stanley started on his job last week. He is an avid golfer, fisherman, skier, snowmobiler and horseman. In fact, he had to go back to his home town of Houghton Lake one evening last week to compete in a golf tournament.

A native of Houghton Lake, Stanley had lived there all his life before moving to Charlevoix County. For 20 years he owned and operated a gravel and road building company in Houghton Lake, and before that worked with his father in the same company. The company contracted jobs for 36 counties as well as for the State of Michigan.

Stanley reports directly to Irvin H. Sturm, engineer-director of the Road Commission, and has three foremen and 37 maintenance men working under him.

As yet, Stanley does not have a permanent residence in the county. He is looking for a two or three bedroom house with some acreage for his saddle horses.

County Plat Coordinating Committee Offers Review Services For Builders

When a landowner in Charlevoix County wants to subdivide his property he must submit plans for the proposed subdivision to his Township Board, the Road Commission, Drain Commission, District Health Department, and the Plat Board.

This is required under the state Subdivision Control Act of 1967.

To facilitate the submission of such plans, the Plat Coordinating Committee has been This committee receives and reviews preliminary plats, provides the landowner with a basic understanding of his responsibilities regarding specific regulations, and sets up meetings, conferences and field surveys to help the landowner gain approval of a preliminary plat.

Information required by the Plat Coordinating Committee is extensive. The subdivider is asked to present 15 copies of a report including such data as number of acres involved in project, proposed lot sizes, adjacent land uses, type of use proposed, waterwell location, soil system description, proposed cut and fill, proposed setbacks from water courses or lake, current and proposed zoning of property, and easements and permits needed.

The subdivider is also asked to present 15 copies of a preliminary plat map showing boundary survey, lot arrangement and dimensions, road arrangement and dimensions, curve radii, relation to private or public roadways, and any other requested information.

A topographic map of the preliminary plat is also required.

The Plat Coordinating Committee is made up of representatives from the Road Commission, Drain Commission, District Health Department, Planning Commission, Soil Conservation District, and Plat Board.

There may also be Supplemental Committee members from departments, agencies, or municipalities who are invited to attend meetings if the proposed plat involves their particular jurisdiction.

Such Supplemental Committee Members may represent the township in which the proposed plat is located, the Department of Natural Resources, Water Resources Commission, State Highway Department, public utility companies, and Cooperative Extension Service.

The Plat coordinating Committee meets once a month if there is a proposed plat to be considered. Prior to the meeting, all interested departments will have had an opportunity to study the proposed plat.

The landowner may appear in person before the Plat Coordinating Committee or be represented by an agent or an attorney. The landowner or his agent is asked to describe the preliminary plat, then each member of the committee is asked to present his analysis of the plat.

Members of the Plat Coordinating Committee, or the landowner, may request that a preliminary plat be placed on the table for discussion at a subsequent meeting for reasons of the need for more information, a pending zoning question, results of on-site evaluations, or other related questions.

Present members of the county Plat Coordinating Committee are Irvin H. Sturm, Road Commission; Ronald Geer, Drain Commission; Dean Mikulski, District Health Department; Bill Mercer, Planning Commission; William Grimm, Soil Conservation District; and Grover C. Geneit, Register of Deeds.

The County Plat Board is made up of Geneit; Mrs. Anah Potter, County Treasurer; and Clarence F. Rabach, County Clerk.

MORE THAN 200 Roman Catholics from throughout Northern Michigan gathered at St. Mary's Church Sunday afternoon for the enshrinement of the International Virgin Fatima. Many children (pictured) for among those who visited the statue its stay in Charlevoix.

Our Railroads Could Be Partially Saved Locally

Governor William Milliken's announcement that Michigan will definitely retain some of the 2,200 miles of railroad track proposed for abandonment is good news

The Michigan governor's announcement followed a promise made Tuesday from Arthur D. Lewis, chairman of the United States Railway Association, that Michigan will not lose 37 percent of its rail mileage as proposed last Feb. 1, in a U.S. Department of Transportation (DOT) study.

Neither Milliken or Lewis will estimate how much track will eventually be abandoned, but Milliken expressed hope it would be "only a fraction" of the 2,200 miles identified by DOT as too uneconomical to operate.

The railway association that Lewis heads is a non-profit government cooperation set up by Congress last year to reorganize bankrupt railroads into an "economically viable system" of passenger and freight service eligible for federal subsidies.

The 2,200 miles of "potentially excess track" identified by DOT is all in the Lower Peninsula and belongs to five railroad companies.

Only two of the rail companies involved in the DOT proposal are bankrupt and within the scope of the pending railway association plan. They are the Ann Arbor and Penn Central Railroads.

The railway association is scheduled to produce a preliminary plan for restructuring the bankrupt lines in November and is supposed to present a final plan for congressional approval next March.

The DOT proposals dealing with lines belonging to three non-bankrupt lines in Michigan are to be reviewed by the Federal Interstate Commerce Commission for a separate recommendation to Congress.

Michigan's Department Highway and Urban Transportation is developing its own rail plan, for submission to federal officials in mid-September.

Until last week's announcement, it appeared that Michigan would lose its rails.

No one seemed to be taking an organized approach to prevent the abandonment.

Milliken's announcement comes late, but it is certainly better late than not at all.

Last May in Traverse City, well over 150 persons voiced opposition to the proposed abandonment of track in Northern Michigan.

Track abandonment would eliminate the only mode of transportation that will allow several Northern businesses to survive.

Utility companies, for example, can only transport large poles by rail and with the growth of Northern Michigan, more and more poles are needed.

Track abandonment would also lead to the demise of the Ann Arbor Car Ferry, which might also lead to some economic problems for several Western Michigan communities.

Much of Michigan's position with the railroads will depend on whether or not the state can provide funds to help subsidize them.

Milliken said the state has pledged $362 million of the proposed $1.1 billion bond issue for improved inter-city rail and bus lines.

The bond issue will provide money for the state to buy and upgrade much of the track that will be left to abadonment by federal authorities.

The bond program which will be on the Nov. 5 general election ballot, is designed to be combined with federal subsidies to produce a $6.25-billion statewide system of land, air and water transportation.

We support the move.

Greensky Hill Has Tasteless Experience

We deplore the recent vadalism in the Greensky Hill cemetery and hope that the ghouls involved are apprehended and given punishment commensurate with their crime.

Only sick minds could conceive the idea of disturbing, for no reason at all, bones that have been resting in their quiet grave for over a hundred years.

Greensky Hill is a proud monument to the Indians who once made their homes in the area and were laid to rest in the land they loved.

The government thought enough of Greensky Hill to make it a Registered National Monument. We in Charlevoix County should think enough of it to protect it from the ravages of present-day ghouls.

Every summer thousands of local residents and visitors enjoy attending services in the beautifully simple Greensky Hill church and walking around the peaceful grounds. If continuing vandalism forces closing of the church and grounds, we all will lose a link with the past.

It is up to everyone, not only law enforcement officials, to see that this does not happen.

Debaters Appreciate Help

August 22, 1974

Editor, Charlevoix Courier
S. Bridge St.
Charlevoix, Michigan 49720

Dear Editor:

We would like to take this opportunity to publically thank those organizations, businesses, and individuals that gave their generous support to the C.H.S. debate team in sending us to debate Institute at Northern Michigan University in Marquette.

As always, we found the workshop to be extremely beneficial and only hope we can put into practice those things learned during our stay at Northern.

So thank you once again for the bounteous contributions and support. It's gratifying to know that although we aren't large enough or well enough known to have our own boosters a fund raising organization, we still have a community proud to back us. Now our only wish is to live up to that high standard before us – to enrich the community and ourselves, to well represent the community and ourselves and to make everyone more proud of the community and ourselves-- through debate.

Sincerely,

Charlevoix Band Says Thanks

Letter to the Editor

I would like to use this means of thanking all the people who helped make the week's band camp a smashing success.

The Peshtigo. (Wis.) band students were well received by the families they lived with and by the end of the week they even shed a few tears at the thought of leaving.

Many parents worked at the school during the camp assisting the lunch program and the other activities that were carried out during the week.

It was most gratifying to see the large turn-out for the demonstration Friday evening. I am very proud and pleased to work in a community where the band activities receive such active support.

ST. JAMES – Federal and state government officials led by President David Eisenhower and Michigan Gov. Zolton Ferency congregated on Beaver Island today for ceremonies marking completion of a 100-mile long system of bridges and causeways linking the scattered Islands of northern Lake Michigan with the mainland.

The ribbon-cutting took place at the southern end of Beaver Island where a 10-mile span linking Beaver with North Fox Island was formally opened to resort traffic.

Completion of the final link means that tourists may now zoom from the tip of Waugoshance Point to the tip of the Leelanau Peninsula without leaving their automobiles.

The eight-lane highway, 95 percent of which crosses the often turbulent waters of northern Lake Michigan, was built at a cost of $100 billion, most of it derived from federal Revenue Sharing funds allocated to St. James and Peaine Townships.

The gigantic project was started in 1979 when work began on the first span linking Waugoshance Point and the eastern shore of Hog Island. That section included construction of the White Shoal Suspension Bridge which sways almost a half mile above the shipping lanes.

Later bridges were built connecting Hog Island with Garden Island to the east and Beaver Island to the south.

Fifteen years ago, construction started on the Leelanau-Manitou Island bridge system, with links to North and South Fox Islands. Opening of the North Fox-Beaver Island bridge today completes the circuit and puts once isolated island residents of Lake Michigan in highway communication with their neighbors on the mainlands.

Needless to say, the new bridge system has meant a radical change of pace for island residents who formally could reach their Island retreats only after long and arduous journeys by boat or short and arduous journeys by plane.

The Beaver Island Boat Co. announced shortly after the ribbon-cutting ceremony today that it will make its last run next weekend. The company's two vessels – The Beaver Islander and the South Shore – will be tied up at the Beaver Island dock and converted into planters, a company spokesman said.

The bridge system also has brought a taste of urban living to the islands, many of which were uninhabitated until recently.

Hog Island, for example, now boasts no fewer than 12 franchise restaurants, a score of motels and a half-dozen taverns.

Garden Island, which was once visited only by a handful of rugged bass fishermen every summer, now has a thriving business community of 10,000 population and an additional 15,000 summer resorters. Every square inch of the island has been platted and sold and seven condominiums presently are under construction.

Unfortunately the bass have left because of rampant water pollution, according to the Department of Natural Resources. Botanists also claim that many varieties of wild orchid once found in abundance on the island have disappeared, along with several species of wildlife.

Beaver Island itself has changed radically since the bridges opened. Vast tracts of hardwoods and pine had to be leveled to make room for the bridge approaches and connecting roadways. In fact, one abutment alone virtually wiped out the old fishing village of St. James on the north end of the island.

Today the Beaver Island business community has moved to the banks of Miller's Marsh on the south end. One of the largest buildings in the new metropolis is the 30-story Beaver-Hilton which will have 500 rooms, five bars, two plush dining rooms and a golf course on the roof.

Beaver Island also has become a target for franchise holders who have erected literally dozens of glittering neon restaurants the length of the Kings Highway. Most of them are open 24 hours a day and all of them report they are operating at or near capacity.

At an emergency meeting of the Beaver Island Historical Society last night, members voted to move the former log home of Dr. Feodor Protar and the old Mormom Print Shop to the mainland to preserve them for future generations. Dr. Protar's tomb, unfortunately, had to be razed to make way for a clover-leaf.

Yearbooks Not Ready Now

Charlevoix High School yearbook staff would like to announce that the annuals will not be in until the middle of Oct. due to difficulties beyond the control of either the staff or the publishing co.

Those '74' seniors leaving for college within the next few weeks are asked to leave their receipts with the parents so the staff can get the books to them when they arrive.

Also, we were able to obtain an extra number of books.

Any graduate who wishes one of those books please contact Gayle Boss and pay full payment and we'll see that you receive a book.

Those students returning to school this fall will be given the opportunity to buy any books still remaining after seniors have first chance.

Stumping the Woods

...With Ollie O. Stump jr.

Uncle Charlie originated equipment rental service by hiring out his mule 'Jenny during slack seasons, a practice which aroused righteous indignation on her part. In the winter of '26 for instance, without a by your leave, he sold her services to Charcoal Pete who was skidding cordwood for Moonlight Smith in the Whiskey Creek area.

Arriving at dusk she was led to a dilapidated rundown barn, ushered like a derelict bum to a flophouse on Skid Row. She appraised the proffered accommodations at the far end of the dank hostelry with obvious distaste. Rays of twilight breathed frostily through the gaping cracks in the walls and from between the roofboards. The bed had not even been made up!

Rudely brushing aside the corporate owners, Jenny retraced her steps, critically inspecting each stall before choosing one which she would not have to share with the elements. Charcoal freshened the bed with straw while Uncle Charlie filled the manger and poured a heaping bucket of oats into the feed box. He was always generous with property other than his own she observed while taking stock of her situation.

She was forced to concede that things could be worse. The eight horses sharing the lodgings would contribute sufficient heat to ward off the chills to which she was allergic. In exchange she would have to accept fitful slumber interrupted by their nocturnal stamping and unintelligible mutterings.

It seemed that she had just reposed herself when Charcoal materialized out of the night, lantern in hand. She was pleased that he was checking on her comforts for that must be the reason for his visit since she had left no early morning call. Surely this could not be reveille!

Mustered outside in the snapping frost, her thoughts were darker than the faint shadows she could make out in the gloom. She was hitched to a silly looking sled resembling two oversize boomerangs joined together with massive cross members.

To restore circulation, she hauled it two miles down the tote road at such a brisk pace that Charcoal was forced to jog along, beaming happily over his stroke of fortune.

Arriving at the site, Charcoal made two mistakes. He overloaded the sled and underestimated Jenny's Intelligence.

She knew that a cord was four feet high and eight feet long, the exact dimensions between the stakes and level with their tops. After crowning the load to his satisfaction, Charcoal suggested with a flick of the reins,

"Let's go Jenny."

The unwarranted first name familiarity irked her considerably but what could one expect of a clod who spoke with forked tongue. Since "lets' is a contraction of 'let us' why wasn't he in harness beside her?

She glared at the heaping arch until Charcoal got the message and unloaded it to the level of the stakes. Only then would she set out; her mind occupied with possible methods of terminating such humiliating servitude.

Noting a hemlock stump capped with a huge chef's hat of snow, Jenny veered off the roadway. The sled, unable to negotiate the obstacle, became a mass of twisted wreckage and the cordwood was jumbled like an early Spring log jam.

Since Charcoal's comments regarding this unfortunate mishap were unfit for the ears of a lady Jenny ambled out of earshot. The following day she disassociated herself from the enterprise, returning to her own more private quarters to await Uncle Charlie's next profit seeking venture.

If it Fitz

By JIM FITZGERALD

What really bugged me was when she said, "It needs more grout."

Grout?

That's when I decided to tell you about the mushrooms, even if she does kill me and she will.

I mean, my wife said grout the same way I'd say potato. Everyone knows what a potato is. But what the devil is a grout?

She was trying to put me down. I knew that. Grout had something to do with the $400 tiling job a workman was currently doing in our shower. She was cutely painting out that we had to pay him $400 because I was too dumb to do the job myself. I was so dumb, in fact, I didn't even know what grout was. She was remembering the time she sent me to the neighbor's garage to swipe a pair of pliers and I came back with a monkey wrench.

I wouldn't give her the satisfaction I simply nodded my head wisely and said, "Right, more grout is needed. Now more than ever."

Then I ran out of the house, jumped in the car, sped to work and grabbed the dictionary. Grout is "a thin mortar used to fill cracks and crevices between masonry."

Now how in the hell did she know that? What did I marry, a bricklayer?

That night, at dinner, I casually remarked, "Remind me to check the grout in the shower. For $400 I want to make sure he didn't miss any crevices."

"You looked it up in the dictionary," she said.

So if she's going to treat me that way, I'm going to tell you about the mushrooms. That's how we discovered the shower walls were leaking and water was seeping everywhere. One morning I leaned over to wash between my toes and I saw a cute little mushroom growing between the tile crevices (that's where the grout goes, you know).

So help me, I am telling you true. It looked just like the the ones that grow on the golf course. Naturally, I was excited. After all, how many people do you know growing mushrooms in their shower?

"People are not going to believe this," I said. "I will have to take a picture of that mushroom and put it in the newspaper. Our bathroom will become a tourist attraction. The kids can sell tickets and cotton candy."

"You write anything about that awful thing and I will kill you," my wife said. And she heartlessly ripped the mushroom out of the wall and flushed it nearby.

"It is not a mushroom," she added. "it is a fungus; a dirty toadstool. People would think I am the world's worst housekeeper. It grew because the mortar behind the shower is always soaking wet. This shower will have to be torn out and a new one installed."

Mortar? I think she is still paying union dues.

A few dinners later we had cauliflower, which I hate. "If you grew this in the washing machine the Maytag people might put you in a TV commercial," I said.

And she said a few more of those words you might expect to hear from a construction worker, pounding the table with her hardhat.

After my wife reads this column I shall restore peace to the family by taking her out to dinner. And I will tell the waitress to put a little grout on the toadstools.

Onward and Upward.

Meet Charlevoix

Meet The Charlevoix's

Ever wonder what it would be like to have the last name of Charlevoix? The Harold Charlevoix's did and decided to come down and find out what "their town" was like. There first stop was the Charlevoix Courier, where we decided to ask them what they thought of Charlevoix. The Hardwood, Michigan couple thought Charlevoix would be a good place to spend their 25th wedding anniversary.

COURIER: What made you come and visit Charlevoix?

CHARLEVOIX: We wanted to see what our town looked like.

COURIER: What do you mean by that?

CHARLEVOIX: We have the same name as the town. We have had hunters who come up to our area from here.

COURIER: Where do you live?

CHARLEVOIX: Hardwood, Michigan. It's about 40 miles west of Escanaba and about 35 miles east of Iron Mountain.

COURIER: Have you ever been here before?

CHARLEVOIX: No. This is the first time.

COURIER: What do you think of your countername?

CHARLEVOIX: So far it looks pretty good. We just got in here a few minutes ago.

COURIER: What have you heard about the area?

CHARLEVOIX: We just heard it was close to the lake. Other than that we hadn't heard too much about it. It was Charlevoix in Charlevoix county.

COURIER: Has anyone ever teased you about it?

CHARLEVOIX: There are a lot of Charlevoix's where we live. My Dad, my uncles. It's a pretty common name there. They've asked if we've had relations here.

COURIER: What is your occupation?

CHARLEVOIX: I-am a foreman for Dickinson County Road Commission. I supervise road construction and snow plowing.

COURIER: Do you know if there is any connection between your last name and Charlevoix County?

CHARLEVOIX: No. I couldn't tell you that. I don't even know where the name started or how long ago the name started. My grandfather had come from Canada. My Dad is 70-years-old and he was born there.

COURIER: What do you hope to do here?

CHARLEVOIX: We are just looking around. We don't know anybody here, we just wanted to see Charlevoix. One reason we are here is because we have been married 25 years and are on a little trip to celebrate it.

COURIER: Do you have any particular interests?

CHARLEVOIX: We mostly monkey around–that's about all. There isn't too much to do up there. We do a little cutting in the woods. We visit camps. We work all week and monkey-around on the weekend. When we want a good time we go to the town of Ralph and dance. There's a bar and music on Saturday night. They jam people into the place like sardines. At one time, Ralph use to be a good place to hunt deer. There are miles of just woods there.

COURIER: What's your hometown of Hardwood like?

CHARLEVOIX: It's got a couple stores, a tavern and a post office. We don't even know what the population is– maybe a 100. Most of the people either go the Iron Mountain to work or work there. There's a Goveland Iron Mine. We have potato farmers. There's big potato farms there. They're building a couple of dams there for a water shed. The churches aren't in town, they are in the town two miles away. They tore the school down and built a new one 10 miles away. They consolidated four townships and put the school right in the middle.

COURIER: Would you like to move to Charlevoix?

CHARLEVOIX: No, we think we like it where we are. We like the Upper Peninsula. It's nice to come here, but its nice to come back.

COURIER: Where are you going to be staying?

CHARLEVOIX: We are just passing through. We're not sure. If we lived in this town, we would probably get all your courthouse bills since we have the same last name.

COURIER: Do you have any wise words to pass on to Charlevoix residents?

CHARLEVOIX: I don't have any wise words. I can't think of anything wise. All we can say is that it is so nice to come here. We might steal your city limits sign to take home.

Charlevoix County Rebated $247,842 From State Taxes

The nine cents a gallon tax on gasoline you paid every time you "filled her up" during April, May and June of this year, and the cost of license plates you bought during that time, will mean a return of $247,842 to Charlevoix County for road building and maintenance.

This is slightly over $9,000 or 3.7 percent, more than was allotted to the county for the same period last year.

Of trhe total amount, the Charlevoix County Road Commission will receive $199,522; the city of Charlevoix $18,276; Boyne City $19,216; and East Jordan $10,282.

Revenue from motor fuel taxes collected throughout Michigan in the second quarter of this year declined 6.5 perect from the same period in 1973. However, an increase in number of license plates issued and interest earned on revenues accounted for an over-all increase of 2.2 percent in gross receipts in the state's Motor Vehicle Highway Fund.

This slight rise in gross receipts is of little comfort to county road engineers. Irvin H. Sturm, engineer-director of the Charlevoix County Road Commission cites the percentage increases in prices of materials used in his department.

Cost of gasoline is up 100 per ent over June of 1973; diesel oil is up 86.5 percent; asphalt pavement is up 53.8 percent; asphalt emulsion is up 80.95 percent; process gravel is up 18.6 percent; corrugated pipe is up 80.3 percent, guard posts are up 25 percent; stop signs are up 32.58 percent; and paint striping is up 32.6 percent.

It is no longer possible to get firm bids on any material, so it must be paid for at the market price when ordered.

A statewide survey of 57 reporting counties indicated that cost of road building and maintenance materials is up nine to 106 percent.

Statewide, fuel tax receipts during the last quarter total $95,484,614, compared with $102,113,332 in the same quarter last year.

Officials have speculated that the decline in gas tax revenues could be the result of reduced driving speeds, stemming both from the nationwide 55-mile-an-hour speed limit and the increase in the cost of gasoline.

The increase in license plate fees partially offset the drop in fuel tax revenues. They amounted to $30,049,429 an increase of 17.5 over the same period last year.

The general upward trend in interest rates is producing more income for the Motor Vehicle Highway Fund. Interest earned in the April-June quarter totaled $9,199,857; an increase of nearly 136 percent over the same period in 1973.

Proceeds in the Motor Vehicle Highway Fund are distributed at three levels of government. The Waterways Commission receives 1.25 percent of gas taxes and the General Transportation Fund receives one-eighteenth share of the gas tax for public transportation. This year, $1 million was allocated for the state's "critical bridge" replacement program.

Makes Sure Children Get Money

Friend of Court Has Tough Image

"When I came into office there was nothing. I brought a table from home..."

"I probably have a tough reputation in the county." So speaks Howard Otis, who operates the Friend of the Court office in Charlevoix County.

And he probably does have a tough reputation with divorced fathers whom he has ordered to keep up their child support payments.

It is Otis' job to set the amount of money each father pays for the support of his children, to see that he does it, and to recommend custody rules.

Otis first comes into contact with the father, and the mother, when he receives notice that a divorce suit has been filed.

"When I get notice of a divorce case, I send a question and answer sheet to both husband and wife and ask for a meeting, and try to effect a reconciliation. It is my duty to try," Otis says.

"After each party and the children, are interviewed, and no reconciliation is made, I set up temporary support figures on the basis of income and send the recommendation to the attorneys and the judge. I try to do this as fast as possible to keep them off Aid to Dependent Children," he adds.

Persons must wait six months before a divorce decree is granted. Just before the divorce is final, Otis sets permanent support figure and makes final custody arrangements.

The Friend of the Court collects about $21,000 a month, according to Otis. This money is then sent by county checks to the mothers who are not on A.D.C. If they are on A.D.C. their checks are sent to the State Treasurer.

"I don't have any time for people who want to saddle their children on taxpayers," Otis states emphatically.

"I have no use for persons who try to take money, food stamps, or other state help when they are able-bodied. There is no excuse for not working. Society today has become one of fakers, taking the path of least resistance," he adds.

Twenty-five percent of the child support money sent to Lansing is returned to the county. Otis points out that as the figure reaches $100,000 a year, this could mean a sizeable return.

The amount of child support money collected by the Friend of the Court is increasing constantly because of the increasing number of divorces and the "locating" facilities they have for apprehending delinquent fathers.

At present, there are about 250 active cases, up almost fifty percent in the past year.

Many fathers try to "hide", Otis says, but through their office in Lansing they can find them within three weeks. All that is needed is name and social security number.

"Some of these fellows who don't show up and bring their accounts up to date, or don't make necessary arrangements, end up spending 30 or 60 days in jail," Otis warns.

Amount of child support money a father is ordered to pay is based on his income, which has been researched by the Friend of the Court office, using such methods as a wage check with the man's employer.

Child support checks from Charlevoix County are sent all over the United States. Otis points out, however, that neither the mother nor father has a right to remove children from jurisdiction of the court without permission.

Otis has a law degree which he earned during the depression, when lawyers were "a dime a dozen". Rather than enter his profession he went into business, and except for liquidating some estates for friends, did not use his training until he took the Friend of the Court assignment about three years ago.

Otis says he has always enjoyed working with children and gives of himself principally for little children "for whom I have all the compassion in the world."

"Many children who don't understand divorce become emotional problems in school. I can play a part here, try to straighten them out. I work with Judge Murphy, case workers and school teachers. Teachers are now cooperative. They haven't always been," he adds.

Some of Otis' "children" run in after school. He tries to impress upon them that as long as three is a divorce, he is part of their lives until they are 18.

Otis is also interested in the care his children receive. Many times he has personally investigated to see if their home is a proper surrounding for a child to be brought up in.

"I don't care how humble, there is no excuse for a filthy house," he says.

Even in his days as a commanding officer in the army, Otis was interested in the welfare of children and their mothers. "I made the married men make out allotments to their families," Otis remembers.

Otis is proud of his office and the work his staff does. "I have no time for people who want to get on county payroll and just be a fixture. Both my girls work hard. One devotes half time to the Prosecutor's office and half time with me. The other is also a conscientious, intelligent woman."

The county Friend of the Court office was established about three years ago when the multiple-county operation in Traverse City was broken up. Otis took over the county office at that time.

"When I came into office there was nothing. I brought a table from home. The state now re-imburses us for stamps, stationery, furniture, typewriters, adding machines, and other necessary equipment. The county has not had to pay for any items needed for office operation. "I have tried constantly since I have been here to make the office self-supporting, and it is self-supporting plus," Otis says proudly.

With Otis, Mrs. Patricia Begrow and Miss Jane Wimmer make up the Friend of the Court office.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Farkas

Depew-Farkas Exchange Vows

Doreen Depew and Eugene Farkas exchanged their wedding vows recently during a Nuptial Mass solemnized at St. Mary's church.

The Rev. R. Dale Magoon officiated at the double ring service in the presence of more than 250 guests on Aug. 17. Arrangements of garden flowers graced the altar for the ceremony. Joel Dyksterhouse was the organist and Mrs. Maurice Cudd the soloist.

The bride was escorted to the altar by Lyle King. For her wedding she chose a gown of sata peau fashioned with delicately raised bodice of Venise lace, a high neckline, lantern sleeves edged with ruffles and a skirt, accented with Venise lace medallions, and a wide ruffle at the hem, terminated in a chapel length train. She carried a bouquet of garden flowers.

Dawn Depew was her sister's maid of honor and Linda Ormsby and Patricia Gray of Summit, N.J., were bridesmaids. Their gowns were of sheer yellow and blue floral print. They wore garden hats with matching bows and carried spray bouquets of garden flowers.

William Farkas, Jr., of Lansing assisted his brother as best man. James Jinsky, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, and Kenneth Langlois of Nunica were groomsmen. Robert Depew, brother of the bride, and Gerry Foehtman seated the guests.

A reception, hosted by the bride's mother, followed at the Charlevoix Rod and Gun Club. Assisting were Betty and Lynn Trost and Mrs. Judy VanderArk.

After a wedding trip to Canada, the couple will return here to live after Aug. 23.

The bride is assistant chef at Leutheuser's and the bridegroom is auditor and desk clerk at the Weathervane Motor Inn.

Wedding guests were present from Missouri, Wisconsin, New Jersey and Michigan.

Mr. and Mrs. Farkas, Sr., hosted the rehearsal dinner at their home Friday evening.

At Special Summer Seminar

Karri Moerland Gets Experience

Karri Moerland of Charlevoix was one of 1,000 youngsters from as far away as West Germany and Brazil who participated during July and August in the Second Annual Summer Youth Program of Michigan Technological University.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Moerland and joined several students in a one-week program that offered them an opportunity to work with various materials ranging from wood and clay to plaster and cloth.

A total of 47 one- and two-week explorations in careers and knowledge were offered. The goal of each is to provide the opportunity to take a close look at potential academic and vocational careers and interests, as well as to have fun.

More than two dozen new explorations were featured, including Advanced Computer Science, Computer Engineering, Advanced Electronics, Meterology, and Criminal Justice Systems. A two-week session will be offered in Jazz Lab Band.

Many one-week explorations were available in the area of art: Block Prints, Silk Screen Prints, Art Fundamentsls, Sketching, Sculpture, Painting, Weaving, Copper Sculpture, Ceramics, Graphic Design, and Architectural Design.

Additional exploration periods accommodated the high interest in such subjects as Mountaineering and Orienteering, Bicycling Biology and Geology, Canoeing Ecology, Isle Royale Ecology, and Computer Science. A two-week exploration in bicycle touring ecology also was added.

Other explorations included a Look at Metallurgical Engineering, a look at Mechanical Engineering, Electronics, Limnology, Forestry, Surveying and Mapping, Mineralogy, Small Engine Repair, Photography, and Field Archeology.

Each exploration provided a relaxed "hands-on" learning situation. Some students are producing a live radio program, testing a lake for pollution, bicycling to biological study sites or using a computer to study an engineering problem, while others are producing a play, designing a bridge, troubleshooting an outboard motor, digging at an archeological site, weaving, making a sculpture from copper, or rappelling down a cliff.

Miles Speaks Sept. 3

Robert Miles, local retired photographer, will show some of his local history pictorial alums to the Charlevoix Historical Society on September 3 at 8 p.m. in the Charlevoix Public Library.

Miles has worked many years in recording the past record of people and events. The public is invited.

Library notes

Now that the dust has settled around the Watergate Scandal, there will be students and scholars who will want to stand back, from the distance of time, and try to evaluate the important papers and documents which have been collected and printed for the benefit of the American people.

Young Gordon Freedman had the good fortune to serve as a staff assistant to the Senate Select Committee on Presidential Activities, more commonly known as the Senate Watergate Committee, and he has presented the Library with a set of the Select Committee's proceedings.

The set consists of neatly-bound paperback copies of the entire proceedings, beginning with the break-in at the Democratic Committee in the Watergate building, the cover-up and other campaign activities.

Testimony gathered in this phase of the investigation is printed, verbatim, as it was televised last summer.

The set is not complete. Books 20-22 are still at the printers, and Books 14-17 have not yet been released. As they become available, Gordon has promised that they will be made available to the Library.

It's very possible that the Charlevoix Library may be the only one in this area to have this valuable, historic material, and we are grateful to Gordon for making it possible. He told us that, although working with the Committee was a fascinating experience, it was a painful and unhappy time historically, but it brought out the firm knowledge that our form of government is sound and that all Americans place a premium on lawful conduct of all citizens.

Still on political lines, we mention "Kissinger", a close-up, brilliant treatment of the most celebrated and controversial diplomat of our time. The two veteran news analysts, Marvin and Bernard Kalb dig into Kissinger's past to trace the history of his early years in a hostile Germany; his emigration, family, education and brilliant career at Harvard; and his progression through four presidencies.

This massie book gives us the complete Kissinger as we have never seen him before. It is a masterful study of a singular personality and of the world events he helped shape.

It has been a long time since the United States sat for a portrait by John Gunther, called Inside U.S.A., and the years have brought so many changes that many Americans today feel themselves strangers in their own country.

In Superpower, Robert Hargreaves has made a strikingly successful attempt to bring America back to Americans, by surveying the extraordinary diversity and vitality of this country in a single volume. Chapter by chapter, from "Cities" to "The Land" from "The Bigness of Business" to "Blue Collar Blues", readers will find themselves nodding in recognition or shaking their heads in astonishment as fact after fact helps them understand what makes the United States the kind of country it is today.

There are 600 pages in this book, and the print is small. We don't recommend reading it by candlelight, but it is absorbing from the beginning to the end.

DAVE AND CHRIS Anderson (right) stand with their Rottweiler, Mr. Murphy who won the Best of Breed at Cobo Hall in Detroit.

New Charlevoix Teacher Also Trains Prize Dogs

One of Charlevoix Public School's newest employees comes to this area with not only a talent for construction, but with dogs.

Hired as a teacher's aid construction, the veteran journeyman owns one of the top 10 obedience Rottwelers in the United States.

His dog, "Mr. Murphy," has accumulated 10 points towards his championship with only five points to go.

Anderson, who begins teaching this fall, has had a four-year apprenticeship, two years experience in rough residential work and five years experience with the Detroit Board of Education.

Besides his experience, the former Detroit resident will bring a completely equipped carpenter's workshop.

Dave's wife, Chris, was a secretary for Union Pacific Railroad for the past seven years and will be looking for a position here.

City Changed Regulations

Builders Should Check New Rules

Builders now constructing houses in Charlevoix will want to make sure they're up with the latest city building restrictions.

Under resolution last week, the council adopted a new ordinance that requires monies from the issuances of building permits to be placed in a special account marked "Building Inspection Fund."

A portion of the permit cost will be allocated to the administration of the new program.

Under the new regulations, building permits will be issued and applied to the owner.

All exterior construction, additions and new buildings amounting to more than $500 will have to be under the supervision of licensed builder or the owner will have to certify he is doing his own work.

After a building permit is issued and before work has started, the city will have to inspect the property to insure it is in compliance with set backs in accordance with the city zoning ordinance.

Building permits will cost as follows.

Cost Values	Additions	New Buildings	Commercial
to $3,000.00	$ 25.00	$ 25.00	$ 35.00
$3,000 to $15,000	35.00	50.00	75.00
$15,000 to $50,000	50.00	75.00	100.00
$50,000 to $75,000	75.00	100.00	150.00
$75,000 tu $99,000	100.00	150.00	200.00

DAVE AND CHRIS Anderson (right) stand with their Rottweiler, Mr. Murphy who won the Best of Breed at Cobo Hall in Detroit.

New Charlevoix Teacher Also Trains Prize Dogs

One of Charlevoix Public School's newest employees comes to this area with not only a talent for construction, but with dogs.

Hired as a teacher's aid construction, the veteran journeyman owns one of the top 10 obedience Rottwelers in the United States.

His dog, "Mr. Murphy," has accumulated 10 points towards his championship with only five points to go.

Anderson, who begins teaching this fall, has had a four-year apprenticeship, two years experience in rough residential work and five years experience with the Detroit Board of Education.

Besides his experience, the former Detroit resident will bring a completely equipped carpenter's workshop.

Dave's wife, Chris, was a secretary for Union Pacific Railroad for the past seven years and will be looking for a position here.

City Changed Regulations

Builders Should Check New Rules

Builders now constructing houses in Charlevoix will want to make sure they're up with the latest city building restrictions.

Under resolution last week, the council adopted a new ordinance that requires monies from the issuances of building permits to be placed in a special account marked "Building Inspection Fund."

A portion of the permit cost will be allocated to the administration of the new program.

Under the new regulations, building permits will be issued and applied to the owner.

All exterior construction, additions and new buildings amounting to more than $500 will have to be under the supervision of licensed builder or the owner will have to certify he is doing his own work.

After a building permit is issued and before work has started, the city will have to inspect the property to insure it is in compliance with set backs in accordance with the city zoning ordinance.

Building permits will cost as follows.

Cost Values	Additions	New Buildings	Commercial
to $3,000.00	$ 25.00	$ 25.00	$ 35.00
$3,000 to $15,000	35.00	50.00	75.00

It Could Be A Good Season

Charlevoix Rayders Prepare For Football

By FRAN MARTIN

The Charlevoix Rayders, who finished the 1973 football season in a tie with Petoskey for second place in Michigan-Huron Shores League standings, will open their 1974 season against a non-league rival, Benzie Central, on Sept. 13.

Meanwhile, Coach Don Carey has his prospective candidates for starting positions out for twice daily practice sessions that thus far have not included body contact sessions.

Conditioning, calisthenics and fundamentals of the sport with Carey and his assistants, Dave Moyer, Norm Probert, Pete Spielas, and Hal Evans giving players individual attention have been the daily routine.

Body contact will come later, Carey said, as he readies his players for the season with the very basics of the game. He went on to say that unless the players are ready physically for the game they cannot do their best.

Also that there is too much chance for injuries if the players are not in top physical condition.

What about the team?

"I'm pleased with them" Carey said, adding that "They have a good attitude, they're working hard. Of course, there are a number of players who aren't out yet because of summer jobs but I expect they will be out shortly."

He went on to say that he had an experienced backfield . . . probably the fastest in the league but that the line was something else.

"We lost a lot of good boys and while some of the players are back there are a lot of positions to be filled.

It all depends on how the materials we have shapes up".

Assignments have not been made at this time, but Mike Streeter and Kevin Martin, both seniors speedsters, are expected to fill the halfback positions; Bob Alger, a junior, the quarterback slot with Frank Muma, a senior, as a possbile candidate for the post with the fullback position still wide open.

Other seniors listed as returnees are Dan Greene, an end or possibly a fullback; Jim Sladek, a guard; Dave Mnrtincheck, an end or guard; Phil Christ, a tackle who is among those not out for practice at this time; Del Wood, a lineman, who also has not been out at this time; Paul Skeel, another lineman who has yet to report; Steve Bearss, a tackle; Mark Hollow and Bob Sandahl, potential ends, who are out for the first time.

Al Grny, a senior tackle, has not reported and at this time the chance that he will is slim because of a knee injury.

Steve Michael, an end, Kirk Lieberman, a tackle, and Ed Russell, a halfback, head the list of juniors who are vieing for positions on the Varsity squad. Others are Jun Marsh, a guard, Doug Smith and Dave Tollas, backs, along with John Green, Randy Williams, Tim Coen, Mike Left, Terry Drew, Dnn Oliver, Steve Otmanowski, Mike Skippergosh, George Baldwin, Mark Hosmer, Al Bergmann, Casey Culbertson, John Cinnnmon, Bryan Brady, Jerry Potter and Terry Wheeler, all up from J-V Ranks.

Carey said approximately 70 players were out for the Varsity and J-V squads. No sophomores have been brought up to the Varsity at this time, he added, but did not rule out the possibility that one or more might be later on in the season.

Tennis
Talk

The majority of the participants in the second annual Charlevoix Open Tennis Tournament last week played without a general knowledge of the basic tactics and strategies usually employed in tennis.

Nobody can become a first-rate player without knowing how to exploit an opponents weaknesses or what shots to try in various situations. Virtually every shot in a match should be hit with a definite purpose in mind.

Most of the matches I watched during the Charlevoix Open developed into pushing contests. Each player was simply hoping the other would make the mistake. Neither player would try to force a mistake or maneuver the opponent into a bad position, setting him up for the kill.

Antyime there is a long rally, you should try to get your opponent out of position by moving him around the court. Hit a few shots down the forehand line, get your opponent in a groove, then stroke a shot down the backhand line.

These shots do not have to be hit with great power, but you must have good control over them. Do not try to hit these shots right on the line, but give yourself a two or three feet margin of error. No player on earth can constantly hit the line on all of his shots.

Once you feel that your opponent is sufficiently out of position, try to take the net away from him. It is extremely difficult to make a passing shot when out of position.

If you find that your opponent has you out of position and he has charged the net, try hitting a lob. This serves two purposes. It is an excellent defensive shot, which, if hit well, will force the net player back to the baseline. Also, a decent lob will give you ample opportunity to get back into good position.

It is curious, but many players feel that a lob is a "sissy" shot. Actually, the lob is a clever shot which will win many points if used properly. It makes an aggressive player think twice about charging to the net.

Lobs can even be effective if both players are hitting from the baseline. A high lob to the backhand is a difficult shot to return because it forces a player to make his next shot from well behind the baseline. This gives one plenty of chance to get to the net.

Moving the ball around the court and hitting lobs are only two important tactics in tennis, which can move an opponent out of position or throw his rhythm off.

Changing the speeds on your shots can also create mistakes. If you hit all your shots the same speed, your opponent can get his best timing. He will subsequently hit better and better shots as his confidence grows.

Once you begin to mix up the velocity as well as the spins of your shots, your opponent will find it much harder to keep his rhythm. And as soon as the rhythm goes, so goes the confidence.

Attack or defend with your shots, and if possible, decide before hitting each shot. Further, have a plan. The good tennis player always hits his shot with the next shot in mind. The only exception to this rule is when he is trying to hit an outright winner.

There is more to tennis than good fundamentals strokes. A player has to develop a "court instinct" if he is to develop to his fullest.
